The Cohasset players fought back against the wind and Norton and scored their first goal of the news season at the 24-minute mark of the first half. Midfielder Jer Stevenson lofted a perfect corner kick toward the penalty kick mark. Forward Kevin McKenna dove for the ball and headed it into the corner of the net tying the score at 1.

Norton fought back with the assistance of the wind and got off a number of direct hardshots at the goal from inside the eighteen yard mark. Goodman rose to the threat, closing the goal-line and stealing their spirit. The remainder of the game was Cohasset's. At the 36-minute mark Redfield passed through a sharp assist to Magner who put the ball in the back of the net. Cohasset's final goal was set up by tri-captain Chris Kondrat's trademark the long throw-in from the sideline to the penalty area. Norton was caught off guard, allowing Jeremiah Stevenson to send the ball to the back of the net.

Still, Bostwick would like to see more goals on a consistent basis. Despite the drubbing of Notre Dame Academy, Cohasset has scored only one other goal this season. The Skippers played to scoreless ties against both Carver and Norwell.

One theory, Bostwick says, is that the offense is a just a little late getting to the ball once the defensive unit moves it down field to the forwards.

"Defensively, they're doing pretty good but offensively they're a couple of seconds behind things," Bostwick said. "They have to be a little more instinctive and aggressive."

Then there is mesh that must be made between the nine seniors and upperclassmen with the younger players. "A couple of the younger players are still getting used to playing with the older players. They basically all want to improve and hopefully that's going to work."

Bostwick has the talent to work with. Sophomore Chloe Chittick has so far proved to be the most versatile player on the squad, position wise.

"She's one of the people that can play offense, defense and link for me," Bostwick said. "Right now she's doing very well no matter where I put her."

Another sophomore, goaltender Gina Rosano, already has four shutouts to her credit, while Katie O'Connor and Faye Menis have provided the defensive protection in front of the young netminder.

Deveney and Norris are "doing well in the middle of the field" according to Bostwick.

Beginning Sept. 29 against undefeated Hanover, the Skippers have a string of three tough games in front of them which should test Cohasset's ability to play with more emotion. Following the match against the Indians, they go up against East Bridgewater and then Scituate.

"East Bridgewater, hopefully we can pull out a win," she said, "and Scituate is going to be a tough one. But we've always played well against Hanover."

Step up to fitness

Step up to fitness this fall at the Cohasset Community Center. Join instructor Mary Doherty for an hour of aerobic step, strength, and flexibility training in a safe, non-competitive class.

Classes are Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 9 to 10 a.m. and Saturday at 8:45 a.m. at the center.

Babysitting is available. Drop-ins welcome. Monthly discounts are offered.

Rec offers indoor golf

The Cohasset and Scituate recreation departments are co-sponsoring fall indoor golf lessons for beginner players, scheduled to begin Thursday evening, Nov. 4, at the Cushing School, Scituate.

Lessons are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly and the fee for the five one-hour sessions is $60 per person.

Should you wish to register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations are accepted on a first call basis.

Local golf professional and head golf pro Mr. Dan Neary will be instructing.

Judo course to begin

Judo classes, taught by Jim Cregg, begin Sept. 25 from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for ages 10 and over. Judo training gives an effective self-defense system. Regular training can improve aerobic capacity, speed, power, strength, agility, and flexibility. Call to register or for more information at 383-0088.

JV sponsors announced

The following businesses donated more than $100 towards the purchase of the new Cohasset JV cheerleaders' uniforms: Saints Diner (Dorchester), Red Lion Inn, Ford Model Management, Stepstone Company, Kelly Graphics and Judy's Candyland.

Other businesses included Hingham Car Wash ($50), Kimball's by the Sea ($25) and Richard Strecker ($10). Many thanks to family and friends who have made it possible to provide the new uniforms.

Major league tryouts this Sunday

Sunday, Oct. 3, tryouts for the Major League Division of the Cohasset Little League will be held at Barnes Field from 10 to 4 p.m. These were rescheduled from Sept. 26 due to inclement weather. All those candidates with birth dates between August 1, 1981 up to and including July 31, 1985 are eligible to try out for a position on a major league team.

Those whose surnames begin with the letters A-H should report to the tryouts at 1 p.m. Those whose surnames begin with the letters I-Q should report at 2 p.m. Those whose surnames begin with the letters R-Z should report at 3 p.m.

elimination of artificial turf. (Utley broke his neck when his head was slammed into Pontiac Stadium's turf during a pass block. It is not certain if his neck would have broken on grass. Artificial turf is basically, cement with a rug over it.)

And a rule similar to hockey's charging penalty needs to be instituted. In hockey, it's against the rules to skate all the way across the ice at full speed and check someone. Steps are need to somehow reduce the force equals mass times velocity equation in football. Since you can't outlaw people from growing to their full potential (steroids are illegal) changes are needed to reduce velocity.

These changes would help immensely and would trickle down to the high school and youth sports level.

Football is not war and casualties should not be accepted as part of the game.

Teachers keep busy early release day

Sept. 23 was the first early release day of the school year for Cohasset schools. When the children go home, what do the teachers do?

The staff at the Jr./Sr. high school had three programs to participate in. With the help of a PSO grant, Anne Porter, guidance counselor, and 20 teachers were involved in a Project Adventure training program. Two staff members of Project Adventure, a self esteem building program for students, spent the afternoon demonstrating their curriculum.

Other staff at the high school watched a video called "F.A.T C.I.T.Y" This movie suggests several methods for use teaching special needs students in the classroom. A discussion followed. The math and science teachers used the time to become more familiar with the new math lab and a demonstration of available software was given by Jane Auster, computer room teacher aide.

The Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood teachers conducted grade level meetings. At these meetings, the teachers meet with teachers from other grade levels. For example, third grade teachers met with the fourth grade teachers to discuss the learning styles of the students they had last year. Then, they met with the second grade staff to learn more about the students they have this year. These communication meetings are very important to help students get off to a good start.

Commended students

Ms. Mary Ellen Gallagher, principal of Cohasset High School, announced that Brian D. Duffy, Bonnie L. Krueger, Anne G. Lindgren and Michael A. Riley have been named Commended Students in the 1994 National Merit Scholarship Program. A Letter of Commendation from National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), which conducts the program, will be presented by the school to these outstanding seniors.

About 35,000 commended students throughout the nation are being honored for their outstanding performance on the 1992 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, which was the route of entry to the 1994 Merit Program. Commended students have shown exceptional academic promise by placing among the top five percent of more than one million program entrants.

Discipline is topic

The Massachusetts School Psychologists Association, with about 450 members, represents the professional concerns of school psychologists in the state.

Frank Fitzgerald, school adjustment counselor for the Cohasset elementary schools, was a presenter for the Massachusetts Teachers Association conference held at Williams College, Williamstown, MA.

For the panel discussion, "Bringing Parents into the Schools: School Psychologists Facilitating Parent School Partnerships," Fitzgerald showed extracts of Lee Cantor's "Assertive Discipline" curriculum, with a video introduction.

PSO selling gift wrap

The Cohasset PSO is sponsoring a sale of Sally Foster's collection of all occasion and holiday gift wrap and accessories. These products use recycled paper and come in economy-size rolls.

Brochures and order forms are available at the schools. For information call Jan Weisenfeld at 383-0466 or Ellen Sanchez at 383-6911.

PSO plans mystery dinner

Gather up your wits and spirits and set aside Nov. 6 for an evening of murder and mystery. This year's annual PSO fund-raiser will be a "Murder Mystery Dinner" at the Cohasset Golf Club. It will include dinner, delightful company and many funny and frightful surprises.

Be sure to remember your checkbook because you won't want to miss out on the silent auction with many special items. All proceeds go to the PSO.

Tickets (advanced sales only) are $34 per person and may be purchased by calling Andrea

Dick Contino on the accordion and Anna Maria Alberghetti, Italian star vocalist, will perform. Lunch will be a choice of filet of sole (crabmeat stuffing) or roast turkey with sage stuffing. $28. Call Libby Pompeo at 383-0711.

Wednesday, Nov. 10: Tour of Adams National Historic Site. Visit the birthplace of John and John Quincy Adams, followed by the Old House Tour. Call the COA office at 383-9112.

Saturday, Nov. 27: "The Nutcracker" ballet at the Wang Center, 2 p.m. Call the COA office, 383-9112.

Thursday, Dec. 2: Plymouth Plantation, Fourth Annual Festival of Trees, grand buffet luncheon at Daniel Webster Inn in Sandwich which will be beautifully decorated for the holiday season. Submit your favorite holiday recipe with your payment; copies will be exchanged during lunch. Cost $33 payable to Groups, Inc. by Nov. 12. No refunds if canceled within last three days.

Saturday, Dec. 18: Matinee performance at Symphony Hall of Xmas Pops, a repeat of a specially memorable event, now in its fourth year. Details later.

Wednesday, Dec. 29: 2 p.m. matinee performance of "A Christmas Carol" at the Huntington Theater Company. Cost: seats available at $24 plus cost of bus. All the joys and wonder of the holiday returns watching Charles Dickens' play.

Tuesday, April 12, 1994: Hawaii trip, $1,999, includes air flight to San Diego, cruise from Mexico to Hawaii. Two days and nights in Honolulu. Call Libby Pompeo at 383-0711.

'Fast Figuring' exhibit slated

Oct. 7 through Nov. 17, the Artist's Son Gallery presents "Fast Figuring: Gestural Drawings by Scott Ketchan and Clement Micarelli." This show is a unique collaboration between two established artists from the South Shore who share a mutual respect. A former student and teacher, Ketchan and Micarelli agreed upon three female models for individual studio sittings to produce a collection of spontaneous, gestural drawings. A selection of these works will hang intermingled in the gallery space, providing a rare opportunity to compare and contrast two talented approaches to drawing the female nude figure in compelling poses.

Ketchan and Micarelli hired models who varied in physique and personality for three hour studio sittings. These sessions were split into short and long poses, allowing from two to twenty minutes for each artist to make his drawing. Successful in this intent, the drawings reflect a spectrum of female poses, captured on paper in imaginative and respectful stylistic forms. The images are not illustrative of fashion styles, but suggest the nuances of Ketchan's and Micarelli's individual approaches to this oldest and most venerated subject of the visual arts: the female figure.

Ketcham, emerging as a respected figurative, landscape and still life artist working in different media, produced drawings of charcoal, ink and colored chalk, highlighted by eraser markings, on paper. These works demonstrate an energy and rhythm suggesting louder and more dramatic movement.

A charcoal and ink on paper by artist Scott Ketcham whose work is being shown at the Artist's Son Gallery in the Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza.

Micarelli is a well-known South Shore art figure. He has taught at the Rhode Island School of Design, South Shore Art Center, and The North River Arts Society. For "Fast Figuring," Micarelli has produced primarily pastels and charcoal on paper he has toned in advance. The images are extremely poetic and evocative of quieter moments.

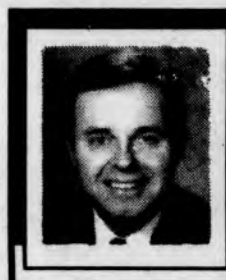
The opening reception for the exhibit is Oct. 8, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. The artists will give a brief gallery talk on this unique collaboration. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information call (617) 383-1841.

Festival set

The South Shore Art Center is planning its 39th art festival which will be held June 17-19, 1994. The festival will feature the art center's exhibitions, artisans marketplace and art demonstrations; the Open Stage for the Performing Arts, the town's Harborfest and the Second Congregational Church's strawberry festival.

The planners are recruiting new volunteers.

Anyone interested in helping may call the art center at 383-9548 between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesday - Saturday.



REAL ESTATE UPDATE

ROLLOVER VS EXCLUSION

QUESTION: What is the difference between a rollover and the $125,000 profit exclusion?

ANSWER: The rollover is a means of de. ; payment of any capital gains tax if you sell your principal residence and buy another (within two years) for more money. There is no limit on the number of times you can use this deferment

If you are over 55, you can exclude up to $125,000 in taxable profit from the sale of your principal residence – whether or not you buy another home. The home must have been your principal residence for at least three of the five years preceding the sale. This can be used only once in a lifetime.

Lincoln is first local fire chief in a decade

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Dressed in a dark-blue, pin-striped suit rather than his usual white uniform shirt and Navy blue trousers — Roger W. Lincoln looked the part of a businessman rather than a firefighter Monday evening.

The business suit, however, was fitting choice for the occasion because Lincoln —who joined the Cohasset Fire Department in 1969 — was about to be interviewed for a new job.

Lincoln was the sole finalist for position of the town's new fire chief.

The 46-year-old former captain has been serving as acting chief since chief John R. Nadeau's departure last summer.

It was a role the Cohasset resident had played before. Lincoln served a 10-month stint as acting fire chief in 1982, filling in

Emergency life-support service expanded

By Sheila Pietrzak

Heart attack. Stroke. Drowning. Third degree burns. Auto accident. All of these crises put patients in critical condition where minutes of waiting for treatment could mean the difference between life and death.

When situations like these arise, victims need Advanced Life Support (ALS) — comparable to emergency room care — to give them a better chance of survival when they finally reach the hospital.

The South Shore Hospital in Weymouth doubled its ALS paramedic services this month when it added a second paramedic truck and eight additional paramedics to staff it.

"Most of the services that a patient would normally receive when they got to the emergency room are now brought to

Cohasseters ponder possibilities for Hagerty site

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The sun broke through the clouds Sunday afternoon just in time for the open house at the Hagerty Property on Parker Avenue in the harbor.

The Hagerty committee sponsored the event hoping that townspeople would provide input into possible options for future use of the two-acre parcel.

According to member Russ Bonetti they got their wish.

"More people came than we thought would," he said about the about 50 residents who showed up. Bonetti added that "everyone put in their two cents worth."

Visitors were treated to a tour of the showroom — which is housed in an old merchant's house moved from the Rowe's Wharf area in Boston in the early 1900's — and the grounds which contain several old metal buildings.

Cohasset Colonials, a furniture kit company which has been at the site for half a century, is relocating to Hingham Nov. 1.

The company was previously owned by the late Francis Hagerty and his wife, Mary, who sold the business several years ago. The present owner decided to move the business away from the water to a location more suitable to wood.

Town meeting voters gave the okay last March for the town to purchase the site from Hagerty for $450,000. A resident, who requests anonymity, donated $50,000 toward the purchase and the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a private non-profit group, has also donated $50,000.

Several artist's renderings of plot plans with features like additional parking, a turnaround, picnic tables, and wooden walkway from Government Island provided fodder for ideas during Sunday's open house. The town's public boat ramp is located at the end of Parker Avenue.

At the site, a historic boathouse with post-and-beam construction — used by the assistant lighthouse keepers — may be dismantled and returned to its original home on Government Island.

Committee Chairman Al Moore said the next step for the town is to tear down the hodgepodge of metal

Selectmen okay single tax rate

The owner of the average Cohasset home — which is valued at $286,000 — will have a tax bill of $3,990 in fiscal year 1994, an increase of about $135 over last year, assessors say.

In FY'92 the average home in town was assessed at $300,000 with a tax bill of $3,600. In FY'93, which ended June 30, that same home was assessed at $286,000 with taxes of $3,855.

For FY'94, the average value is $286,400, assessors said. The average value of a commercial property is $507,800 down from $523,000 last year. However, the annual tax bill for the 'average' commercial property rises about $35 to $7,073.65.

The bill is figured with an estimated new annual tax rate of $13.93 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Selectmen approved the single tax rate at a public hearing this week. The rate represents an increase of 47 cents per $1,000 over the previous year.

"Property values stayed about the same and the budget went up so that accounts for the increase in tax rate," Assistant Assessor/Appraiser Joseph DiVito Jr. said.

Less than 10 percent of the town's valuation is commercial/industrial/personal property (CIP), so assessors recommended the town stick with a single tax rate for both residential and commercial property.

Cohasset has always had a single tax rate, DiVito said. Towns with split rates (different ones for residential and commercial) are usually more than 15 percent commercially/industrially zoned," he said.

Cohasset's week

Correction is noted

A brief item in the Cohasset's Week section in last week's edition should have said that Michael E. Tetreault, 171 S. Main St., was appointed to the personnel board for a one-year term to replace Barbara Moore who recently stepped down.
Due to a reporting error, the news item incorrectly stated that Jacquelyn McGuire was appointed to the position.

Update on police recruits

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said new police recruit Jeffrey Treanor is in the 14th week of the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Academy in Plymouth.

"He is doing extremely well and is currently in the top five of his class of 45 students," Noonan said. Treanor is expected to graduate this month and will be certified in breathalyzer operation, radar operation, field sobriety testing, First Responder (First Aid), CPR, defensive driving, and use of firearms.

Noonan said the department's other new recruit Richard G. Abbadessa completed all his pre-screening requirements and started his academy training in Foxboro Oct. 4. Abbadessa will graduate in February.

Shown are some of the hodgepodge of metal manufacturing buildings that will be taken down and removed from the Hagerty property off Parker Ave. Taxpayers authorized the town to borrow money to purchase the site at the annual town meeting last spring.

Police chief responds

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan took exception to a recent article in Boston Magazine which said living in Cohasset today, citizens are twice as likely to have their homes broken into than ten years ago.

In a recent status report to selectmen, Noonan said the figures used were somewhat distorted.

"It is my personal opinion that Cohasset is one of the safest, if not the safest, community to live in on the South Shore.

"I back that statement up with department records that indicate that to date, in 1993 Cohasset had only 12 breaking-and-enterings reported to this department. Of those six were residences, two of which were only reported attempts," he said.

"The total value of the property stolen in those breaks was $2,470. The other six breaks reported were businesses and the total dollar value reported stolen was only $1,640," he said.

"To me, it would be nice to live in a town where there were no breaks at all, but in our society I think that is highly unlikely," he said. "I also looked at the surrounding towns. For the first nine months of this year, Hingham has reported 88 breaking-and-enterings in their town while Scituate has reported 47."

Harbor floats coming

Cohasset Harbormaster Shawn Kelly warns that citizens must take their boats off the Margin St. and Lawrence Wharf floats by Oct. 15.

There will be a $25 fine for any owner whose boat the harbormaster has to pull out, Kelly said.

Fishing ok sought

Regional fishing enthusiasts will ask the town for permission to fish from Cohasset shores.

In a letter to selectmen, Ed Nowak, regional editor of The Fisherman asks to use Cohasset beach-front parking lots and beaches before and after the summer bathing season for shore-side fishing.

"The abundance of striped bass off your coastal waters caused early Cohasset settlers to name a beach in Cohasset Cove, Bassing Beach," he wrote. "Bassing declined in later years: however, through good fisheries management, striped bass have returned off your beaches in catchable numbers. Parking and beach regulations have discouraged access to these rejuvenated fishing beaches."

Nowak said the "neighborly town" of Scituate has arranged for visiting anglers, who show fishing rods and reels or active membership cards in a recognized fishing club, to purchase a permit sticker for $5 at the police station. The permit, which is valid from Sept. 6 through June 30, will allow parking in designated beach lots where anglers can walk to the beach.

Nowak said he hopes that Cohasset will accept these "parking-to-fish" permits as valid. He points out the main purpose of the permits is to prevent irresponsible persons who do not plan to fish the beach from gaining access to it.

Selectmen will meet with Nowak and Jack Sheppard, director of the Public Access Board of the Massachusetts Department of Fisheries, Wildlife, and Environmental Law Enforcement at 8 p.m., Oct. 18 at town hall.

Vo-Tech invite sent

South Shore Vocational Technical High School invited Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby to a meeting on the Education Reform Act as it pertains to collective bargaining, at 7:30 p.m., Oct. 14 at the school's campus in Hanover.

Superintendent-Director James J. Hager noted that while the Dept. of Education has been charged with promulgating the necessary regulations, no regulations have been issued.

Hager said according to his interpretation of the law, all eight selectmen chairman (of the eight towns that comprise the SSVT district) meet to choose the one of their number who will represent them. The person selected by the eight chairmen will represent them and cast one vote in matters of collective bargaining.

"Therefore, when the eight members of the South Shore Regional School District Committee vote on a collective bargaining matter, one additional vote will be cast by your chosen representative, making nine the total number of votes able to be cast in collective bargaining matter," Hager said.

Summer playground program drew 330 kids

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The Summer Playground program has recently completed one of its most successful seasons. According to Ted Carroll Jr., director for the 1993 season, the program enjoyed strong enrollment and improved attitudes among its many participants.

In his recent report to the Recreation Commission, Carroll stated that the total enrollment for the 1993 season was 330 children. The largest two groups within the total program were the five- to seven-year olds and the eight- to 10-year olds.

The large enrollment helped to generate $35,466.50.

In addition to the registration fee which was charged this year, parents were also required to pay an activity fee in the amount of $25 per child to help pay for in-house entertainment, special programming, camp T-shirts and transportation charges.

In addition to the funds generated through the activity fee, the program received donations from such local businesses and clubs as the Rotary Club, Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Heights, Good Sport, Goodwin Graphics, Cohasset Savings Bank, Rockland Trust Company, BayBanks and the Bank of Boston.

According to Carroll, the commission decided to split up the 1993 playground program into two sites in an effort to improve the quality of the program. This year, the programs for the three- and four-year olds, five- to seven-year olds and the half-day five-year-olds was located at the Osgood School. The eight- to 12-year old program was moved to the Deer Hill School. Carroll said that the move created an improved attitude for all children, as the eight- to 12-year-olds enjoyed a sense of autonomy. The move also drastically cut the number of injuries to just 10 percent of last year's totals. Carroll attributes much of the improvement to the separation of the older, larger children from the younger children.

Safety was also improved this season through the use of three two-way radios. This improved communication between staff members helped the staff in keeping all children accounted for. The commission is presently considering the purchase of two additional radios to further improve upon communications.

Carroll also discussed many of the program's highlights from 1993. Among those was a visit from comedian Howie Mandell. The children were also able to learn a great deal about safety thanks to the efforts of various area police departments which conducted a number of safety days. Other highlights included Parents' Night and Papa Gino's Night.

The commission discussed a number of ideas for improving the already successful program for the coming year. Some ideas discussed included the implementation of more stringent age cutoffs, additional staff training, extended hours, greater publicity for the program, making the activity fee non-refundable and creating an arts and crafts staff position. According to Carroll, the arts and crafts component of this year's program was run through the volunteer efforts of Mrs. McArthur. Finally, the commission is considering moving the program's final day cookout to a Saturday so that more parents and family members can attend.

Carroll recommended to the commission that Paulina McDonald, site coordinator for the half-day five-year-olds program this summer, be appointed as the program director for 1994. Carroll praised McDonald's efforts in running the half-day program, as well as the efforts of all site coordinators, staff members and volunteers.

Recreation director John Worley and commission members praised Carroll's efforts in making the 1993 program such a successful one.

cohasset's week

Protulis wins award

Governor William Weld recognized Cohasset firefighter Robert Protulis with a community service commendation at the Annual Firefighter of the Year Awards held at Gardner Auditorium in the State House.

Protulis started a database with medical information on Cohasset residents, many of them seniors, who may need Emergency services.

Residents filled out a form and returned it to Protulis, who noted allergies, medications and other special conditions of residents.

Emergency medical technicians (EMTs) would have the information available to them immediately in the event of an emergency.

Weld signed a citation that was presented by Lt. Governor Argeo Paul Cellucci and Massachusetts Department of Public Safety Secretary Thomas Rapone.

The Oct. 4 awards ceremony was emceed by Hull Fire Chief Nick Russo.

First Night use okayed

The Community Center of Cohasset plans to hold Celebrate '94 from 4:30 to 11 p.m. Dec. 31 and will need the use of town hall, the common, Constitution Park, and the Osgood School parking lot for the festivities. The center also asked for the closing of certain roads for the popular event.

Selectmen gave the plans their support Monday noting that Celebrate '93 was a big success.

"I'm thrilled to hear they're going to do this again," Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said.

Anne Porter

Name: Anne Porter

Occupation: Guidance Counselor at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High.

Best day of your life: The day I got married — March 23, 1968.

Most embarrassing moment: I was working in Greece as a guidance counselor for the American School at the time. I was invited to an open house featuring a talk by the visiting president of Tufts University and thought I went at the appropriate time. But when I arrived the host told me the president had just finished his speech.

Goal: To help in fostering a real sense of community at Cohasset High School and to work toward that goal.

Favorite season: I love the fall — the cool, crisp evenings and the sunny days — as long as my allergies aren't acting up.

Best vacation: The two years I loved in Greece are filled with memorable vacations.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Pet Peeve: People who aren't courteous and won't say a simple thank you.

Favorite book: "Bridges of Madison County" by Robert James Waller.

Favorite movie: "The Fugitive."

Biggest worry: That there will an opportunity for the younger generation to at least equal the standard of living of their parents.

Favorite place: Santorini Island, Greece and Cape Cod.

Favorite junk-food: Chocolate chip cookies with lots of nuts.

Person you would most like to meet: Hillary Clinton.

Come to a breast health screening Oct. 20.

Although breast cancer strikes one in nine women, it's also true that more than one million American women have battled breast cancer and won. Breast cancer is one of the most curable forms of cancer when detected early enough.

The keys to early detection are a professional breast exam, monthly self breast exams, and mammography. You can get all three on Wednesday, Oct. 20, when South Shore Hospital offers a breast health screening that will include a breast exam, instruction on how to perform a self breast exam, and, if recommended, mammography. The screening will be from 4-8 p.m. in the hospital's ambulatory care unit. Refreshments will be served.

Appointments are required and may be made by calling (617) 340-8239 after Wednesday, Oct. 6.

Lincoln is first local fire chief in a decade

after the retirement of the town's last permanent fire chief, Charles Piepenbrink.

Lincoln applied for the post in 1982 and was offered the position but declined.

"There was a lack of security because the position had always been in civil service. Before Chief Piepenbrink retired, town meeting took the fire chief's post out of civil service," Lincoln explained in a telephone interview.

At the time, Lincoln's two sons were about to enter high school and he didn't think the three-year contract provided enough security.

"After three years into the job, I didn't want to take the chance of not being reappointed so I decided to return to my civil service rank of captain," he recalled.

Since that time, the town hired three chiefs who were all from out-of-town or out-of-state: Martin Dooley, Daniel Brock, and Nadeau.

The fire chief search subcommittee — to find Nadeau's replacement — consisted of selectmen Jane O. Goedecke and Merle S. Brown, who narrowed the field of about 35 applicants down to five.

They said none of the other finalists were of the same caliber as Lincoln, who was unanimously appointed by the four selectmen present Monday. Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle was on vacation.

"No other candidates were close enough to the winning candidate to make it worth selectmen's time and the candidates' time," Goedecke said. "The subcommittee felt it was an easy decision and recommended the board interview just one."

Although during the interview before selectmen, the Brewster Road resident said being selected fulfilled a long-time goal, he filled the acting post reluctantly.

In a telephone interview he explained that last summer he was asked three times to take the job of acting chief and declined twice.

But after finally agreeing to step in and spending time in the job — Lincoln decided to apply for the regular post.

"For lack of a better word it's a better gamble now (that my kids are grown), and having served captain since 1976, I though it was time to make the move," he said.

Lincoln said keeping the fire department fiscally healthy will be a challenge.

"Just staying in business and maintaining the level of protection as in the past is the biggest challenge."

Lincoln, who is a 1965 Cohasset High School graduate, holds an associate degree in fire science from Massasoit Community College.

He said having the chief in town "a lot of the time" will help in monitoring the sick leave used by the department. Last year sick time in the department reached an average high of about 70 hours a week.

"There's a vehicle in the contract to monitor sick leave and I'll use it if necessary," Lincoln said.

Maintaining a high profile for the department is also a priority for the new chief.

"Taking advantage of every opportunity to go out and meet people and let them see us on the street is important," Lincoln said.

Although he says regionalization is inevitable, Lincoln sees costs as a possible deterrent to anything happening soon.

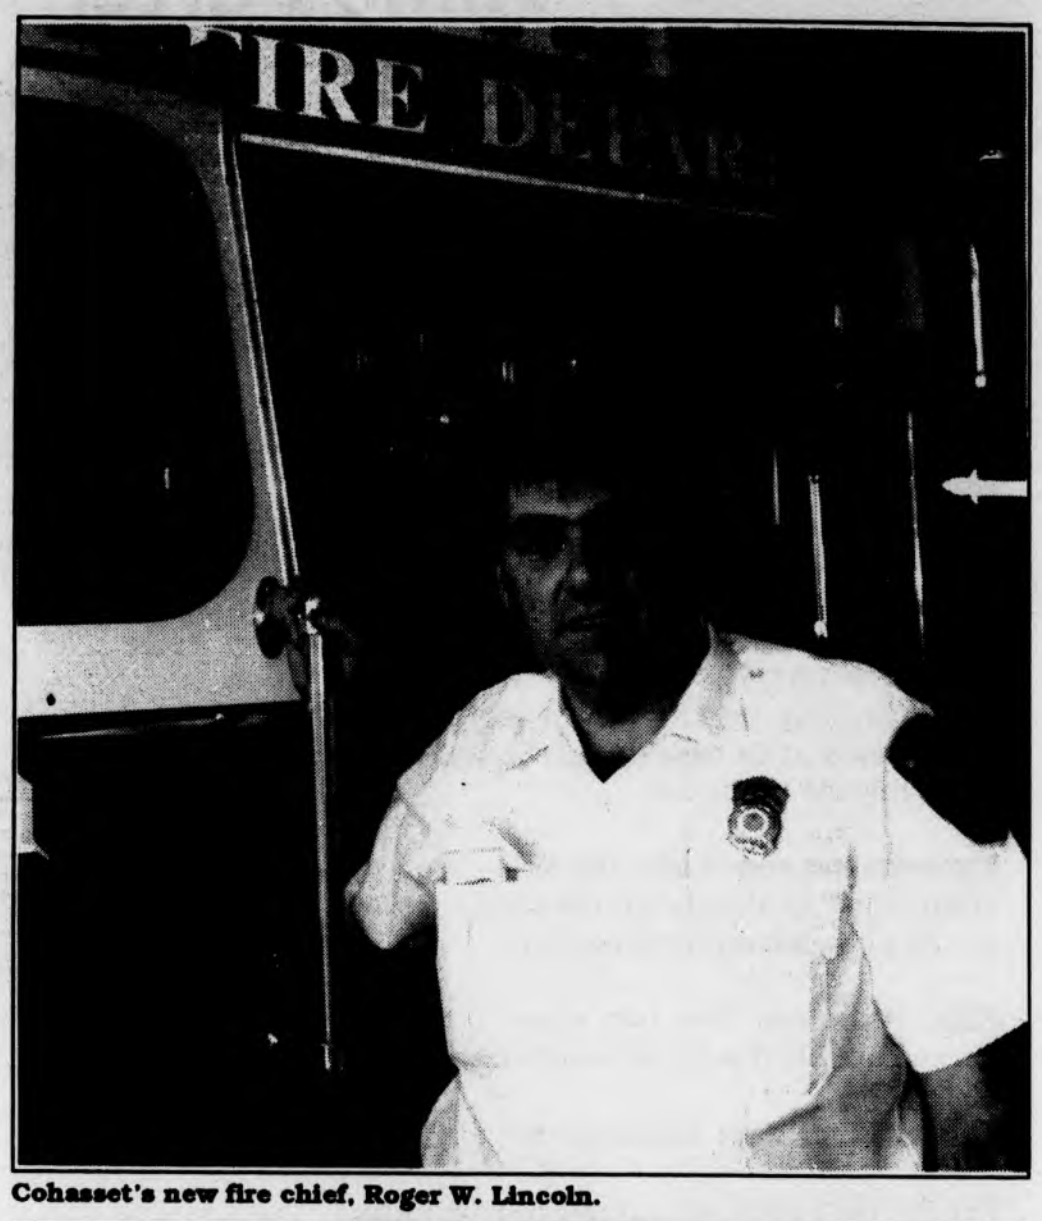
"I do see start-up costs," he said. "It's difficult to improve something without spending money.

"But twenty-to-25 years down the line we could be forced into it because of money problems," he said.

Lincoln says call firefighters can play a valuable role in the department.

"I think their an important part of our department but recruitment over the years has been difficult because of the turn over," he explained.

"We are a bedroom community and it's hard to find people to get up at 3 a.m. to go to a fire. They have important jobs to go to in the morning," Lincoln said. The call force currently numbers 22, he said.



Cohasset's new fire chief, Roger W. Lincoln.

As chief, Lincoln plans to be accessible and maintain "an open-door policy," he said.

Lincoln plans to increase training within the department so every member can do all types of inspections to cut down on waiting time for the service.

Lincoln is still technically the acting chief while his three-year contract and salary are negotiated and he has a physical exam, Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon said. Lincoln will be officially sworn in at a later date.

Selectmen had looked at possibly sharing a the fire chief's position with Scituate. Monday, the board said those talks fell through when Scituate Chief James Breen and town officials declined interest in the merger.

Emergency life-support service expanded

them," said hospital spokesman Julie O'Brien.

However, ALS does not make an emergency medical technician's (EMT) job easier.

"The EMT is the first on the scene with the patient," said Cohasset's new fire chief Roger Lincoln. Local EMTs also ride with the patient to the hospital. "We continue to use our ambulance."

When ALS started at South Shore Hospital last June, Lincoln said he was surprised to see how much local service was available to town.

"They seem to be available quite a bit of the time. They respond and arrive in time to give assistance or take over" for EMTs, Lincoln said.

ALS is called to the scene to help municipal ambulance service in severe cases. EMTs, who have 110 hours of training, offer primary first aid; usually within five minutes.

Paramedics, called by local EMTs, arrive in a specially equipped Chevrolet Blazer within five to 15 minutes. They treat victims on-site, then ride to the hospital alongside the patient in the ambulance. The Blazer is not equipped for transport.

Because they have more than 2,100 training hours, paramedics are qualified to administer some drugs, read EKG's (electrocardiogram) and treat young children.

With a second vehicle, all South Shore towns will have a backup ALS truck available, as long as it is not needed in its network base.

In the past, the sole ALS vehicle answered emergency calls on a first-come, first-served basis.

"It can only help us," said Lincoln of the expansion. "It can only make the vehicles more available on the South Shore."

The town of Hanson was the first to ask for the truck to its community. In order to qualify for the free service, the town needed to demonstrate a need and form a network with four area towns, O'Brien said.

Hanson joined Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater and Halifax to acquire the free service.

ALS now serves 16 communities. The first ALS served Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman.

Salaries, supplies and equipment and the response costs total $700,000 per year, at $350,000 per vehicle, said O'Brien.

There is no way to estimate the costs of each trip, O'Brien said, because services and insurance payments vary case to case.

But since the service is provided free to towns, ALS relies on insurance reimbursements and fundraising efforts. This year, the hospital has sponsored two golf tournaments, a dinner-dance benefit, a direct mail campaign and an employee drive to augment the ALS fund.

Best Chevrolet, of Hingham, donated both vehicles to the Hospital for the service.

Since its inception, ALS has responded to more than 1,400 incidents, O'Brien said.

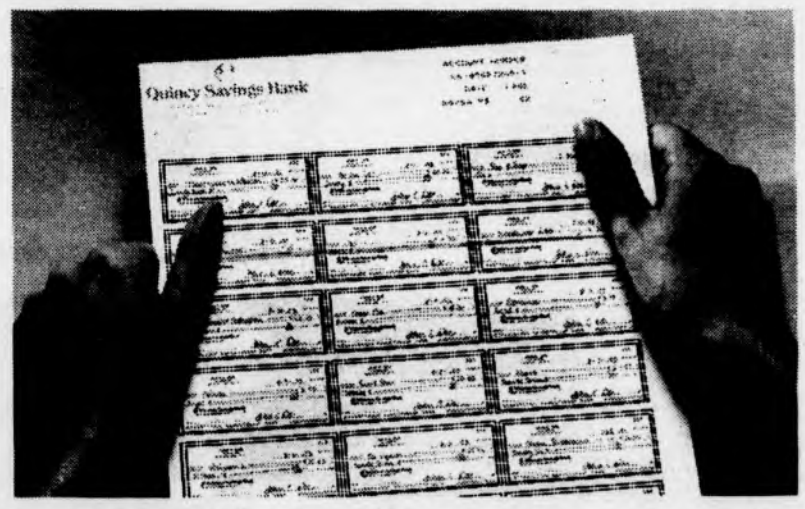
"Honey, they shrunk the checks!"

Introducing Check/Mate, an exciting, new option that makes balancing your checking account a snap!



This could be big. Real big!

When you select Quincy Savings Bank's Check/Mate option with any of our regular or money market checking accounts, say goodbye to mountains of canceled checks. Because with Check/Mate, you'll be able to see all your checks in one quick glance.

Check/Mate provides you with pages of reduced, detailed "photos" of each check you've written during the statement period. Up to 18 canceled check fronts per page, already arranged by number.

It's so simple. No more sorting checks by number. No more flipping back and forth between the checks and your statement. No more bulky check storage and filing.

And Check/Mate serves as proof of payment. But if you ever need to have a copy of the front and back of a check, call the customer service number on the front of your statement and we'll rush you a copy.

Check/Mate is an option with every Quincy Savings personal checking or money market account. If you'd like to try it, visit your local branch and ask for a customer service representative.

Check/Mate . . . a big idea that shrinks the hassles of balancing your checking account.

❑ Exciting news this week, as Karen Pompeo is getting ready to marry the love of her life, David Burke. They are a darling couple, full of life and love, and we want to wish them every happiness as they tie the knot this Saturday.

Here's to a long and happy life, and be sure to fill us in on all of the festivities!

❑ The Beechwood Congregational Church called with some great news this week. The Harvest Supper is Oct. 20.

It will be the church's famous ham dinner, and there will also be an auction of fall items. The yummy dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m., the cost is $5.99 for adults and $3 for children.

Call church members for tickets and/or more information ... just be sure to go, you'll be glad you did.

❑ The Cohasset food Pantry sent a list of items that they consider to be in great need.

Included are canned fruit, sugar, ketchup, crackers, real fruit juice, spaghetti sauce, snack-food, peanut butter and coffee.

Do what you can, it will make you feel great!

❑ Happy birthday greetings go to Sue Fone, one of the finest ladies you will ever meet! Her big day is tomorrow (Oct. 8), he sure you extend birthday greetings when you see her!!

❑ Don't forget to watch Pierson-to-Person this week. Wig will have Ken Coleman as his guest. Ken was heard last week on the sports channel and he has so many wonderful stories and experiences to relate!! Plus, that magical voice of his! All sports enthusiasts, stay tuned! (It is on channel 3 from 8 to 9 p.m.)

❑ James Hills recently completed a program at the Institute for Television, Film and Radio Production (ITRP) held this summer at Boston University's College of Communication. James is the son of David and Mary Hills and a junior at CHS.

ITRP is an intensive five-week program for high school students interested in careers in television, film, broadcast journalism, and radio production and programming. The program offers hands-on workshop instruction in writing, editing, producing, directing, camera operation, sound, programming and other aspects of the broadcast industry. Students are instructed by senior faculty from the college of communication.

Keep up the good work, Danielle!

❑ Jason Cameron, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Cameron, spent his spring 1993 semester studying in Switzerland through the Saint Michael's College study abroad program. Jason is a senior business administration major at Saint Michael's College, located in Colchester, VT. He lived in the city of Leysin and attended the American College of Switzerland, a business-oriented school located in Leysin in the middle of the Swiss Alps. He studied French, philosophy and environmental science.

In addition to his academic studies, Jason said that he learned a great deal about other cultures and countries from his classmates, who came form 43 different nations. He also had the opportunity to ski the Alps and travel throughout Western Europe!!

Oh to be young again and be able to have the opportunities that these lucky students have ... what an experience!

❑ Kathleen Cleary, O.D. and Stephen Sinopoli are sure happy these days. They are the brand new parents of Monica Ann, born Sept. 18 at South Shore Hospital. She was born at 5:50 a.m. and weighed 7 lbs. 15 ozs.

Monica Ann's maternal grandparents are James and Lois Cleary of Elmira, NY. Her paternal grandmother is Elizabeth Sinopoli.

You can bet that they are all as proud as punch, and that Monica Ann will get lots of loving!! Let's hope that we see them all strolling "around town" real soon!

❑ Belated birthday greetings go to Jeanne McAuliffe this week. Jeanne's birthday was Sept. 19, and we hope it was a happy one for one happy, fine lady. And, here's hoping we hear from Jeanne all about her recent vacation in sunny California.

❑ Thirty-three years ago the first edition of the Naval Institute's Sea Power appeared, co- authored by U.S. Naval Academy's history professors and under the guidance of the late Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, USN. It has just been printed in Chinese!

One of the authors is Professor Ellery Clark, Jr. of Cohasset fame. The book is internationally famous and a text at the Naval Academy and ROTC units!!

Yet another side of Mr. Clark, really quite a man indeed!!

❑ Be sure to go the the Artist's Son Gallery between now and Nov. 17, you will be able to see Cohasset's own Scott Ketcham and his Fast Figuring: Gestural Drawings, along with Clement Micarelli. A selection of their works will hang intermingled in the gallery space, providing a rare opportunity to compare and contrast two talented approaches to drawing the female nude figure in compelling poses.

The opening reception for the exhibit is Oct. 8, from 6 to 8:30 p.m., gallery hours are Monday to Friday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more info call 383-1841.

Carlson/Maurillo

Janet Martin Carlson, daughter of Paul A. and the late Jane deB. Carlson, formerly of Cohasset, married Christopher H. Maurillo, son of Alexander and Eleanor Maurillo of Brooklyn Heights, NY on Saturday, Sept. 11 at Union Chapel in the Grove, Shelter Island, NY. Rev. Dr. Richard Valantasis, uncle of the bride, officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The bride's sister, Julia H. Kelley of Scituate was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Janet F. Carlson of St. Louis, Mo., Carolyn L. Carlson of Minneapolis, Minn. and Christina M. Maurillo of New York, NY.

John S. Skok of New York, NY served as best man. Alexander E. Maurillo and Dominick F. Maurillo, both of New York, NY and Michael E. Maurillo of California, were ushers.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and William Smith College in Geneva, NY. She works at Little, Brown Co. in St. Louis, Mo.

The bridegroom graduated from Fordham Prep in New York, NY and Hobart College in Geneva, NY. He works for May Merchandising Company in St. Louis, Mo.

After a wedding trip to Block Island, the couple is living in St. Louis, Mo.

Walsh/Skordas

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Walsh Jr., of Rustic Dr., announce the engagement of their daughter, Melanie Lynn, to Richard T. Skordas of Dublin, California. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Skordas of Coulee Dam, Washington.

After graduating from Cohasset High School, Miss Walsh earned a BA degree from Boston University and is working for her MBA at California State University. She works as a regional sales coordinator for W.R. Grace and Co. in Pleasanton, Calif.

Mr. Skordas received a BS in marketing and economics from Eastern Washington University, Cheney, Wash. He is finance manager at Golden Gate Auto Auction in Fremont, Calif.

A September 1994 wedding is planned in Cohasset.

Lottery fever: an Rx

A group of 18 local ministers rained on the state Lottery Commission's debut of its new "Keno" game last week.

"The Lottery is a sinful institution and an evil system," was one of the complaints the ministers posted on the door of the lottery commission's Braintree headquarters.

The modern sensibility becomes uneasy when absolutes such as "sinful" and "evil" are mentioned in the political debate. But the time has come for a voice of reason to infiltrate the current legalized gambling craze.

When the state lottery was originally proposed, its justification was to eliminate the market for illegal "numbers games" operations. Better for the state government to control this form of gambling than organized crime, was the almost reasonable argument made at the time.

Since then, the state Lottery Commission has invested millions in slick advertising campaigns in their never-ending zeal to encourage every resident to play the lottery early and often. Now there's "Keno," coming soon to a restaurant or tavern near you. Keno drawings are broadcast on TV screens 12 times each hour from noon to 11 p.m. And by January, 1,540 "Keno" locations are planned in the state.

Critics have objected to "Keno" betting taking place where alcoholic beverages are served, where bettors may use poorer judgment and self-restraint. A Boston Globe poll found that a majority of state residents oppose the "Keno" game.

The Lottery Commission's latest tack is to suggest that gambling constitutes some sort of civic duty — in that a percentage of lottery revenues are plowed back into local communities in the form of local aid. But a study has proven that, due to some malign twist, the local aid distribution formula discriminates against the towns where people play the lottery the most.

If people want to perform their "civic duty," they can save up those lottery dollars and vote for a Proposition 2 1/2 override, eliminating the middle-man.

Finally, gambling dollars create a black hole in the economy. If someone's discretionary income goes toward dinner at a local restaurant, a portion of the bill will go to pay the waiter's salary, the cook's salary, the drivers of the delivery trucks that supply the restaurant, people who work in the food manufacturing industry, the farmer who grew the food, and so on. But the $2 billion spent on the lottery in Massachusetts each year goes directly to the sinkhole of the state bureaucracy, to be redistributed according to the whims of the Beacon Hill power-brokers.

The growing suspicion is that the state government has gone bonkers on legalized gambling and become overdependent upon the lottery as a source of revenue. Lottery revenues now account for $2 billion of the $13 billion state budget. It is one thing to offer an alternative to Mob-run numbers games, and another thing entirely to feverishly market a kaleidoscopic array of scratch games, daily numbers, Mass Millions, Mass Cash, Megabucks, Keno, ad nauseum. Massachusetts already has the highest per-capita lottery spending in the nation — we don't need to go for the record.

To a popular lottery slogan, we offer an amendment: you can't lose if you don't play.

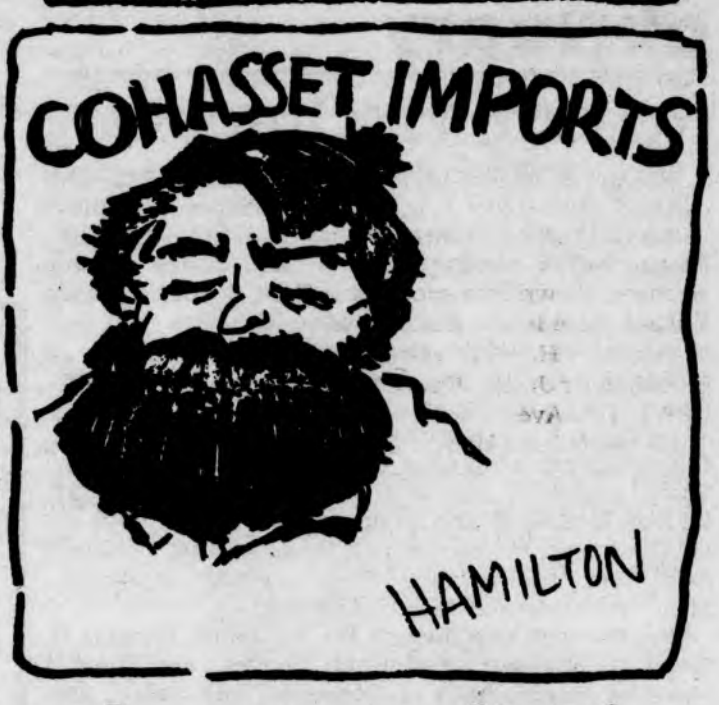
Have you seen the great looking Shrubbery at these Route 3A businesses?



Thanks for 'giving where you live'

To the Editor:

Thank you, Cohasset!

The "Auntie's Attic" tag sale and hamburger stand sponsored by the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset — as part of the Community Center of Cohasset's Tag Sale on the Common, Sept. 25 — was a huge success.

Church members donated their cast-off treasures and junk, which were sold at great bargain prices to the community at large, with all proceeds — totalling $1,000 — donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Thanks must be given to the many involved who provided this opportunity for us to "give where you live": members of the Second Congregational Church who donated their treasures and sold them; the Community Center for sponsoring the event; all the wonderful people who bought and donated their change; and especially the Cohasset Food Pantry run by Cohasset churches at the Second Congregational Church for being there for anyone of us who may be in need.

Freedom of choice bill supported

To the Editor:

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to Senator Brian McDonald and Representatives Paul Haley, Ronald Mariano and Mary Jeanette Murray for supporting the Pharmacy Freedom of Choice bill (H-1109).

A recent study shows that 84 percent of people polled would prefer to choose their own pharmacy. When the Massachusetts Legislature reconvenes this fall, legislators will be asked to review the facts and arguments of a bill aimed at allowing consumers to determine where they will buy their prescription medications.

The Pharmacy Freedom of Choice bill will remove restrictive barriers that prohibit consumers from shopping at their pharmacy of choice. While the philosophies of managed care have merit, they simply can not be applied to the pharmaceutical marketplace to effectively reduce the costs for prescription drug plans.

The practice of restrictive pharmacy provider contracts diminishes accessibility for the patient and eliminates the competitive factors that determine the level of quality for service and convenience. In addition, failure to open the market, and thus stimulate competition, will eventually lead to the evolvement of an oligopoly where few retail pharmacies control the market.

Reimbursement rates for pharmacy services have reached bottom. Of the overall health care budget, only seven percent constitutes the pharmacy benefit, the majority (90 percent) of which is attributed to the cost of the drug from the manufacturer. The margin to drive down prices any more is virtually nonexistent.

Quite simply, an open marketplace ensures that the consumer will always set the pace for quality and service. Properly utilized, the pharmacy benefit can actually reduce health care costs. Studies show that people are more apt to confide in a pharmacist they know and trust. Patient counseling leads to increased compliance and fewer incidents of hospitalization, disability and long-term illness.

Senator McDonald and Representatives Haley, Mariano and Murray are to be commended for supporting this bill.

Rep. Murray supports choice

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Third Plymouth District) has endorsed legislation calling for freedom of choice with regard to pharmacy services.

The bill, H1109, will enable people to fill prescriptions at the pharmacy of their choice. There has been overwhelming dissatisfaction expressed by those who have felt restricted by their health plan providers in choosing a pharmacy.

The joint committee on insurance reported favorably on H1109 in February. The bill is now before the house ways and means committee.

Cohasset receives grant

State Sen. Brian J. McDonald (D-Weymouth) has announced a state grant of $48,766 to Cohasset. This is part of the health protection grant program funds to schools and will make it possible for the town to educate the children about the dangers and effects of tobacco use and addiction.

This money comes directly from the new cigarette tax.

History of Hagerty property detailed

1876 — Mr.s Parker owned most of the property down to the water (probably part of Bailey's farm).

1903 — A sizable development of houses along Parker Avenue is shown in Richard's Atlas of "Plymouth County with the Town of Cohasset."

1910 — A harbor committee proposed that the town take over all of the land surrounding the harbor and make it into a public park. However, they couldn't obtain the carriage factory, which stood where Kimball's Hotel is now located, and the town turned down the proposal.

1912 — A map from the Maritime Museum shows that the strip of meadow along the waterfront was purchased by the town as a landing site. This property was leased to and eventually owned by John Eltman.

John Eltman worked his way from Europe to Boston, and eventually to Cohasset where he set up a boat manufacturing company (constructing lobster and "luxury boats") in the early 1920' and 1930's.

Eltman learned of old merchants' homes being torn down in the Boston Harbor area (along where Rowe's Wharf now stands), and had some of the nicer ones moved before any damage was done to them. These houses were unloaded by ship at Parker Ave, the major access to town by way of water. The Cohasset Colonials' showhouse is one such building.

Francis Hagerty summered in Egypt, Mass. and worked for John Eltman in his Cohasset boatyard, at 38 Parker Ave.

Hagerty bought an old shell manufacturing company in 1938 and operated this with Eltman on the waterfornt property before World War II. (The deed from this period says that Eltman and Hagerty became partners in this business).

John Eltman died in 1942 from diabetes and Hagerty took over the company.

Hagerty was a naval architect and throughout the war he manufactured radomes for PT boats.

Francis and Mary Hagerty were married in 1945 and following the war, Mr. Hagerty designed a $35 kit for "sea shells" which were small sailboats, similar in style to rookies. Because this was only a seasonal operation and the Hagertys had moved into a new house by now, (where furniture was desperately needed), Mary Hagerty suggested that they construct furniture in the large buildings along the waterfront.

The Hagertys went to the Museum of Fine Arts to get permission to reproduce their furniture and when their models were approved, they began to produce Cohasset Colonials' Home Assembly kits. The "building boom" which followed the war found a great demand for furniture and the Hagertys' business flourished. For five or six years the company took off, using 40-50 people to assemble the kits in the buildings on Cohasset Harbor.

However, after ten years only three laborers were needed for this operation. When Mrs. Hagerty's son left the business, she sold the company to a man who recognized that such a large workspace was unnecessary for the manufacturing of this furniture, and that it would be better to construct Cohasset Colonials in an environment more suitable for wood (ie., away from the water).

Mary Hagerty agreed to sell the property to the town because she feels the old buildings are too large for much other than boat construction, and that public harbor property isn't expansive enough.

David Wadsworth says the old clapboard boathouse on this property is believed to be an old U.S. Lighthouse Service building and it served as a service station for Minot's Light after being moved over from Government Island.

Al Moore, who sits on the Hagerty committee, points out the antique boathouse on the Parker Avenue site. The post-and-beam constructed boathouse will be dismantled and moved to Government Island where it originally stood.

manufacturing buildings — a task which must be done with care.

"They're on pilings because of the wetlands," he said adding that the committee would be working closely with the conservation commission. The site is separated from Government Island by Bailey's Creek.

"You can't drive in with bulldozers," he said.

Committee members hope to have some plans for the property ready for the spring town meeting. But Moore is quick to point out there's no rush now that the land — which is zoned industrial — is in the town's hands.

"We don't have to do anything except secure it and get rid of anything that's falling down," Moore said. "We could be still planning in 2010."

Moore explained that by purchasing the land the town prevented another industry buying the site.

Maritime institute idea proposed

A proposal for a maritime museum to be based at the Hagerty site came from John C. Buckley Jr., director of the Alternative School at the high school.

Buckley proposed turning the building into a "Cohasset Maritime Institute" (CMI) — a living history museum dedicated to the preservation of the town's unique maritime heritage, especially lifesaving and rowing, and to the stewardship of Cohasset's harbor and estuaries.

"It's a natural evolution of our successful community rowing program," Buckley said.

He said the institute would provide hands-on learning experiences, including rowing skills, boat building, repair and maintenance, and oceanography field studies such as water quality testing, plankton tows, sediment sampling and harbor observations.

He said CMI would interact with local citizens and community organizations like the historical museums, fishermen, and conservation commission.

cohasset's week

Train meeting slated

The Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Old Colony Railroad, Greenbush Corridor Transportation Improvements will meet from 7:30 to 10 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 21 at Cohasset Town Hall.

If you have any questions or would like a copy of the agenda, please call Joseph Connor, MBTA project manager, 722-3422.

Sign money wanted

Selectmen will ask for a transfer of $525 to pay for five new crosswalk signs and 100 pins. Three signs are replacements and two will be spares. Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield will maintain the signs which will be left out around the clock, selectmen said.

Regional resolution signed

Selectmen signed a resolution to pursue regional fire and emergency medical services with Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate at their board meeting Monday. The resolution supports the concept of regionalized fire protection by establishing a steering committee consisting of one selectman from each town, the fire chiefs, and town administrators. The steering committee will establish task forces consisting of fire chiefs and rank-and-file firefighters to develop a plan to provide for regional services including training, fire protection, and E-911 emergency dispatch services.

The resolution is the next step following receipt of a recent study on the feasibility of establishing a regionalized fire protection district. The five towns won a state grant to pay for the study which found that although towns would realize scant savings in regionalizing, there would be greater efficiency if a fire protection district is formed.

Drama club pact okayed

In exchange for the use of Cohasset Town Hall, the Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) agreed to repair the plumbing in the two downstairs restrooms as rental.

The club plans to spend $1,375 to replace three tiolets, the kitchen faucet, and basin cocks on the lavatory sink.

CDC performances are planned for January, March and May. The club also needs to access town hall for rehearsals and set construction in addition to performances. Member Dwight DiBona will act as liaison between Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon and the club to keep communications open, CDC president Angela Walsh said.

Selectmen approved the work CDC plans to do in lieu of rent. Doyon will also ask the group to replace light bulbs in the areas of the town hall used by the club.

Auditors' bill approved

Selectmen authorized payment of $2,925 to the auditing firm Tucci & Roselli for the recent town audit. The amount represents the unpaid balance of the $9,000 contract amount. The town was previously billed for $6,075.

First in 'Coffee with Authors' series is popular event

About the only thing the three authors had in common was they all write.

But it was precisely their differences that provided the 50 area residents — who attended "Coffee with the Authors" sponsored by Buttonwood Books and Toys at the Chart House, Tuesday — a rare insight into the writing profession.

And mystery writer Jeremiah Healy, novelist Deborah Joy Corey, and columnist/editor/essayist Robert Finch couldn't have been more entertaining if they'd been performers.

By including personal anecdotes, which were often humorous, about their lives — the writers captivated the audience.

Healy, an attorney whose latest book is "Foursome", talked about how he gets book ideas from the courtroom which provides "plotting, authenticity and dialog."

Corey, a Cohasset resident, enchanted the audience by reading an excerpt from her critically acclaimed first novel "Losing Eddie" about life in a small town in rural Canada.

And Finch — who compiled and edited "A Place Apart" about Cape Cod — said his biggest problem was "deciding what to leave out" of the 400-page anthology.

Buttonwood owner Betsey Detwiler said the event is the first in a series of coffees with authors. Buttonwood Books and Toys is in Cushing Plaza off Route 3A. For more information about the authors' series or to be put on the mailing list, please call the store at 383-book.

Parking meeting held

Glenn A. Pratt, president of the Community Center of Cohasset, set up a meeting with interested and affected parties to discuss a solution to the parking problems in the village at 1 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday, Oct. 6).

Notices have also been posted at the center asking participants not to park in front of the stores on S. Main Street.

There have been complaints that community center participants park along S. Main Street for longer than the hour currently allowed. As a result some elderly citizens, who have difficulty walking from the town parking lot, cannot get their prescriptions filled at the pharmacy.

Hoe down at town hall

The Second Congregational Church has permission to use the Town Hall auditorium from 7 to 11 p.m., Nov. 13 for a square dance. Selectmen gave the okay at their board meeting Monday.

Cohasset author Deborah Joy Corey takes a moment to personalize her book "Losing Eddie" during 'Coffee with the Authors' sponsored by Buttonwood Books and Toys.

THE KIPLING HOUSE
Brattleboro, Vermont

In 1892 Rudyard Kipling came to the United States to find sanctuary in Vermont with his wife's family. Soon after he moved there he was captivated by this fresh and sparsely populated country and decided to settle there permanently. He purchased eleven acres in Brattleboro V.T. and built an enormous house. This he called Naulakha, The Jewel Beyond Price. One hundred years later in 1992 an English company purchased the property and decided to renovate it back to it's original design and Edwardian varnish. Taylor Lumber was honored to be chosen to supply materials to this home, where Kipling entertained his best friend Mark Twain and wrote Captains Courageous and The Jungle Book as well as many other famous novels.

Skippers fall short vs. Hanover

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset head football coach Ted MacDermott hadn't yet viewed the game tapes of Saturday's 27-8 loss to non-league opponent Hanover, but he didn't need to stare into a VCR to realize his squad is in the midst of a crippling slump. And he plans to do something about it to change the route of his 1-2 squad.

"The last two weeks we got beat in all phases of the football game," MacDermott said. "We haven't played with any intensity."

MacDermott does, however, have every intention of making personnel changes after the Skippers dropped to 1-2 on the season. In the following two games they've been outscored 53-8, after an impressive, opening-game win over West Bridgewater.

Cohasset could only manage a Chris Rolandelli touchdown and conversion with under three minutes to play in the game to save themselves from being shut out for the second week in a row. The Skippers lost to Norwell, 26-0 in their previous game.

Hanover, too was a team ready to get back in the winner's circle last Saturday afternoon following a humiliating, 41-8 loss to non-league opponent Hingham the week before.

That spelled trouble for Cohasset as the Indians' Brett Johnson had the biggest game of his career, rushing for 250 yards and four touchdowns in handing the Skippers their second loss in a row, 27-8.

"We were down from the loss," said Johnson, a senior fullback, "so it was time to prove ourselves again."

What Hanover proved was Cohasset's defense couldn't stop the Indians' high-powered offense in any consistent manner. Johnson scored on runs of 47, 95, Cohasset's Brandon DeVoe breaks through Hanover's line to block and extra-point attempt by the Indians' Jim McDonough (85). DeVoe's play was one of the few bright spots for the Skippers as they dropped the non-league game, 27-8.

Shots dropping for girls' soccer

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

It's been a frustrating season for the Cohasset girls' soccer team in the South Shore League, but it has nothing to do with playing poorly. That would make the Skippers' 3-4 record a little more bearable.

Nope. These girls are playing well, have dominated their opponents and yet have a sub-.500 record to show for it.

Take their 4-3 loss to Hanover. After playing decently in the first half, Cohasset turned the intensity up a notch. The result was the Indians couldn't get the ball out of their own end for 20 solid minutes.

"We've had a couple of loses when we had territorial advantage and still loss," said head coach Don Satter. "That can be frustrating for the team."

To add insult to injury, the Skippers outshot Hanover 20-10.

Satter's troops, though, showed just what they can do when they find the net with their onslaught of shots. Erin Murphy had no trouble finding the empty space between the post as she scored four goals and Katie Ross added one to drop Scituate, 5-2. Tammy Lantiand and Meghan Rhodes each had a pair of assists.

The Skippers weren't so dominating over Carver, but thanks to Katie Carroll's lone goal was enough to defeat the Crusaders, 1-0.

Satter was relieved his team had started to put the ball in the net on a more regular basis.

"Carver is more of a kick-and-run kind of a team and we're not," he said. "A kick-and-run team can throw a passing team out of synch.

"Up until the Scituate game we've had trouble scoring goals. That's something we've worked hard in in practice."

Satter intends to concentrate on shooting technique and drills during practice this weak, along with simulating game conditions.

"Some kids may have a better knack for it (scoring)," he said, "but there's also a technique."

Game simulation is a big part of the squad's practices under Satter.

"The key is to make practices as similar to games as possible," he said. "If you can get enough repetition in practice, pretty soon the game situation won't seem different to the kids."

Cohasset has an excellent chance to pick up two wins this week and move a game over .500. They were scheduled to play Hull on Wednesday and Norton on Friday. Hull is winless on the season and the Skippers beat Norton the first time the two teams met.

"We're consciously optimistic about picking up four points," Satter said. "And we have to pick up points or else we won't qualify for the tournament."

Cohasset then faces a tough Abington team next week. Satter indicated he'll make only minor alterations against the Green Waves, probably on the defensive side, covering striker Karen Curran.

"We pretty much don't deviate too much from our tactics," he said. "It's not like a football team that puts in a different game plan each week."

One definite game plan of Cohasset's will be to continue getting shots off on goal. If they do that and succeed, the tournament may not be too far away.

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

People constantly stop me on the street and say two things.

The first is, "McKee, where's that money you owe me?" while the second is, "What would you do to change fall high school sports?"

As for the first matter, my lawyers are working on that, but as for the second, if there's one thing I know it's fall high school sports.

The following are some changes I would make if I were named the new high school sports commissioner.

Field hockey

This sport needs the most changes.

First thing, get bigger sticks. As they are now, only Billy Barty or the late "Tattoo" could use them without wrenching several back muscles.

Also change the rules so you can shoot back-hand shots. It looks kind of silly when the players are moving down field and have to turn their sticks completely around to hit the ball back-handed.

The third change is to lose the plaid skirts. This is the 90's, I don't see the need for the wearing of dresses. What's wrong with shorts?

And finally get rid of that hard ball. I've conducted several experiments and there are only two things harder than a diamond. One is Lou Gorman's head. The second is a field hockey ball.

Soccer

This is the world's most popular sport. I don't know why, but consider that rice is the world's most popular food.

Anyway, the first change is to shrink the field. The 110-yard field makes for too much running.

Who wants to run around all day chasing some little guy named Pele? After a while, I'd want to tackle him or something.

Second make goals worth two points and give one point for shots that go over the net, kind of like extra points in football. More scoring means more fun. The only thing more boring than a 1-0 soccer game is attending a selectmen's meeting.

And finally, if these changes don't make the game more exciting, simply play with two balls at the same time. Imagine the fun for fans and players alike.

Cross country

I have two words on how to make cross country more exciting: Pit Bulls.

You let the runners take off and then two minutes later let several hungry Pit Bulls charge after them. You think China has been setting a lot of world records in distance running lately, wait till you see the records coming from the U.S.A. with this change.

Football

There is too much violence and seriousness in the game, (see last week's Extra Points) so I would make cheerleaders and ball boys eligible for passes.

Let's set the scene, it's third and long, the quarterback drops back and looks left but his tight end is covered. All of a sudden, BAM, he launches a pass and hits a wide open Betty Sue in the end-

Gymnast in motion

The Cohasset Community Center, now in its 16th year with its gymnastic program, has come a long way under coaching director Ruthann Sargent-Ardizzoni, assistant Patty Donahue, master instructors Karen Clemente, Susie O'Brien, Tiffany Zaniboni and Lauren D'Angelis. The center offers gymnastics to the 2 1/2-year-old student as well as the 40-year-old student. New programs offered this year include "Mom and Me" and "Sports for Kids," offered Monday, noon to 1 p.m., and Tuesday, 1 to 2 p.m.

There are still openings in session 1 as follows: Three-year-olds, Mondays, 11:15 a.m. to noon; Wednesdays 1:45 to 2:30 p.m. and Fridays 12:15 to 1 p.m.

"Mom and Me;" 2 1/2 to 3-year-olds, Thursdays 10:30 to 11:15 a.m.

Preschool boys and girls, Mondays 2 to 3 p.m., Wednesdays 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. and Fridays 1 to 2 p.m.

Beginner girls 7 and 8, 9 to 13 years, Mondays from 4 to 5 p.m. and Thursdays, 3 to 4 p.m.

Jr. High and high school, Mondays, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

There are also classes available Saturdays. Call the center today at 383-0088 for more information. The center also offers a team program for levels four to eight. Upcoming events include "Boys' and Girls' Night Out" in November for ages five to 10 years.

Rec. offers indoor golf lessons

The Cohasset and Scituate recreation departments are co-sponsoring fall indoor golf lessons for beginner players, scheduled to begin Thursday evening, Nov. 4, at the Cushing School, Scituate.

Lessons are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly and the fee for the five one-hour sessions is $60 per person.

Should you wish to register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations are accepted on a first call basis.

Local golf professional and head golf pro Mr. Dan Neary will be instructing.

New 'step' workout schedule at town hall

The new schedule for Step classes at the Cohasset Town Hall:

"Fatburner"/intro (beginners to intermediate), Monday and Wednesday nights, 5 to 6 p.m.

"Fatburner"/Power Step (intermediate to advanced), Tuesday and Thursday nights at 6:30 to 7:45 p.m.

Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups or 10 session cards. Drop-ins are welcome. Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information.

Also make trick plays worth double touchdowns. End-arounds, flea flickers and the famous Statue of Liberty play are worth 12 points. Large deficits can be erased in a matter of one or two plays.

Finally, each team is allowed one "Mulligan" a half. A "Mulligan" is the golf term equivalent to a do-over. A fumbled run or intercepted pass can simply be erased from the books by calling a "Mully".

Everyone deserves another chance now and then.

Just a little update on some of the veg heads I've had to deal with this fall. Excuse me, veg head.. This one goes out to one particular athletic director and the futile attempts to get the phone numbers of the coaches under him.

It's important to keep in mind however that my "gripe of the week" doesn't apply to any ADs on the South Shore. I still have the lists given to me a couple years back by Don Tobin (Abington) and Bob Fisher (Rockland), two of the most cooperative I've dealt with. A quick phone call to the schools requesting the numbers and BANG, the complete list is sitting there in an envelope in the main office when I arrive. Quick, easy and much appreciated.

Cohasset Athletic Director Clark Chatterton didn't have a printed copy available when I talked with him in late August, but he took the time to give me the names and numbers of the coaches over the phone as he remembered them off the top of his head. By the way Mr. Chatterton, you were right on the mark. And when the Whitman-Hanson Mariner was still in circulation Bob Bancroft had the list readily available.

But in one of the western towns we cover, the AD has been about as cooperative as Howard Stern is to a boring caller. I've left no less than six messages to this particular AD and went to the school and left two more. How many return calls did I get back? Zippo!

I've since been in contact with one coach who called, rightfully asking why the high school sports coverage has been sparse at best. I've given up dealing with this AD. Instead, I'm resorting to calling the athletes themselves in the hope they have the names and numbers of their coaches. So far, this method has proved to have lukewarm results at best.

Be patient coaches, I'm still trying to track you all down. I just hope I can get to all of you before the baseball tourney ends.

Intensity, Skippers fall short against Hanover

55 and 11 yards, while the Skippers had problems all afternoon putting together a lengthy drive.

"Johnson sure is quick and made the difference," said Hanover head coach John Sullivan. "This is the first time we've committed to the run and it paid off for us."

Trailing 7-0 and still in the game, Cohasset's best chance at getting on the scoreboard came late in the first quarter. Starting at their own 25, the backfield duo of Scott Theriault and Chris Rolandelli, both of whom were two of the few Skippers who looked as though they were playing to win, began to breath a ray of hope into Cohasset when the offense was on the field.

Theriault picked up a quick 8 yards on a sweep. On the next play Rolandelli powered his way through the middle of the Indians' defense for a 17-yard gain and a first down. Consecutive runs of 8 and 10 yards by the two put Cohasset at Hanover's 32 in a first-down situation.

But, in what Sullivan called the "key play of the first quarter" quarterback Jeff Littlehale's intended pass to Thomas Allen was underthrown and Johnson came up with the interception, snuffing out the Skippers' march down field.

Johnson eluded the Cohasset defensive line and outran the secondary on the very next play for a 95-yard touchdown. Jim McDonough kicked the extra-point and Hanover was up 14-0 with 1:45 left in the first quarter.

MacDermott knows the team can't continue to rely on just Rolandelli and Theriault for its total offense. The passing game, he says, has to improve — and soon.

"We had the wind (at their back) in the first period and we wanted to take advantage of that," MacDermott said. "We have to be able to throw the football more and better if we're going to improve on offense."

Johnson ran for his second, first-play touchdown when he sprinted 55 yards with 5:09 remaining in the half. Brandon DeVoe blocked the extra point, making it 20-0.

"The holes were definitely there," said Johnson of the job Hanover's offense line was doing in driving the Skippers' back. "On three touchdowns, I didn't even get touched. The line was making the blocks for me."

Cohasset's problems began to mount as they fumbled away their next possession and Hanover recovered. But the Skippers' defense held the Indians on a third-and-1 from the their own 9. DeVoe was in on his second blocked kick as he teamed with Brian Pattison to knock down McDonough's 27-yard attempt.

Johnson added touchdown No. 3 on Hanover's second possession of the third quarter. He took a pitch from quarterback Dan Reardon and bolted into the end zone from the 11 at 9:10. This time Cohasset couldn't get at the extra-point attempt by McDonough and the Indians' lead stretched to 27-0.

Rolandelli scored with 2:24 remaining to save the Skippers from being shutout for the second time in as many games.

The Road Warrior

In hindsight, Greg Meyer's 2:09:00 victory in the 1983 Boston Marathon was one the most significant marathons ever run in the United States. And not just for Meyer.

The 38-year-old Meyer, who recently moved from his home state of Michigan to Hingham, pulled two other Americans — Ron Tabb and Benji Durden — under the 2:10 mark, the most United States runners to break the mark in the same race.

For Meyer, who was 27 when he donned the victory wreath, his time made him the third fastest American marathoner ever behind Alberto Salazar (2:08:53) and Dick Beardsley (2:08:55), who finished 1-2 at Boston the year before.

But the 1983 race marked the beginning of the end of the United States' domination of the marathon. After 10 years, only one American — Ken Martin at the 1991 New York City Marathon — has broken 2:10.

Meyer has his own theory as to why the U.S. is no longer producing marathoners the calibre of himself, Alberto Salazar or Bill Rodgers. Many world-class runners have strayed from the tight-knit running clubs they once were members of to run on their own. Meanwhile, the Africans and Mexicans have adopted the Americans' club-running format and have taken the International marathon field by storm since the 1984 Olympics.

"We were the end result of a great system," Meyer said of the top American marathoners of the late 70s and early 80s who belonged to elite racing clubs. "There was a club system to turn to and they were anchored by a star. Now the Kenyans do it. They load up the people and they do very well. We don't do that anymore."

Meyer named three clubs in particular which were known throughout the country for producing elite marathoners. The 1980 Olympian Durden, who ran 2:09:57 for third behind Meyer and Tabb at Boston, was the Atlanta Track Club's most recognizable star. In the mid-west, two-time Olympic medal winner Frank Shorter headed the Colorado Track Club. And of course, four-time winner of both Boston and New York City, Bill Rodgers, was already a household name around the world as a member of the swelling Greater Boston Track Club.

Meyer also believes the country's best talent is divided into several different sports, whereas the third-world countries have running and little else to turn to when it comes to competing at the International level.

"We have so many sports," Meyer said, "it dilutes all the talent."

He still has fond memories of running for the GBTC which he joined in 1978 after moving to the Boston area from his home state of Michigan. Meyer got a job working at the Bill Rodgers Running Center and trained regularly with Rodgers, Randy Thomas, Bob Hodge, Mike Roche and Dick Mahoney.

Rodgers and coach Bill Squires had the most influence on Meyer and his training.

"To this day I think Squires is as fine a marathon coach as you'll find," Meyer said. "His training methods have been utilized by top coaches like Bob Sevene and Jack McDonald."

He went on to become good friends with Rodgers and believed each complemented the other's training program. Rodgers generally ran longer track intervals such as mile repeats and further at a moderate pace. Meyer, on the other hand, ran shorter, harder repeats. "Billy was one of the reasons I moved out here," Meyer said. "Billy saw the kind of intervals I ran and wanted someone to pull him along. And he helped me a ton."

Meyer was on the sidelines when Rodgers set the American record of 2:09:27 in the 1979 Boston Marathon. The GBTC had a great day in the Patriot Day race, placing three other runners in the top 10. Hodge (third, 2:12:05), Thomas (eighth, 2:14:12) and Mahoney (10th, 2:14:36) all ran with the lead pack in the early going and went on to solid finishes.

The third-fastest American marathoner ever, Hingham's Greg Meyer never considered himself a "true" master of the distance 1983 Boston Marathon winner Greg Meyer of Hingham still owns the third-fastest time run by an American with his 2:09:00. It remains the fastest U.S. time over the last 10 years. Meyer is also the last American to win the 26.2 mile event.

But for Meyer, he wasn't ready to race a marathon at the world-class level yet. "I was still learning to race at a new level with Rodgers, Mike Roche, Bobby Hodge and Salazar when he'd show up," he said. "So there was no hurry to move up to the marathon."

That May, Meyer set the American Record for 10K (6.2 miles) on the road with a 28:24 in the Diet Pepsi Heartbreak Hill Road Race. Rodgers finished second, 32 seconds back.

It was the races in the eight months leading up to his Boston victory that made Meyer a strong favorite in the April classic. He won the Chicago Marathon in October of 1982 in 2:10:59 and went on to have a strong winter in the indoor-track circuit.

Meyer pressed Salazar for more than five miles in the Orange Bowl 10K in February in Miami, Florida. At one point in the race he thought he had a chance to take the race from Salazar, another dominating force on the roads at the time.

"I sensed he had a down spot (at 4-1/2 miles)," Meyer said, "but I didn't have the confidence to go by him. Then he put me in the coffin.

"Next thing I know Bill was chasing me like a shark in blood. The thing with Billy was if I didn't win, I hoped he did because we were such good friends."

Salazar went on to set a new American record of 28:02. Meyer held off a charging Rodgers by two seconds — 28:13 to 28:15.

Wanting another hard 10K tune-up, Meyer ran the event on the track in the Colonial Relays at William and Mary College. Two other runners he would face at Boston, Dan Schlesinger and Paul Cummings were also entered. Meyer was hoping to run about 28:30, but wound up running a 27:51. He crossed the line thinking he could have run even faster. "It was so easy," Meyer said.

But the race that stood out among all the other pre-Boston competitions came two weeks before the big event at the Cherry Blossom 10-miler in Washington, D.C. Meyer simply ran away from the field to record a stunning 46:13, a sizzling 4:37-per-mile pace.

Meyer considers Boston the most important race he has ever run, but the Cherry Blossom was his best.

"I've had better races," he said of Boston. My 10 miles down in Cherry Blossom was a better race. Winning Boston probably meant the most to me."

With the eight months of high-quality racing and training he had put in before the marathon, Meyer knew he would be tough to beat. As usual there was a solid field, but neither Australian great Rob de Castella (1986 winner) nor two-time champion Toshiko Seko of Japan were in the field.

"There wasn't anybody there that really caused me to panic. It goes back to your preparation," Meyer said. "After going to eight months of training I was in it for the win. It was hard to imagine someone running away from me."

As the race developed, though, someone did try to steal the race. Durden began to pull away from the tight pack that included Meyer, Rodgers, Tabb, Paul Cummings, Ed Mendoza and several others. The weather was perfect, according to Meyer and he was puzzled by Durden's strong surge because the pace was plenty fast enough.

"It was a great day to run," he said. "The pace was fast from the get-go."

Meyer went into the race deciding to stay with the lead pack and not make a move for the lead "until well into the hills" in Newton, leading to Boston College. He "tapped into people" along the way to get an idea of how strong they felt, but he never really put in any strong surges.

"Again," he said, "because of the training, I thought somebody would have to run a great race to beat me."

Meyer cut into Durden's 100-yard lead and went on to run by himself through the last of the hills and to the finish line to set a new personal record. Tabb and Durden both shattered their previous fastest times, as did Mendoza, who finished fourth in 2:10:08. The 35-year-old Rodgers wound up 11th in 2:11:57.

The magnitude of the effort which went into his victory hit Meyer soon after. He sustained several bothersome injuries in succession. Meyer developed stress fractures, Achilles problems and aggravated a back problem he had his entire career.

"You lose momentum the same way you build momentum," he said.

Meyer went to Chicago to defend his title, but was beaten and later pulled a hamstring at the 21-mile mark of the U.S. Olympic Marathon Trials. He finished seventh, a step ahead of Rodgers.

After he overcame each injury, Meyer made the mistake of resuming marathon training, rather than preparing himself for shorter distances. He did this because he knew he was now considered one of the country's top marathoners.

"Winning Boston was the kiss of death because everybody though I was a marathoner and I wasn't." Meyer paused and then said with a laugh. "I wish someone had told me that."

Meyer came to realize that because of his body type he was "never meant to be a marathoner." Not that he couldn't run a world-class time — Boston proved that — but that he would have a difficult time putting together a string of consistent, quality marathons. He did run several marathons after Boston in the 2:14 range, but never ran what he considered "a good marathon" again.

"It's not the race," Meyer explained. "It's the training. The marathon isn't an event that develops talent. It destroys talent."

Meyer doesn't believe he was the only one who wasn't the same after Boston. Durden, Tabb, Mendoza, even Salazar and Beardsley never ran as fast again.

And of all the great marathoners, Meyer says less than 10 were truly meant to be marathoners. Among them are Seko, de Castella, Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania and, of course, Rodgers, who at 44 years old has since retired from marathon running, but has continued to race as one of the top Masters in the world.

"It's incredible," Meyer said of his friend. "He hasn't changed physically or mentally. I think it was a good move for him to retire from the marathon. It has helped to keep him motivated."

Meyer regards 1992 U.S. Olympians Todd Williams and Bob Kempainen as the country's best young marathon prospects, along with Keith Brantly, who trained with the Kenyans prior to this year's Boston and finished in ninth.

He still runs when his busy work schedule allows it. Meyer works for the Kim McDonald International Management Group and is currently trying to develop projects in U.S. — namely road races — which would attract African runners. Meyer said he couldn't go into more details of the projects because there is still a ways to go before anything is finalized.

Along with his work, he is also a consultant for John Hancock as part of the company's running and fitness program, a consultant for Brooks running shoes and Amway, the official vitamin supplement of the National Basketball League. He is developing a training and walking program for Amway.

As for regrets, Meyer has just one. "I was never lucky enough to make an Olympic team," he said. "It's a crap shoot who comes up right on that day (of the trials).

"When I moved to Boston I didn't come down with the attitude I was going to set the world on fire. I went further than I ever thought I would. I was always just trying to get better."

WARNING: DON'T CALL ANY TAX PROFESSIONAL UNTIL YOU READ THIS!

Did you know that not all tax professionals are the same?

Yes, it's true. Some Tax professionals only understand the preparation of tax returns. While others, who are more enlightened, understand not only preparation, but also, planning, savings, and representation.

Do you have a tax problem? Do you have a tax audit or tax collection case nagging at you? If so, you should visit a Tax Professional who knows how to "MEET and DEAL" with the IRS.

Why, the answer is simple.

You see, my nine years of IRS experience and twelve years of tax management can be put to use on your very first visit. Take advantage of a free half hour consultation.

That's the good news. The bad news is that you may now need help preparing a late tax return, setting up a payment plan on representing you before a tax examiner.

So, if you need fast help you should call 1-800-341-2221 make an appointment with Murphy Tax Financial Services. Ask for our FREE report, Ten Secrets The IRS Would Prefer You Didn't Know!

PSO meeting was provocative

By Diana Kinch
Special to the Mariner

The PSO fall meeting was held Sept. 23 evening at the high school cafeteria.

A welcome by the PSO's president, Maureen Jerz, was followed by a cohesive presentation by Supt. Stephen Hart about the Educational Reform Bill. Hart outlined the four main points of the plan. One major change is the development of a school council for each school, consisting of principal, teachers, parents, a member of the community without school age children and, at high school level, student representation.

The main speaker of the evening was Dr. Wendy Nelson, a licensed psychologist who received her degree from Boston University. She has been in private practice in Hanover since 1982. She speaks extensively to parent groups throughout Eastern Massachusetts on a variety of parenting and child psychology topics.

This evening her topic was "The Busy Family, Busy Child." She suggested that a child not be over-booked and allowances made for some "down time." For the child who joins, but always fails to finish, she recommended encouraging him/her to follow through with the commitment without pushing for them to join again. Dr. Nelson commented on the danger of exposing a child to too many extracurricular activities in a concentrated time and how it can make the child disinterested or even bored with having or pursuing outside interests in the future. Life-time interests such as tennis, reading and swimming should be encouraged.

The talk opened up a forum not only between the audience and Dr. Nelson, but also between parents and administrators.

We are pleased that the PSO will also be sponsoring this same speaker, Dr. Wendy Nelson, as a part of a parenting series at the junior high level. In November the topic will be "The Young Adolescent," specifically addressing the parents of 10 to 14 year old children. Parents of nine and 10 year olds may join in this forum. A specific date will be forthcoming. Please check the Mariner and the school menu for dates.

Early release today

Thursday, Oct. 7 is early release day for Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten and students will be dismissed at 12:25 p.m. from Deer Hill and 12:55 p.m. from Joseph Osgood. Lunch will be served in all schools.

The teachers in the elementary schools have chosen a new model for their professional development this year. For some of the early release days the staff members will be given time to complete a professional development goal. This goal may be completed individually, by grade level or cross graded and should be tied into the teachers' evaluation procedure. Under the school culture norm of collegiality, teachers will be in faculty meetings to discuss their goals. An inservice committee from each school in partnership with the principals, has organized this approach. This innovative and exciting plan was used effectively at the high school last year and will be used again this year.

(Ed. note: The following news was provided by The Cohasset COA.)

IMPORTANT HEALTH NEWS FOR SENIORS

A new "stealth" virus that broke out in the spring when the disease usually is abating is expected to make this year's flu season especially hazardous. Experts are warning everyone, particularly older Americans, to get flu shots no later than October.

"We encourage getting a shot every year," said Dr. Lawrence Schoenberger, epidemiology chief at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, "but if there is any chance of forgetting, this is not the year to let that happen."

The new virus is known as "A/Beijing/32/92," because it first appeared in Beijing, China, in 1992 and was the 32nd laboratory manifestation of the strains. It popped up here between March and May when flu usually is tapering off. It rippled through nursing homes along the East Coast, including one in northern Georgia where 100 people became infected.

"We were getting reports of people dying with flu, and nobody even knew it was around," Shoenberger said.

Compared to other flu viruses, it poses a greater risk, he said. "It is certainly something to be concerned about."

Flu claims the lives of about 10,000 Americans a year, and some doctors expect the toll to rise this year.

At highest risk are people over 65 and those of any age with chronic medical problems, such as heart or lung disease, that invite severe complications. Flu can cause death in such cases.

While young people may not be as vulnerable, flu is highly contagious and individuals can spread the disease, perhaps to a high-risk elder at home, even if they don't catch it themselves.

The shots are necessary for people with emphysema, asthma, bronchitis, anemia, kidney disease and diabetes.

People whose immune systems have been weakened by a health problem (such as cancer or AIDS) are also at risk. Most people who catch flu get well without any problem, but it sometimes leads to pneumonia, which can be fatal.

Flu often strikes out of the blue. Symptoms may include sore throat; a dry, hacking cough; fever; runny nose; aches, pains and chills. Most people who catch flu get well without complications.

Shots can reduce the likelihood of catching flu by about 70 percent. The vaccine should not be taken, however, by anyone allergic to eggs.

A new vaccine is developed each year because flu strains change from year to year. Antigens for the Beijing variant have been included in the vaccine to be distributed this fall.

"You would think that after 25 years more people would have built up some immunity to these viruses," he said. "But that has not happened. Not enough of the older population have taken the shots." The vaccine cannot give you the flu.

Pneumococcal vaccine will also be available at this time for people 65 and older or those who have a chronic illness. There is no charge for either vaccine. Many people think of pneumococcal vaccine as a "pneumonia shot," but it also prevents infections of the blood and of the thin membrane that covers the brain and spinal cord (meninges). People 65 or older and anyone with chronic illness should get the vaccine. Pneumococcal vaccine will also be available at this time for people 65 and older or those who have a chronic illness. There is no charge for either vaccine. Most people only need one dose which can be given at the same time as flu vaccine.

FLU CLINICS

The Social Service League and the Board of Health will hold their Annual Flu Clinics Saturday, Oct. 23, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Saturday, Oct. 30, from 11 a.m to 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. The flu shot is free to all Cohasset residents. For more information, call the league office (Mon.-Fri., 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.) at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Pancake breakfast set

Cohasset High School varsity cheerleaders will hold a pancake breakfast from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. , Saturday (Oct. 9) at the high school cafeteria.Tickets are $3 in advance or $3.50 at the door. Proceeds will go toward the purchase of new uniforms for the squad.

Eating disorders discussed

The Social Service League of Cohasset, Cohasset Board of Health and Cohasset PSO are presenting a panel discussion on eating disorders called "Anorexia-Bulimia: A Dilemma in the 90s."

Panelists Arlene Winston PhD, Straits Path Counseling; Rev. Steven Emmet PhD, Director Anorexia-Bulimia Assoc. of RI and Barbara Michaud, Director of ABC Inc., Cambridge will answer questions following their discussion.

All are invited at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 20 at Walton Rodgers Hall, St. Stephens Church. For information call 383-0771.

Forum on cancer planned

"Perspectives on Breast Cancer," a forum on the disease and how to help fight it, will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 12 at the New North Church, Lincoln St., Hingham.

Speakers will cover such topics as medical aspects of breast cancer, environmental causes of cancer, politics of breast cancer and working to provide mammograms for all who need them.

The program, sponsored by South Shore NOW, is free and open to the public. For information call Suzanne at 749-3342.

Appalachian project set

With such a tremendous growth of interest in the annual Appalachia Service Project trip, an information and pre-registration meeting will be held for the 1994 trip at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 17 at the Second Congregational Church, next to town hall.

All interested teenagers and their parents are encouraged to attend this meeting. Thirty-eight teenagers and 18 adults volunteered last year and about the same number will go this year.

Following a year of fund-raising, this week-long project involves home repair and improvement as well as interaction with the people of Appalachia. For information call Gary Ritts or Ami Argus at 383-0345.

Sabbatical video shown

Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church and his wife, Judy, will share a video presentation of their sabbatical in the western United States at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 17 in the audio-visual room at Cohasset High School.

Footage will include native American arts and crafts, Pow Wows, costumes, as well as scenery of western US. All are welcome.

Aspects of aging series

A five-part series on "Understanding Your Aging Parents (or Partner)" continues Oct. 12 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the South Shore Arts Center.The series is jointly sponsored by the Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, and Scituate Councils on Aging, and by the Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Associations. The general public is invited to attend. For more information, or to register for any or all sessions, call the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Session #2 (Tuesday) will discuss the psycho-social aspects of aging, including changes in employment status, lifestyle, health, and social life of elders, and the need for a shift in family roles and relationships. Presenter will be Carolyn Housman, LICSW, social worker, Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Associations.

Ken Coleman on local cable

From 8 to 9 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 7, Host Wigmore Pierson's guest on "Pierson to Person" will be sports broadcaster Ken Coleman, discussing baseball salaries, Red Sox history and the Jimmy Fund.

This will be the sixth anniversary show of "Pierson to Person." For information about upcoming guests and other show information, call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Concern rises over historic harbor site

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Local fishermen and residents are combining forces to try and save an historic site which also provides a practical service.

The boat yard which houses the Mill River Marine Railway in the harbor has been sold to the president of Entertainment Cinemas of Stoughton.

William Hanney who purchased the 16,000 square-foot parcel for $350,000 reportedly wants to build a residence at the harbor location.

Lobstermen are worried that their livelihoods will be adversely affected if the only boat yard in town is forced to move. And harbor residents don't want the historic appearance of the area altered.

Building Inspector Robert M. Egan said the site is zoned for waterfront business and it would take a variance or a zoning change for a home to be built

Fighting eating disorders is critical battle

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Media messages about sex, violence, and alcohol are having a devastating effect on teen-agers.

But another media message — that at times is overlooked but can be every bit as negative — is the pencil-thin body image being sold to girls.

Modelling themselves after the "ideal" that is promoted to the public through advertising — some teenage girls are vulnerable to developing eating disorders with disastrous effects, health professionals say.

Personal touch is part of local pharmacy's appeal

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The more things change, the more they remain the same in the village. Youngsters still part with their allowance, women find fragrances to fit their fancy and gentlemen can find shaving brushes and soap or newfangled foam within the aisles of Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy.

The drug store down on Main has been a staple of Cohasset's shopping life since horse and buggy days. When Ralph Harrison bought the store in 1959, it had already been around since the 1880's. The biggest changes he's made consist of moving it one door down and yanking out the soda fountain that once stood in the middle of the original store.

Just as at Alice's Restaurant, you can get most anything you want or need. Harrison stocks the usual assortment of Band-Aids, throat lozenges and aspirin. If Aunt Bessie is having a birthday, Harrison can oblige with a greeting card and a new wallet. He has hair doohickeys, powder puffs, hot pink and heliotrope body sponges and a copy machine in the front window.

The merchandise reflects the life style and sensibilities of Cohasset customers. In addition to mass market cosmetics and toiletries, Harrison carries the perfumes and makeup more commonly found in fine department stores and shopping mall specialty stores.

"Cohasset is a very upscale town," Harrison said. "My customers are used to fine fragrances."

Stocking the brands Cohasset prefers has been just one more way Harrison has tried to adapt himself to his small town niche.

"Today's woman is very busy," he explains. "She cannot waste her time driving to shopping malls."

Harrison relies on employees Lynn Brandenburg and Lisa Keddy to keep the cosmetic counter stocked with the brands, colors and scents his customers

Satter: All soccer games crucial

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

No matter what the sport, it's that time of year when coaches and players alike check the league standings, overall records and the previous day's results religiously.

Buckle up and get ready for the ride. The tournament is just around the corner. The magic number for every team is 59 percent — the winning percentage which guarantees a squad into the postseason.

Cohasset girls' head soccer coach Don Satter very familiar with the number. His squads reached it almost academically during his years at Newton North High School.

And he believes the Skippers can do it too. But easy it will not be. Entering the second half of the season, the 5-4 team must defeat every SSL squad it defeated during the first half of the season, plus garner three points somewhere from the four teams it lost to.

Register to vote!

The cut off date for voters to register for the special town meeting Oct. 25 is tomorrow, Oct. 15.

Citizens can register for the special town meeting from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., tomorrow (Friday, Oct. 15) at the Town Clerk's Office.

Harbor floats coming out

Cohasset Harbormaster Shawn Kelly warns that citizens must take their boats off the Margin St. and Lawrence Wharf floats by Oct. 15.

There will be a $25 fine for any owner whose boat the harbormaster has to pull out, Kelly said.

Railroad group to meet

The citizens' advisory committee for the Old Colony Railroad Greenbush Corridor transportation improvements project will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 21, at Cohasset town hall, 41 Highland Ave.

Transportation impacts on the alternative proposals will be discussed as part of Chapter IV of the supplementary draft of the environmental impact statement/report.

For further information, call Joseph Connor, MBTA project manager, at 722-3422.

Guard rail damaged

An early morning single-car accident left a 1991 Pontiac Grand Prix "totalled" but its occupants escaped unharmed, police said.

At about 3 a.m., Oct. 12 the car driven by David M. Smith, 28 Willard St., Braintree struck the guard rail and chain-link fence at the curve on Atlantic Avenue near Cunningham Bridge, Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

Police cited Smith for failure to stay within marked lanes.

Ramps to be built

The Norfolk County Commission has authorized the county engineering department to determine grades for the purpose of building handicapped access ramps in Cohasset. Work should begin within the next few weeks.

Unemployment is down

The economy is rebounding slowly in Cohasset as unemployment figures dipped slightly in July over the previous month's numbers.

According to the state Department of Employment and Training, unemployment in Cohasset during July was 4 percent, a slight decrease from the previous month's total of 4.3 percent.

In July, 152 Cohasset residents received unemployment benefits from a total local labor force of 3,795.

The news was more bleak for the state, where unemployment rose to 7 percent in August from 6.3 percent in July.

Unemployment numbers for municipalities lag a month behind the state numbers.

"This slight rise in the unemployment rate is due to an increase in the number of people looking for jobs," said state commissioner Nils L. Nordberg. "Of the 38,000 new entrants into the labor force, 15,000 found employment, with the remainder still looking."

Sewer counsel paid

Selectmen approved payment of a $149.88 bill to the legal firm, Goodwin, Procter & Hoar, which serves as the town's sewer counsel.

Concern rises over harbor site

Egan said the owner hasn't begun the permitting process yet.

"There's an awful lot of permits to get," Egan explained. He said Hanney would have to apply for permits from the local planning and zoning boards and the sewer and conservation commissions.

"The first shoe hasn't dropped yet," he said. "No one has filed for anything."

And because the site is zoned for water use — the state Department of Environmental Protection and Army Corps of Engineers might also be involved.

But concerned fishermen and residents aren't going to wait for permit applications to be filed. They want the citizenry to know now what they might be losing.

Both groups' petitions asking for help were accepted by selectmen Oct. 4.

But according to fisherman Herbert Jason, he and petitioner Jeffrey Donzé have been frustrated in their attempts to meet with selectmen.

The men were on the agenda for the board's Sept. 27 meeting and were told not to attend to give the board time to review the matter. But last week (Oct. 4), when the board accepted the petitions, Donzé and Jason did not attend because they didn't think they were supposed to, according to Jason.

"I would have wanted to be there (when the petitions were accepted)," Jason said, explaining that fishermen are looking for guidance and support from selectmen.

Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby said there must have been some confusion over the second meeting.

"They were on the agenda, we expected the them (petitioners) to be there," she said.

Gjesteby said while she is personally sympathetic to having the site remain a boat yard — there isn't really a role selectmen can play at this time.

"We don't own it," she said. "There's nothing we can do at this point."

Jason said he'd be at this week's (Oct. 18) selectmen's meeting "no matter what."

"We've got to save the yard at all costs. Who's ever heard of fishing in a harbor with no place to haul out?" he said.

Donzé, a computer specialist who lives on Parker Ave., collected 150 signatures, and doesn't see why selectmen can't invite the new owner to a meeting to discuss plans for the site.

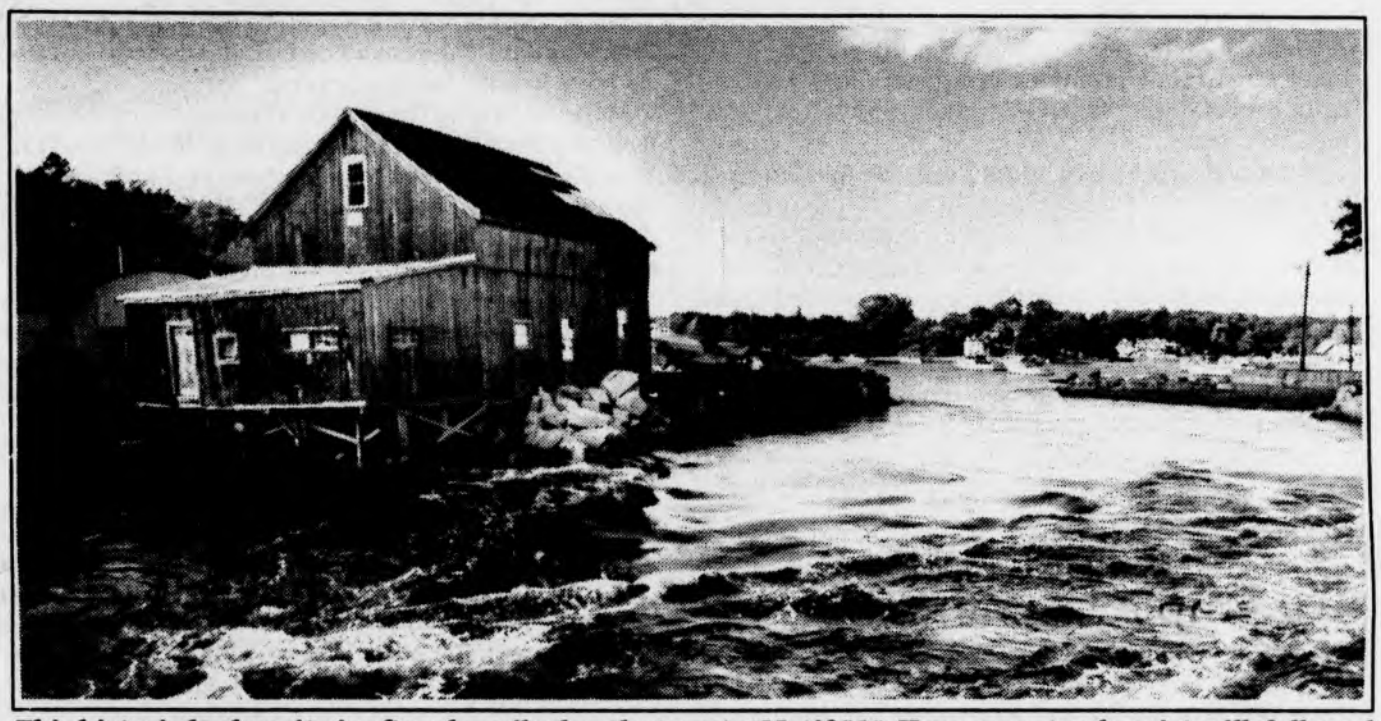
"Then he can have a chance to understand what the public's concerns are," Donzé said.

Hanney, who bought the property from Peoples Bank of Brockton which had foreclosed on the prior owner, has tried to evict Mariner Railway owner Frank Carey.

Carey's lawyer, Peter I. Eleey of Quincy, said the court found in favor of Carey.

"The owner has indicated he may try again," Eleey said. "My client has been right there for 25 years and he'd like to stay."

Hanney's attorney Charles Humphreys of Cohasset did not return Mariner phone calls Tuesday.



This historic harbor site is often described as the town's "Motif #1". Here once stood a grist mill, followed by a lumber yard. The parcel, which was recently sold, has housed a boat yard since the turn of the century. The large building in the photo dates back to the mid-19th century.

prefer. The result, he said, is women from Cohasset and surrounding towns have discovered it is much easier to pop downtown, zip into the pharmacy and pick up what you need instead of driving to Braintree or Hanover, parking in a cavernous lot and hiking from one end of the mall to the other.

Harrison owns a second pharmacy located in Marshfield.

"It is slightly different," he said. "I try to be aware of the needs and desires of my customers."

One thing unique to Cohasset are the larger-than-life photographs of the headliners at the South Shore Music Circus gracing the walls. Where else but Colonial Pharmacy will you find a youthful Steve and Eydie eyeballing lantern-jawed Jay Leno or country music's Barbara Mandrell facing off against George Carlin and Joan Baez?

But the real heart of Harrison's operation is the pharmaceutical counter. For nearly 35 years he has been dispensing prescriptions and helping his customers stay healthy. He adds the personal touches people remember from the good old days.

"I know practically everyone by their first name," he said. And he tries to keep tabs on the other medications customers take so he can warn against drug interactions.

If customers forget the doctor's instructions, Harrison is happy to take the time to explain everything they need to know about dosages and side effects. Most importantly, when someone is alone and sick, Cohasset Colonial can step in.

"We can deliver to their door which is something the big chains simply cannot do," he said. "We can take the time to talk with them."

That kind of personal service has been the hallmark of small, independent pharmacies. It has kept customers coming back and it has kept these Mom and Pop operations competitive with the big chains.

But the independent pharmacies are at great risk of going the way of the neighborhood meat market and the dry goods store.

In an attempt to stay competitive and stay alive, independent pharmacies have banded together. A cooperative purchasing agreement allows them to buy in bulk. State and regional professional associations give them a voice in the legislature. But it is not enough.

"An average of three or four [independently-owned pharmacies] go out of business every week," Harrison said. "There won't be any more in three or four years. As in nature, Harrison warns, extinction is forever.

"When we are gone, there will be a monopoly or oligopoly of big drug store chains. Then the chains won't offer the same prices as before and it won't be like a 10 percent increase either," he warned. "There will be no cost containment."

The independent stores are being pushed out of business by health insurance companies who force patients to buy prescriptions from large chains or mail order supply houses, Harrison said. And the irony is the independents can meet or beat the prices charged by those companies.

"Competition with the large chains has never been a problem," Harrison said. "We can match their prices, but the insurance companies won't let us. It's very shortsighted."

Part of the problem, Harrison said, is company benefits managers are sold a bill of goods by insurance salesmen.

"Most benefit managers don't know how to buy health insurance packages," he said. "Most small companies buy what the salesman tells them to buy."

Unfortunately, he added, a good 40 percent of the health insurance premium disappears into administrative costs and waste through inefficiency and mismanagement.

"Administrative costs should only be five percent," he declared.

The independents have been fighting for a piece of the prescription pie, but they are up against the well-financed, politically connected insurance companies.

"If we hire one lobbyist, they hire 10. If we spend $10,000, they spend $1 million, Harrison said.

Harrison has no idea how President Clinton's health reform package will affect small pharmacies.

"No one has seen the bill," he said. "I can't comment about something I have no information about."

Ultimately, Harrison said, the issue distills down to a question of freedom of choice for consumers. And consumers, he added, must take some responsibility for what happens to their health care choices.

"If employees don't tell their employers or benefits managers they are unsatisfied and unhappy with t[illegible] coverage, nothing is going to happen," Harrison s[illegible] "They have to tell the employer they want to be able to go to their local pharmacy."

As grim as the prognosis may be, Harrison has no plans to go anywhere.

The one advantage he has over many other small town pharmacies, is good foot traffic on Main Street. Residents come to the village to eat in the restaurants, trade in the other stores, take part in events at the Community Center and art center and enjoy the ambience of the common with its duck pond. And that brings them to his pharmacy.

The only disadvantage to life just off Cohasset common, is the village grew up before the era of the automobile. With limited parking space available and limited land to expand it, more and more vehicles clog the parking spaces in front of his store for long periods of time.

While Harrison welcomes as good for business the fact people spend the day in the village, he wishes those who have strong legs would remember those who don't.

"More and more of our population are elderly people," Harrison said. "They want do be independent, but they do have trouble getting around."

Maneuvering up the steps and across the cobblestone walkway from the back parking lot to Main Street may be a piece of cake for young adults and children, but the elderly simply don't have the strength, balance or dexterity to do so safely. Harrison wishes we'd keep that in mind the next time we drive into the village.

And as long as the kids, young families and elderly people still find their way to his door, Harrison promises to keep selling pills, perfumes, powder puffs and change purses.

Fighting eating disorders is a critical battle . . .

If left untreated, Anorexia Nervosa or Bulimia Nervosa can cause an irregular heartbeat, heart failure, and even death.

To educate the public and especially parents about the problem, the Cohasset Social Service League, Board of Health, and Parent/School Organization have joined forces to present a free panel discussion on eating disorders "Anorexia-Bulimia: A Dilemma in the 90s" at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 20 in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church. For information about the program, call 383-0771. Experts on the disorder will participate in the discussion.

Cohasset schools' Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill says the public is beginning to see the connection between the media images kids see — and behaviors they learn.

"We're starting to hear about lobbies to put pressure on the media to cut down on violence in TV and movies," Gill notes.

But the barrage of ultra-thin female bodies being marketed to impressionable teenage girls has yet to get attention from lobbyists.

Gill and public health nurse Judy Fitzsimmons say today kids are more vulnerable to media images than ever.

Broken homes and/or busy parents with little time for guidance coupled with bombardment of negativity in everything from song lyrics to feature films contributes to an increase in health problems.

Anorexia nervosa (characterized by self-starvation) — and bulimia nervosa (with episodes of binge eating) are taking the health and sometimes the lives away from teenagers who have "bought into" the pictures of perfection sold to them.

Two students at Cohasset Junior/Senior High have been hospitalized for eating disorders and far more are flirting with disaster, Gill says.

The effects of eating disorders are often not apparent until real damage is done. Bulimia sufferers fluctuate between normal weight and overweight.

"Most (sufferers) are not spotted by the teachers or by me — their friends come forward," Gill explains.

Fitzsimmons adds that a girls at 12, 13 or 14 years old who may be retaining "some baby fat" should accept themselves for the way they are.

"They don't realize that they'll look different at 18. In five years, their bodies change," she explains.

Both Gill and Fitzsimmons say that education is one way to counteract the media image that being thin equates with beauty.

Public pressure can also be an awesome force.

At one time, smoking advertisements were the norm — but that's no longer the case. Because of the health effects of smoking, television cigarette advertising was banned in the early 1970s.

"When you look at smoking 20 years ago and today — many kids do not smoke," Fitzsimmons says.

The Oct. 20 program is geared toward adults, although children and teenagers are welcome, Fitzsimmons says. A program for students in grades seven-through-12 was presented at the high school last spring..

Occupation: Cohasset High School senior and co-[illegible]in of the CHS varsity cheerleaders.

Best day of your life: August 5, 1993 — the day Becky Callentine and I made the Cheerleading All-Stars. (Becky and Melissa were recently selected to the Universal Cheerleading Association All-Star team and they will travel to London, UK after Christmas to perform in the New Year's Day parade).

Most embarrassing moment: At last week's football game I dropped the paper "Go Cohasset!" banner just before seconds before the football players were to break through it as they ran onto the field.

Goal: To graduate from college and to be able to be a cheerleader in college.

Favorite season: Fall. I'm from Arizona and I've never seen a fall before.

Best vacation: Last year during February's school break I went skiing for the first time.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: Tourists who go sightseeing by driving through Cohasset.

Favorite book: I like all Shakespeare's plays.

Favorite movie: "Beauty and the Beast."

Biggest worry: Not getting into my first-choice college.

Favorite place: California beaches.

Come to a breast health screening Oct. 20.

Although breast cancer strikes one in nine women, it's also true that more than one million American women have battled breast cancer and won. Breast cancer is one of the most curable forms of cancer when detected early enough.

The keys to early detection are a professional breast exam, monthly self breast exams, and mammography. You can get all three on Wednesday, Oct. 20, when South Shore Hospital offers a breast health screening that will include a breast exam, instruction on how to perform a self breast exam, and, if recommended, mammography. The screening will be from 4-8 p.m. in the hospital's ambulatory care unit. Refreshments will be served.

Appointments are required and may be made by calling (617) 340-8239 after Wednesday, Oct. 6.

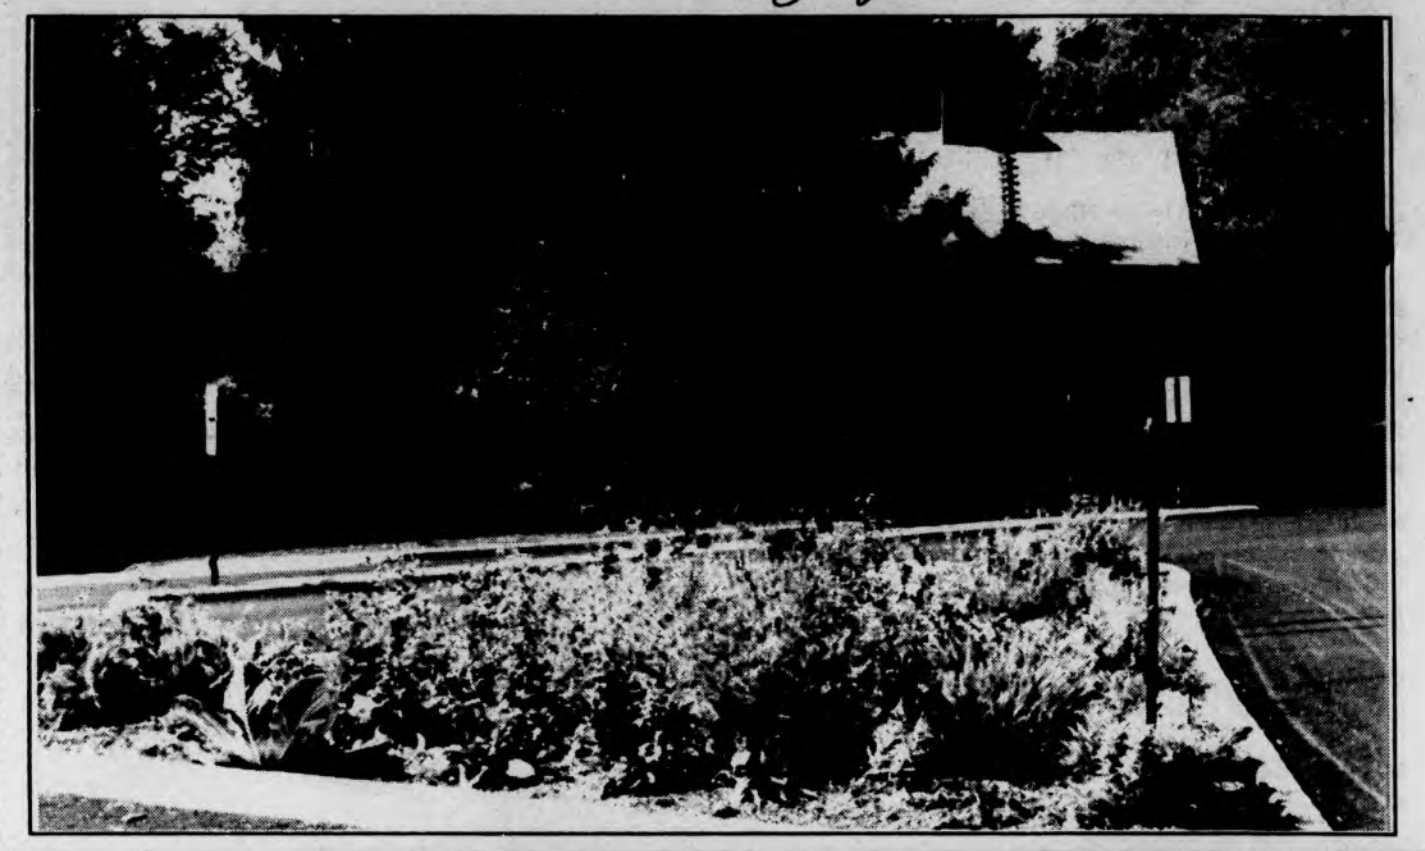
The Grand Tour

with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863



Linda Snowdale asked that we feature this planting at the David H. Parker Square at the intersection of Beechwood & King Streets. This triangular island, also known as Reed's Corner, is planted and maintained by Cohasset resident and landscape architect, Amy Roebuck. When the island was constructed, Amy decided she'd like to plant the island to resemble a wildflower meadow in keeping with the historical tradition of this side of town as primarily farm land. She certainly has captured this feeling with her planting of Black-eyed Susans, white Clematis, Sunray, yellow and pink Yarrow, violets, cosmos, Swan River Everlastings, blue Bachelor Buttons, Shasta Daisy, lilies and ornamental grasses. Amy has involved the residents of King and Beechwood Streets by hand delivering letters requesting donations and was delighted to receive about $300 and the help of a Brownie troop in planting spring bulbs. She is now looking for a stone container, perhaps a horse trough, that could be used as a planter on the island. She also needs help planting spring bulbs this fall. If you can help, please call Amy at her Norwell office, 659-4409. If you'd like to make a monetary donation, checks should be made out to Reed's Corner Project, c/o Elizabeth Ripley, Treasurer, Town Hall, Cohasset 02025. The island looks lovely and we owe Amy a debt of gratitude for her time and energy in making this a special spot in town that we can all enjoy. Thank you, Amy!

Amateur gardeners to meet

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet at 12:15 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 19 at St. Anthony's parking lot to carpool to the Church Hill Herbary in Norwell. Ms. Darlene Beauvais, herbalist, will give a talk and refreshments will be served.

Garden club will meet

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Oct. 26 at Walton Roger's Hall, St. Stephen's Church.

David Clapp, Director of the South Shore Regional Center of the Mass Audubon Society in Marshfield will present "Landscaping for Wildlife." Coffee will be served at 9 a.m..

Garden club plants bulbs

On Tuesday, Oct. 5 more than 25 members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, under the direction of Mrs. Phyllis Peck, continued their beautification project at the lighthouse keeper's residence on Government Island.

The club purchased, and the group planted, over 700 spring bulbs in the large slope garden they have constructed in front of the cottage.

In addition to the flowering plants and ornamental shrubs and grasses, the entire slope now promises to be a mass of color in the spring enhancing this charming residence. The garden club is planning a standard flower show at the cottage in May.

❑ Remember Joe and Jamie Hoffman, sons of Joyce and Joe Hoffman of Pond Street fame?

Well, they are hard at work at the new "Down Under Pub" on West Main St. in Durham, hoping to attract Duke University students after their hard day of studying and classes.

Joe, along with two pals, have purchased a former coffee house to make a friendly neighborhood place to watch a game or listen to the laser-disc jukebox and have a beer. Joe and Jamie both have had lots of experience; remember when they were working at Hugo's Lighthouse? Joe is also part-owner of a bar in Chicago.

So, next time you are in Durham, stop in and say hello and wish them well.

❑ For all of the students that are asking "Where is Mr. Kuntz?", he has retired. Due to restricted mobility caused by rheumatoid arthritis, Dennis retired as a physical education teacher.

He will miss the students but "will always have warm memories and acquaintances that will comfort him during retirement," he says.

Dennis was in the school system from 1964 until 1993, you know how many students that means!

We surely wish you well in your retirement Dennis; we will certainly miss you!!

❑ Gosh, 60 Elm St. will be swinging this month, there are so many birthdays!! The October birthdays will be celebrated by Marion Smith, Eileen Kurtz, Lillian Lincoln, Dorothy Roberts and Rose DeMello.

Here's a toast to all of you fine ladies, have grand birthdays and many more of them.

❑ Kit and Sue Megathlin were in town last week, they looked great! All three of their sons are married now, they are grandparents, and they are happy!!

Kit still has his practice in Portland, Maine, and Sue is really busy doing all sorts of volunteer work. It was great to see them, wish they would visit more often!

❑ Harold Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. William Adams of 178 North Main St., recently began studies as a first year student at Hamilton College in Clinton, NY.

He was selected from more than 3,100 applications to the college, and joins a class of 460 that has representation from approximately 33 states and 24 countries.

❑ The Jimmy Fund is going to pay tribute to Ken Coleman next month, Nov. 10, at the Sheraton Boston Hotel.

Ken's 40-year career as a major league sports broadcaster has earned him the accolades, respect and friendship of countless New Englanders, young and old.

The evening will be a major benefit for the Jimmy Fund, appropriate as Ken's long association with New England's own great charity has been a vital factor in the Jimmy Fund's success. He is a lifetime member of the Jimmy Fund Board of Trustees. Bobby Doerr, Bill White, Dom DiMaggio, Mel Parnell, Johnny Pesky and Bud Leavitt will be some of the celebrities that will come from far and wide to honor Ken.

Jess Cain will add his inimitable wit to the festivities, and other greats may be expected from Ken's career with the Red Sox, Cleveland Browns, Cleveland Indians, Cincinnati Reds and college football with Ohio State and Harvard.

Tickets are $75, payable to the Jimmy Fund. Call Jeff Hubbard at the Jimmy Fund at (617) 632-3300 or Mary-Ellen Maich at 383-6553 for tickets and/or more information.

❑ Elizabeth S. Corcoran is enrolled as a student at Governor Dummer Academy, America's oldest boarding school. She is a junior this year and the daughter of Mrs. Karen Corcoran of Pleasant St. and Mr. Ken F. Corcoran of Harcourt St. Boston.

❑ This is the week that the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce sends their "Little Piece of Home" packages to all froshs at college. Kids have actually been calling and writing home asking for them; you know they will be thrilled.

Hats off to the Chamber for their efforts.

Here's to a long and happy life, you are a wonderful couple!

❑ Remember when I told you last week about Monica Ann Sinopoli, daughter of Steve and Kathleen, and granddaughter of Mary Sinopoli?

What I didn't tell you was that 53 minutes before Monica was born, her cousin, Jamie Lynn Sinopoli, was born at Goddard Hospital. She weighed 6 lbs., 10 oz., and is the daughter of Tom and Judy Sinopoli.

Imagine, going from one to three grandchildren in less than an hour! WOW!

❑ Congratulations to Ellen Malloy!

Ellen won the Cohasset Golf Club ladies' championship, defeating Melissa Brown Hobson, Sunday, Oct. 10.

Many remember that Ellen's dad, Bill Malloy, died suddenly while watching Ellen compete in the championship final; she completed the match today.

Surely Bill is smiling down on Ellen and her big win, her second championship in a row!

Art center to hold show

The annual Blue Ribbon Members Show opens at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd, Cohasset Friday, Oct. 15. A reception will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. open to the public. The exhibit will be on display through Nov. 12.

The annual meeting of the art center will be at 5 p.m. Friday, Oct. 15. New board members will be installed and the winner of the Shirley Neer Award for excellence in teaching will be announced.

All members are invited to participate in the Blue Ribbon Members Show which features paintings, drawings, photography, sculpture, 3-dimensional and multi-media. Membership at the art center is open to everyone. Gallery artist membership is offered twice a year through a juried process.

The art center is a non-profit art and educational organization serving all of the South Shore. The galleries are open free to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For information call 383-9548.

Writing course offered

Patriot Ledger columnist Cathy Corcoran will offer a one-day course on "Writing from the Heart" on Saturday, Oct. 23, from 9 a.m. til 1 p.m. at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St. The cost is $25. The public is invited to attend. Pre-registration is recommended, but registrations will also be accepted on Oct. 23 on a first-come first-served basis.

Corcoran said that the class will incorporate in-class writing, music, meditation, and memory exercises to facilitate participants' writing. "The class is for 'closet writers,'" she said, "for people interested in beginning or continuing journal writing, or anyone who wants to learn to silence their internal 'inner editor,' and write from the heart." She also said that the tone of the class will be "gentle, non-critical, and will respect participants' confidentiality."

In addition to writing for the Patriot Ledger, Corcoran is also a free-lance public relations/ marketing consultant. Her local clients include the Hingham Visiting Nurse, Norwell Visiting Nurse, South Shore Elder Services, Acom Advertising, and others. Her column, "Mom's the Word," has appeared on the family pages of the Patriot Ledger since 1988.

For more information on "Writing from the Heart," call the Hingham Community Center at 749-9786.

A lecture on Reubens

"The Age of Reubens," will be the subject of a slide lecture at 10:30 a.m., Thursday, Nov. 4 in Upper Weld Hall, St. John the Evangelist Church, 176 Main St., Hingham. A 9:30 a.m. continental breakfast will be offered. Miriam Braverman of the Museum of Fine Arts will be the speaker.

Reservations should be made by Nov. 1. Call Ann Blanchard at 749-8374 or Marion Marsh at 749-1316 for more information.

Organ recital planned

John and Carolyn Skelton, professional musicians, will perform an organ recital at 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 24 at Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave.

The public is invited to share the music created on the 1964 Aeolian-Skinner pipe organ. Donations of $6 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens will be accepted.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Remember Joe and Jamie Hoffman, sons of Joyce and Joe Hoffman of Pond Street fame?

Well, they are hard at work at the new "Down Under Pub" on West Main St. in Durham, hoping to attract Duke University students after their hard day of studying and classes.

Joe, along with two pals, have purchased a former coffee house to make a friendly neighborhood place to watch a game or listen to the laser-disc jukebox and have a beer. Joe and Jamie both have had lots of experience; remember when they were working at Hugo's Lighthouse? Joe is also part-owner of a bar in Chicago.

So, next time you are in Durham, stop in and say hello and wish them well.

❑ For all of the students that are asking "Where is Mr. Kuntz?", he has retired. Due to restricted mobility caused by rheumatoid arthritis, Dennis retired as a physical education teacher.

He will miss the students but "will always have warm memories and acquaintances that will comfort him during retirement," he says.

Dennis was in the school system from 1964 until 1993, you know how many students that means!

We surely wish you well in your retirement Dennis; we will certainly miss you!!

❑ Gosh, 60 Elm St. will be swinging this month, there are so many birthdays!! The October birthdays will be celebrated by Marion Smith, Eileen Kurtz, Lillian Lincoln, Dorothy Roberts and Rose DeMello.

Here's a toast to all of you fine ladies, have grand birthdays and many more of them.

❑ Kit and Sue Megathlin were in town last week, they looked great! All three of their sons are married now, they are grandparents, and they are happy!!

Kit still has his practice in Portland, Maine, and Sue is really busy doing all sorts of volunteer work. It was great to see them, wish they would visit more often!

❑ Harold Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. William Adams of 178 North Main St., recently began studies as a first year student at Hamilton College in Clinton, NY.

He was selected from more than 3,100 applications to the college, and joins a class of 460 that has representation from approximately 33 states and 24 countries.

'Mr. Soccer' himself, R. Lawrence Shultz, proudly displays his "Go Blue Cohasset Skippers" bumper sticker. Stickers are available at any Cohasset athletic event for $1 each. Say yes to Cohasset student athletes! Be a fan and buy a sticker.

Ken's 40-year career as a major league sports broadcaster has earned him the accolades, respect and friendship of countless New Englanders, young and old.

The evening will be a major benefit for the Jimmy Fund, appropriate as Ken's long association with New England's own great charity has been a vital factor in the Jimmy Fund's success. He is a lifetime member of the Jimmy Fund Board of Trustees. Bobby Doerr, Bill White, Dom DiMaggio, Mel Parnell, Johnny Pesky and Bud Leavitt will be some of the celebrities that will come from far and wide to honor Ken.

Jess Cain will add his inimitable wit to the festivities, and other greats may be expected from Ken's career with the Red Sox, Cleveland Browns, Cleveland Indians, Cincinnati Reds and college football with Ohio State and Harvard.

Tickets are $75, payable to the Jimmy Fund. Call Jeff Hubbard at the Jimmy Fund at (617) 632-3300 or Mary-Ellen Maich at 383-6553 for tickets and/or more information.

❑ Elizabeth S. Corcoran is enrolled as a student at Governor Dummer Academy, America's oldest boarding school. She is a junior this year and the daughter of Mrs. Karen Corcoran of Pleasant St. and Mr. Ken F. Corcoran of Harcourt St. Boston.

❑ Mr. Soccer himself, R. Lawrence Shultz, proudly displays his "Go Blue Cohasset Skippers" bumper sticker. The stickers are available at any Cohasset athletic event for $1 each. Say "yes" to our Cohasset student athletes! Be a fan and buy a sticker!

❑ This is the week that the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce sends their "Little Piece of Home" packages to all froshs at college. Kids have actually been calling and writing home asking for them; you know they will be thrilled.

Hats off to the Chamber for their efforts.

Here's to a long and happy life, you are a wonderful couple!

❑ Remember when I told you last week about Monica Ann Sinopoli, daughter of Steve and Kathleen, and granddaughter of Mary Sinopoli?

What I didn't tell you was that 53 minutes before Monica was born, her cousin, Jamie Lynn Sinopoli, was born at Goddard Hospital. She weighed 6 lbs., 10 oz., and is the daughter of Tom and Judy Sinopoli.

Imagine, going from one to three grandchildren in less than an hour! WOW!

❑ Congratulations to Ellen Malloy!

Ellen won the Cohasset Golf Club ladies' championship, defeating Melissa Brown Hobson, Sunday, Oct. 10.

Many remember that Ellen's dad, Bill Malloy, died suddenly while watching Ellen compete in the championship final; she completed the match today.

Surely Bill is smiling down on Ellen and her big win, her second championship in a row!

❑ Jeff Hartwell makes the news this week—he graduated from Northeastern University, earning himself a MBA. Jeff graduated from Colby College in 1991.

Good luck in the business world, Jeff; we know you'll do well!

That's the news for this week, please let us know all of your news, we love reading it.

Writing course offered

Patriot Ledger columnist Cathy Corcoran will offer a one-day course on "Writing from the Heart" on Saturday, Oct. 23, from 9 a.m. til 1 p.m. at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St. The cost is $25. The public is invited to attend. Pre-registration is recommended, but registrations will also be accepted on Oct. 23 on a first-come first-served basis.

Corcoran said that the class will incorporate in-class writing, music, meditation, and memory exercises to facilitate participants' writing. "The class is for 'closet writers,'" she said, "for people interested in beginning or continuing journal writing, or anyone who wants to learn to silence their internal 'inner editor,' and write from the heart." She also said that the tone of the class will be "gentle, non-critical, and will respect participants' confidentiality."

In addition to writing for the Patriot Ledger, Corcoran is also a free-lance public relations/ marketing consultant. editorial

Whose game is it, anyway?

Two concerned Cohasset citizens have apparently been given the runaround by those who should know better.

Herbert Jason and Jeffrey Donzé tried to present petitions to selectmen at their public meeting two weeks ago. The petitions were signed by residents who don't want to see an end to the Border Street boat yard.

The men were on the agenda Sept. 27 but were headed off at the pass by the Selectmen Chairman and Executive Secretary.

The board needs time to review the petition, the men were told separately.

Mr. Donzé had rushed back from an out-of-town trip to make an appearance. He arrived at the selectmen's meeting ten minutes early only to be told "see ya later."

Mr. Jason received the same message earlier in the day.

Then low and behold the men's names were on the agenda for the following week (Oct. 4) — but no one from the town's top office bothered to inform them. So Mr. Jason and Mr. Donzé were a no show.

So at that meeting, selectmen had the opportunity to accept the petitions without comment from the audience — which they did.

The matter doesn't concern their board, they said.

While zoning matters relating to private property may not fall under selectmen's jurisdiction — we don't think it's beyond their realm to hear concerns of the electorate.

And with Government Island and the Hagerty property in the news of late — we think the townspeople would be interested to learn that more changes might be on the horizon in the harbor.

Mr. Jason and Mr. Donzé spent a lot of time gathering signatures for their petitions. They have legitimate concerns and deserve to be heard by the town's chief executive officers. And rightly, they are a bit miffed at being brushed off by those who should be serving them.

It was rude of selectmen not to allow the men to appear when they were originally scheduled. If the selectmen thought they needed a week or two to think about the issue — they should have stated that publicly and set a date certain when Mr. Donzé and Mr. Jason could come back.

In the future, it would be wise for the board to remember all those whom they're elected to represent.

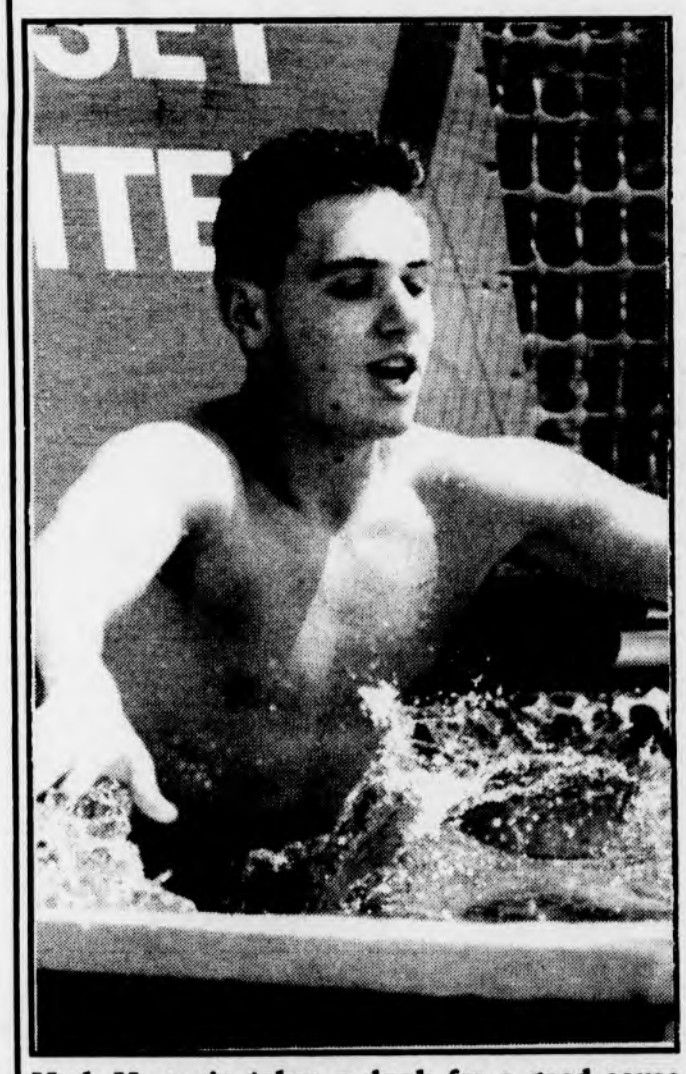
Community Lights

Here is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• Girl Scout adult help is needed. If any old Girl Scouts would like to reach back into their past, adult volunteers are needed as leaders, assistant leaders, and troop level advisors. Call Becky Bates-MacArthur at 383-0362 or Pat Stens at 828-3750.

Cohasset is also in need of a town-wide cookie chairperson.



Mark Mercurio takes a dunk for a good cause during the Fireman's Muster in August. The dunk tank was sponsored by Cohasset Firefighters with some proceeds benefitting the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The individual will disperse materials, train troop chairmen, distribute cookies and collect records of sales. If Cohasset does not find a chairman, the girls will not sell cookies this year. If interested contact Pat Stens at 828-3750.

• The Cohasset food Pantry is serving an increasing number of local families. On the basis of current and expected future needs, food pantry organizers are recruiting additional volunteers to handle collection and distribution of food. The pantry, which is supported by local churches and social services is located in the rear of the Second Congregational Church on Highland Ave. next to Town Hall and distributes food each Tuesday from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 7-8 p.m.

At present the pantry helps about 20 local families by providing good, quality supplemental food and household supplies. The food comes from donations by churches and other organizations, individuals, and through purchases at the Boston Food Bank.

Volunteers are needed especially for the hours when the Pantry is open and are asked for only a minimal amount of time convenient to them. Anyone wishing to learn more about volunteering at the Pantry, may call Annette Sawchuck at 383-0050.

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

Volunteers are asked to pledge only one trip per month scheduled at their convenience and are covered by blanket insurance and may be reimbursed on a mileage basis if necessary.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• If you have some time to share and want to make a difference in your town — then how about volunteering to serve on a town board?

The following committees have vacancies: cable-TV council (4); handicapped commission (1), zoning appeals board (1 associate), school facilities committee (1), Government Island study committee (1), water resources protection committee (1), and mosquito control committee (1).

If interested, please stop by the selectmen's office or call 383-9900 and leave you name and phone number. The member of the board of selectmen, who serves a liaison to the committee you're interested in serving on, will get back to you.

• Compassionate human services professionals and other caring special persons needed to volunteer as facilitators for self-help parents' groups in the Weymouth area. These groups provide support for parents under stress who want to improve their relationships with their children. One evening a week commitment. Training and support provided. Call 337-7916 or 1-800-882-1250.

• Volunteers are needed at the community center (contact Stephanie Church, 383-0088); Meals on Wheels, (contact the Social Service League, 383-0771), Cohasset Consignment Shop (Andy Merrill, 383-0687), Council on Aging (383-9112), and Senior Shuttle bus drivers (383-9112).

(Please send your volunteer opportunities to Community Lights, the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025).

SUE CONNOLLY'S NEWS

SHINE News—The September issue of the Senior Vista news made reference to an organization that was selling a membership plan to Cohasset residents. The organization was the Retired Homeowners Association of America (ARHOA).

ARHOA was selling annual membership to residents for $595 per person. According to their literature, these dues entitled members to various benefits, i.e. Medicare information, legal and financial advice. This optional benefit required an initial fee of $6,400 per person. The purchase of the home companion care benefit would allow the subscriber to purchase home care services at a reduced rate when they needed care at home.

The ARHOA literature went to great lengths to state that this was not an insurance product. It looked a lot like insurance to the staff at the Council on Aging. As a result, we asked the office of the Attorney General to initiate an investigation into the legitimacy of the organization. The Attorney General office recently issued a statement regarding ARHOA. The office is conducting a full investigation of the organization and ARHOA has agreed to cooperate. In addition, the organization has ceased marketing in Massachusetts. If anyone purchased membership with ARHOA, the Attorney General's Office would like to know about it.

Please contact the SHINE program at 383-9116 for more information.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

DEPRECIATION CHANGE

QUESTION: How has the Tax Reform Act changed the depreciation schedule for real estate?

ANSWER: Under prior rules, both commercial and residential real estate were depreciable over a 19-year period. On top of that, real estate could be written off at an accelerated rate that produced bigger deductions in the early years of ownership than in later years.

The Reform Act increased the depreciation period to 27 1/2 years for residential property and 31 1/2 years for commercial property. Accelerated depreciation has been eliminated. All property must now be written off using equal yearly deductions.

Skippers hope to turn hard luck good

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Just call them the Hard Luck Gang.

With its 2-3-4 record, Cohasset just may have the most deceiving spot in the South Shore League standings.

Take the Skippers' excruciating 1-1 tie last Thursday against Carver. Cohasset outplayed the Crusaders and took the early lead when Cilla Goff directed a Katie Ridge pass between the posts in the opening minutes of the game. Head coach Debby Bostwick then put an extra defensive player on the field and shut down Carver's offense for the majority of the game. But the Crusaders managed to elude Skipper goaltender Gina Rosano with a free hit that was tipped with a mere six minutes left. Cohasset was left with another tie.

"We have no luck," Bostwick said bluntly, summing up her team's season to date.

If the tie against Carver was tough to swallow, the Skippers were choking after Scituate squeezed out a 1-0 victory, two days earlier.

The Sailors scored the only goal of the contest three minutes into the game when Rosano lost sight of the ball as players battled for it in a dirt section of the field near the net. The dust shielded her view and ball turned out to be the same color of the ball, making it impossible for Rosano to concentrate on its location on the field. The shot was a dribbler that made it past Rosano on her weak side.

Statistically, the Skippers outplayed Scituate throughout the entire contest. Cohasset had 10 shots to the Skippers' nine, but had a wide advantage in corner shots, nine to two.

"We had chance after chance after chance to put the ball into the net," Bostwick said. "If someone had to win the game we should have."

Bostwick has been getting strong performances from Ridge, who she believes played her best game of the season against Scituate. Nikki Peterson, at wing and inner, has done well, as has link Jo Hurley. What's more the team is communicating well on the field and marking players better than they have all season.

The marking was expected to be a major part of Cohasset's game plan in their Oct. 13 game against highly-regarded Hull. The Pirates, who are battling Hanover for the SSL title have a major scoring threat in Michelle Frazier. Frazier, the pint-sized SSL All-Star, scored three goals against the Skippers in their first meeting of the season.

Satter: Every game is critical

From here on in, every game is a must.

"Every game is ultra important because we are fighting for points for the tournament," Satter said. "I'm cautiously optimistic. We're playing real well right now. The things we're starting to do are the things we wanted to accomplish."

The goals, which were few and far between in the early going, are suddenly flowing freely for Cohasset. The Skippers are a combined 15-1 in consecutive wins over Hull (8-1) and Norton (7-0).

Satter is pleased that his team played its own game during the lop-sided wins, rather than dropping down a level to the notch of the other team. "That's a very good sign," he said.

Cohasset has also been powered by two of the top five scorers in the SSL. Erin Murphy leads the league with 18 points (11 goals, 7 assists), while Meghan Rhodes is holding down the fourth slot with 10 overall points (4 goals, 6 assists). The goaltending for the Skippers has also been steady. Emily Henderson is the No. 4 ranked netminder in the league with a 1.88 GAA.

Defensively, the Skippers are also solid, on par with the top-scoring forwards. Co-Captain Sarah Atherton and Corinna McMackin, the team's third leading scorer, have stood out in the unglamorous positions.

"The kids who play defense," explained Satter, "it's tough. There's not a lot of glory in it."

Tracey O'Connor has picked up the pace of her game and had her best afternoon of the season against Norton, where she banged home a hattrick.

"People are really starting to step up," Satter said. Our scoring is well-balanced. On any given day a player steps up to the plate, so to speak, and gets the job done."

Cohasset faces a major test against Karen Curran and the Green Wave. Curran, the second leading scorer in the SSL will be watched, but Satter doesn't intend to revolve his squad's plan of attack around one player.

"I believe it's more important what we have to do rather than countering what they're going to do," he said.

Abington defeated the Skippers in their first meeting, but that was the game Henderson debuted in goal for the first time ever. Satter is more confident heading into the game this time.

"We've had some loses where we felt we played reasonably well," he said. "The kids are at the point where they think they can beat Abington."

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

Relationships come and go, friends stumble in and out of your life and the hands of time keep on ticking.

There's only one thing that gives meaning to my pitiful life: Watching sports on TV.

I watch games whenever I can. And this time of year is the best because you have both college and pro football as well as hockey and the baseball playoffs.

The following is a guide to enjoying sports on TV.

Channel Surfing

Having a remote control is essential to fully enjoying sports on TV.

I think back to the dark ages when you had to physically get up to change the channel on the TV and I shudder.

I switch channels in between pitches, during time outs and sometimes just for fun.

Channel Surfing also provides good exercise for the wrists and is a strong memory enhancer. Without the remote, my life would not be the same.

Snacks

Watching a game on TV without food is like dancing without music.

And the best food is stuff you don't have to cook. Sure a big plate of chicken fajitas sounds like a great idea but by the time you finish cooking, the game is half over. Plus there is a sink full of dishes.

I prefer stuff in bags like chips, pretzels and popcorn. The above go well with dips and salsa, which also come in their own little containers.

When I finish a bag of chips, I simply throw it out and rip open another one.

But if you're starvin' like a Marvin and chips and dips aren't going to handle it, I recommend calling out for pizza.

Knowing that you can order a large steaming pie at all hours of the day makes me proud to be an American.

Do you think your average Russian can pick up his phone and have a pie with pepperoni at his door in 30 minutes or less?

Nyet.

Beverages

Seeing this is a family newspaper and we have a lot of readers under 21, I will only say that nothing hits the spot during a game than a cold beverage or two or six.

It is essential to have plenty of these beverages on hand if it is a big sports day.

Plus you can even have beverage games.

A favorite of mine was a game called "Mookie Wilson."

The rules for this game were simple, every time the announcer said the name "Mookie Wilson" everyone in the room had to drink an entire canned or bottled beverage of their choice.

A current variation on this game would be to play "Fred McGriff."

In addition, a fun beverage trick I like to pull is to ask someone who is watching the game with me if they want another beverage.

When they say, "Sure I do."

I reply, "Great, while you're at the Skippers. . .

This time, Bostwick doesn't intend to let the scrappy Pirate out of her sight. "The main thing is to shut down Frazier because she scored two or three goals against us last time."

Bostwick plans to substitute players early and often. An ideal situation, she says is to score early and hopefully contain the powerful Hull squad. Bostwick said she'd be happy with a tie. The Skippers would then have to win their five remaining games to qualify for the tournament.

"Hull plays a different set-up," Bostwick said. "We're going to play our normal set-up. When Hull is on our side we'll drop back and double-team Frazier. We're going to try to slow the pace of the dame down because it's a fast field."

A tie would be nice. The Hard Luck Gang could use it.

Step up to fitness

Step up to fitness this fall at the Cohasset Community Center. Join instructor Mary Doherty for an hour of aerobic step, strength, and flexibility training in a safe, non-competitive class.

Classes are Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 9 to 10 a.m. and Saturday at 8:45 a:m. at the center.

Babysitting is available. Drop-ins welcome. Monthly discounts are offered.

Gambling

Once again this is a family newspaper and all I can say is that gambling is illegal and is something that our society should eradicate.

With that said, I know some people who have cursed place kickers for days after they shanked an extra point which ruined a point spread and cost them 50 clams.

Sports and betting have been around since the day of "Shoeless Joe" and it is kind of hypocritical for everyone to condemn the activity when newspapers print point spreads and TV shows have people like "Jimmy the Greek" offering their picks for the week.

Gambling is a sickness that ruins lives and people who partake in this activity should reconsider their priorities in life.

Oh yeah, one more thing about gambling, take the Patriots and the points this week against the Oilers.

Pembroke's Kevin Stevens has to be one happy NHL hockey player.

His team, the Pittsburgh Penguins tore up his contract, which had two years running at $1 million per season, and extended it to five years at more than triple his $1 million base.

Not bad for someone who learned to play hockey at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Steven's signing of the contract extension has not been released to the press yet, but was confirmed by someone close to the Stevens family over the weekend.

Stevens, a two-time 50-goal scorer, helped lead the Penguins to Stanley Cups in '90 and '91.

Last season he severely injured his face in the playoffs when he fell to the ice after a receiving a hard body check.

Stevens underwent surgery over the summer and is now back at full strength.

He is playing with a face shield to protect his face from further injury.

Nikki Begin has been a terror against Atlantic Coast League teams this season for the Rockland High School girls' soccer squad. She's also no pushover when it comes to setting up interviews as I was quick to find out Friday evening.

The personable senior was planning to attend a Dartmouth University soccer game on Saturday and was scheduled to leave at 7:30 a.m. She was more than willing to be interviewed though — at 6:15 that morning! Seeing that both our schedules were full for the weekend, and I wanted to interview her in person rather than over the phone, it seemed liked my only alternative.

Then, as if I was granted a stay of execution at the 11th hour, Begin reminded me Monday was Columbus Day and she had the day off from school. Thankfully, Begin suggested we meet at 9 a.m. Not letting on that I was high-fiving everyone in sight in the newsroom I told her that hour was fine with me. Hey, I'm flexible. I was just happy I didn't have to prove it to a high-school girl who plays a physical sport.

My thanks go out to Christopher Columbus for discovering our country. His feat gave me an extra two hours of sleep. And Nikki, thank you for your compassion.

1983 Boston Marathon winner Greg Meyer of Hingham used a humorous analogy to describe a race against four-time Boston winner Bill Rodgers, during an interview two weeks ago. Meyer was locked in a dual with American Record holder Alberto Salazar in the closing stages of the 1983 Orange Bowl 10K in Miami with Rodgers trailing the pair.

"Salazar looked vulnerable at 4-1/2 miles, but I didn't have the confidence to go by him," Meyer said. "He ended up putting me in a coffin.

"The next thing I know Billy is chasing me like a shark in blood."

Salazar went on to set the American Record at 28:02. Meyer held the charging Rodgers off, 28:13 to 28:15. The shark came up a bit short.

Speaking of Salazar and Rodgers, former Greater Boston Track Club coach Bill Squires, one never without a story or funny interjection, once compared the mental toughness of Rodgers and Salazar to me.

"Salazar would run through a pane of glass," Squires said. "Rodgers would run through one too, but he'd think about it first." Judging from Squires's comment, I'd say neither one of them lacked the toughness to be world-class marathoners.

With the small staff in the sports department and the amount of teams Dave, correspondent Matt Bannen and myself have to cover, there is no possible way we can contact every coach every week. I've counted a total of 25 coaches from six towns that I have on my fall coaches list. And those are just the towns I cover. Dave has six towns he is responsible for as well.

I'm trying to get in touch with as many coaches as I can on an every-other-week basis, but I can't guarantee I'll get in touch with all of you. Any coach who wants to call me, however, can leave a message at my home number and I'll be sure to get back to you. The number is 848-3144. If I'm not at home, tell whoever answers to write your name and number. This way you're guaranteed coverage in the next issue.

Fitness classes set

The Community Center is offering two new aerobic classes Tuesday and Thursday mornings, 6 to 7 a.m. at the center. Ten class cards are available for $40 and there is a $5 drop-in fee. Call 383-0088 for more information.

Local gymnasts meet Karolyi

Gymnasts from the Cohasset Community Center "Gymnast In Motion" attended USGTC Camps at Mount Holyoke College in August. Coaching Director Ruthann Sargent-Ardizzoni and assistant Patti Donahue also joined the gymnasts as part of the staff at USGTC.

The young ladies participated daily in warm-ups and rotations on balance beam, uneven bars, vault, dance and floor exercise. The girls housed at the college for the week.

In addition to the gymnastic fun, they all received autographs from Olympic Coach Bela Karolyi, former Olympian Tim Daggett and former Russian Olympian Vladimir Novikov.

The gymnasts had so much fun they would like to return next summer for two weeks.

Bay State winter games to be held in February

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation and the Northern Berkshires Chamber of Commerce are proud to announce the return of the Bay State Winter Games, Massachusetts' own Olympic-style winter sports festival, to the Northern Berkshires for its ninth year. Competition in four sports and a variety of special events are scheduled to be held February 11, 12, and 13, 1994.

The 1994 winter events include: figure skating at Williams College in Williamstown, MA, alpine skiing at Jiminy Peak in Hancock, MA, cross country skiing at Swift River Touring Area in Cummington, MA, and Masters ice hockey, for players over 30 years old, is tentatively scheduled to be held at Vietnam Veterans Memorial Skating Rink in North Adams, MA.

Among the special events is the Bay State Skate, a figure skating exhibition featuring local and national figure skating stars, which will take place Saturday, Feb. 12 at 7:30 p.m. at Williams College Lansing Chapman Rink. Last year's Bay State Skate once again played to a capacity crowd. Star figure skater Mark Mitchell's spectacular routine highlighted the night's many sensational performances. Previous performers include seven U.S. Olympic figure skaters, most recently Nancy Kerrigan and Paul Wylie. This year's star performers are yet to be confirmed.

For information concerning the 1994 Bay State Winter Games call the Bay State Games office at (617) 727-3227.

Well-known storyteller, Valerie Devine will present "pre-school Stories with Mother Goose" from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. Friday, Oct. 15. at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main St. Children will become involved in familiar stories through song and fingerplay. Admission is $2. Call 383-0088.

Elder care support offered

"Understanding Your Aging Parents (or Partner)" is being offered from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday evenings at the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

The series is jointly sponsored by the Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate Councils on Aging, and by the Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Association. The public is invited.

On Tuesday, Oct. 19 legal and financial issues will be discussed, including estate planning, joint ownership, durable power of attorney, guardianship, health care proxy and trusts. The speaker will be attorney George Hayden.

Patricia Clark, Executive Director of the Hingham Visiting Nurse will discuss teaching family members to assist elders with personal care and methods of improving safety in the home on Oct. 26.

Information on community resources available to older people and their families will be presented on Nov. 2. This will include such things as daycare centers, home health services, support groups and insurance matters.

For information or to register, call the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Barn sale planned

There will be a barn sale to benefit the Bare Cove Fire Museum at the Hersey House Barn, 229 North St., Hingham from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23 — Rain or shine.

Children present service

Children at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 397 Gardner Street, Hingham, will present the morning worship service at 10 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 17.

The presentation, in song and narrative will tell of the children's love of the temple, culminating a year of study on temples and their role in sealing families together eternally.

The primary organization is under the direction of Kitty Lambert of Hingham, assisted by Janice Heiler and Karen Van der Werf, both of Cohasset. About 60 children, age 3 to 12 meet each Sunday at the LDS meeting house.

Appalachian project set

With such a tremendous growth of interest in the annual Appalachia Service Project trip, an information and pre-registration meeting will be held for the 1994 trip at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 17 at the Second Congregational Church, next to town hall.

All interested teenagers and their parents are encouraged to attend this meeting. Thirty-eight teenagers and 18 adults volunteered last year and about the same number will go this year.

Following a year of fund-raising, this week-long project involves home repair and improvement as well as interaction with the people of Appalachia. For information call Gary Ritts or Ami Argus at 383-0345.

Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church and his wife, Judy, will share a video presentation of their sabbatical in the western United States at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 17 in the audio-visual room at Cohasset High School.

Josh Cushing tries out an apparatus with his mom, Mary Ann, during a recent open house at the Community Center of Cohasset, which featured the center's Gymboree program for pre-schoolers. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Footage will include native American arts and crafts, Pow Wows, costumes, as well as scenery of western US. All are welcome.

Antiques to be sold

GS volunteers sought

Girl Scout adult help is needed. If any old Girl Scouts would like to reach back into their past, adult volunteers are needed as leaders, assistant leaders and troop level advisors.

Cookie addict needed

Cohasset is in need of a town-wide cookie chairperson. This individual will disperse materials, train troop chairmen, distribute cookies and collect records of sales. If Cohasset does not find a chairman, the girls will not sell cookies this year. If interested, contact Pat Stens at 828-3750.

Drama workshop offered

The recreation department will accept telephone registrations for a Saturday morning drama workshop scheduled to begin Saturday, Oct. 16 for boys and girls ages 7-12. The workshop will meet from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the town hall every Saturday through Nov. 20. The fee is $27.

To register call 383-6791.

Arts and crafts planned

Separate girls and boys arts and crafts classes will be taught by Mrs. Rebecca Bates McArthur. The girls program will meet Tuesday afternoons and the boys Wednesday afternoons, after school until 5 p.m. at the Osgood School. The fee for this six-week program is $23.

To register call the recreation department at 383-6791. Classes will begin in October.

Learn furniture refinishing

The recreation department is sponsoring furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization classes to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop. Class is scheduled to begin on Saturday, Oct. 23 The fee for the 10-hour program is $60 and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention. To register call 383-6971.

Diversity forum slated

A free public forum, "Building Alliances: How Heterosexuals Benefit from Creating a Safe Community for Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual People, is scheduled at 7 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 17 at the Old Sh Parish House 107 Main St., Hingham.

The speaker will be Rheua Stakely, consultant and trainer to businesses, non-profit organizations and schools. She was coordinator of Boston's first conference on lesbian, gay and bisexual workplace issues and was formerly an administrator at Phillips Exeter Academy

This is the third forum in the public information series "Affirming Diversity" sponsored by the Welcoming Congregation Committee of the Old Ship Church.

See 'Flying Santa' history

The Hull Lifesaving Museum invites you to have an enjoyable evening with "Flying Santa." The festivities will be at Donohue's Bayside Restaurant and Marina located at "2" A. Street, Hull, Thursday, Oct. 28 Cocktail hour from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.; dinner will be served at 7:30 sharp. A complete dinner from clam chowder, stuffed chicken, winter squash, Dutchess potatoes, strawberry ice cream puff and hot beverages will be served.

After dinner there is a slide show and lecture entitled the "History of Flying Santa 1929-1992." It will begin with the story of Captain Bill Wincapaw's original flight in December, 1929, and continue with 44 years of Edward Rowe Snow's Travels in New England, the West Coast and Great Lakes. We will finish with the museum's effort to maintain this tradition over the last decade.

Dorothy Bicknell, Mr. Snow's daughter, will be in attendance to relate her memories and stories of Mr Snow's travels as the Flying Santa.

The dinner and lecture will be available by reservation only. The cost will be $25 per person. The proceeds of the evening will be applied to the helicopter costs for this year's program. Santa will visit with the keepers of 18 lighthouses in four states this year.

Reservations may be made by calling Jean Morgan (617) 925-0783. Or, if you wish to make reservations by mail, please send a check for $25 per person to: The Flying Santa Dinner, c/o George Morgan, 791 Nantasket Ave., Hull, MA 02045.

Ann P. Swanborg of Cohasset has been named director of rehabilitation for all Logan Healthcare Management Group nursing centers.

Ms. Swanborg is responsible for all rehabilitation programs and services, staffing, training and interaction with rehabilitation departments of area hospitals and rehab centers. She brings to this role eight years of experience in rehabilitation and an additional four years as a litigation lawyer primarily representing clients in the health care field.

The new director graduated magna cum laude from Boston University with a Bachelor of Science degree in occupational therapy, and cum laude from the B. U. School of Law with a Juris Doctor degree. She is a member of the Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and American Bar Associations, and is a Massachusetts Licensed Occupational Therapist.

Previously with the Boston law firm of Gadsby and Hannah and the Providence law firm of Adler Pollcack & Sheehan, Inc., Ms. Swanborg's practice included representing clients before the Department of Health and the Department of Human Services, interpreting administrative rules and regulations and drafting health care legislation. At Braintree Hospital, she was assistant director and, later, acting director over the 45-member occupational therapy department.

Logan Healthcare Management Group currently owns and operates four nursing and rehabilitation centers: Elihu White in Braintree, Pond Meadow in Weymouth, Logan Center in South Weymouth and Crestview in Quincy. The company recently broke ground for a new $8 million, 135-bed facility in Peabody. It is slated for completion by August, 1994.

Edward Booth of Cohasset has joined Dickinson as an account manger according to Tom Champine, vice president/sales and marketing of the direct marketing firm. As account manager Mr. Booth will be responsible for managing the daily marketing and production needs for a variety of the firm's clients.

Prior to joining Dickinson, Mr. Booth was a sales manager with KayBee Toys.

Mr. Booth received his bachelor of arts degree in history from Macalester College, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Dickinson, with more than 40 years of experience, specializes in direct response marketing including advertising and sales promotion, creative planning, print production, database marketing, computer personalization and mailing services for a variety of clients that include Gulf Oil, Hyde Athletic, IDG, Ross-Simons Jewelers, New England Telephone and Xerox Imaging Systems.

Robert J. McCunney, M.D., M.P.H., of Jerusalem Road, has been named chief of Occupational and Environmental Medicine at Boston University Medical Center (BUMC). McCunney, who has been with BUMC since 1983, has served many roles during his tenure, including director of clinical services and director of the occupational health program.

McCunney received his master of public health degree from Harvard University and his medical degree from Thomas Jefferson University Medical School in Philadelphia. He then completed a residency in internal medicine at Northwestern University in Chicago and holds academic appointments at Boston University School of Medicine and Brown University, among others.

McCunney is actively involved in the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine and is a member of both the American Medical Association and the American Public Health Association.

McCunney's research into "sick building syndrome," or indoor air pollution, has gained widespread attention. His most recent findings indicate that poorly maintained ventilation systems contribute significantly to the syndrome.

Ann P. Swanborg of Cohasset has been named director of rehabilitation for all Logan Healthcare Management Group nursing centers.

Ms. Swanborg is responsible for all rehabilitation programs and services, staffing, training and interaction with rehabilitation departments of area hospitals and rehab centers. She brings to this role eight years of experience in rehabilitation and an additional four years as a litigation lawyer primarily representing clients in the health care field.

The new director graduated magna cum laude from Boston University with a Bachelor of Science degree in occupational therapy, and cum laude from the B. U. School of Law with a Juris Doctor degree. She is a member of the Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and American Bar Associations, and is a Massachusetts Licensed Occupational Therapist.

Previously with the Boston law firm of Gadsby and Hannah and the Providence law firm of Adler Pollcack & Sheehan, Inc., Ms. Swanborg's practice included representing clients before the Department of Health and the Department of Human Services, interpreting administrative rules and regulations and drafting health care legislation. At Braintree Hospital, she was assistant director and, later, acting director over the 45-member occupational therapy department.

Logan Healthcare Management Group currently owns and operates four nursing and rehabilitation centers: Elihu White in Braintree, Pond Meadow in Weymouth, Logan Center in South Weymouth and Crestview in Quincy. The company recently broke ground for a new $8 million, 135-bed facility in Peabody. It is slated for completion by August, 1994.

Edward Booth of Cohasset has joined Dickinson as an account manger according to Tom Champine, vice president/sales and marketing of the direct marketing firm. As account manager Mr. Booth will be responsible for managing the daily marketing and production needs for a variety of the firm's clients.

Prior to joining Dickinson, Mr. Booth was a sales manager with KayBee Toys.

Mr. Booth received his bachelor of arts degree in history from Macalester College, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Dickinson, with more than 40 years of experience, specializes in direct response marketing including advertising and sales promotion, creative planning, print production, database marketing, computer personalization and mailing services for a variety of clients that include Gulf Oil, Hyde Athletic, IDG, Ross-Simons Jewelers, New England Telephone and Xerox Imaging Systems.

Robert J. McCunney, M.D., M.P.H., of Jerusalem Road, has been named chief of Occupational and Environmental Medicine at Boston University Medical Center (BUMC). McCunney, who has been with BUMC since 1983, has served many roles during his tenure, including director of clinical services and director of the occupational health program.

McCunney received his master of public health degree from Harvard University and his medical degree from Thomas Jefferson University Medical School in Philadelphia. He then completed a residency in internal medicine at Northwestern University in Chicago and holds academic appointments at Boston University School of Medicine and Brown University, among others.

McCunney is actively involved in the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine and is a member of both the American Medical Association and the American Public Health Association.

McCunney's research into "sick building syndrome," or indoor air pollution, has gained widespread attention. His most recent findings indicate that poorly maintained ventilation systems contribute significantly to the syndrome.

Homes are only part of what Habitat helpers build

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

South Shore Habitat for Humanity president Michael Keneally was so moved by a child's speech that he had to get involved.

But even if Keneally didn't head up an 1,800-member regional organization to create housing for the needy — the Hingham resident said he'd probably do something else to serve the community.

Keneally recalled attending a church presentation about Habitat and being touched by a speech by Randolph resident Shawn Gilmore, 10, who spoke about how Habitat changed his life.

Gilmore talked about being dropped off at the corner and never having anyone come to his house to play because he was ashamed. When it rained, there was no place to sit inside without getting wet.

Then, Habitat for Humanity renovated his home.

"Prior to the house being renovated he never told anybody where we lived," Keneally recalled.

"It stuck me as a struggle for a person to live," he said. Action seemed imperative.

"I really do think I'd be involved in some other organization other than work" if it wasn't for Habitat, he said. "It's a real responsibility, I think."

Keneally first worked as a volunteer secretary for Habitat in 1987, and eventually took charge of volunteers, development and fundraising presentations throughout the South Shore.

"It proves that you can get involved in Habitat and not be a builder," he said with a smile. "For people like me, who are not at all mechanical, there are things that can be done."

Habitat is continually building or reconstructing homes, conducting fundraising activities and looking for new property.

This winter, Habitat will start work on property in Braintree. Keneally hopes to get to the point where Habitat works on two properties at the same time.

With continuous projects, Habitat keeps high visibility and a consistent number of volunteers.

The South Shore chapter stretches from Walpole to Plymouth, with 1,800 on its mailing list. But each project draws about 400 volunteers, Keneally said.

At all Habitat homes, volunteer builders work on-site during weekends, under the supervision of a trained volunteer contractor. The volunteers know ahead of time what they will be working on and bring some of their own tools.

Habitat lets churches, synagogues, corporations and a Stonehill College Habitat chapter coordinate construction workers.

More than 105 church and other group representatives select weekends when their groups will arrive to work. Smaller crews join others when there is a shortage of volunteers. Drop-in help is never turned away, Keneally said.

The most important laborers could be the people who will live in the house, who are required to put in 500 hours of "sweat equity."

Keneally was discouraged when his hometown almost turned down a Habitat project. Hingham's town meeting struggled to pass a land transfer to Habitat last spring.

"It was discouraging at first," he said. Several board Habitat members live in Hingham.

"We so believe in the Habitat concept and in the town that we live in; so much effort needs to be put into something that is really right."

Residents' concerns about flooding and perk tests delay the project. Keneally said that Habitat researched the potential problems and found that construction would have no impact on the flooding area.

In his third year as Habitat president, Keneally said he has never figured out how much time he spends on the job.

Keneally met his wife, Sheila Keneally, who grew up in Cohasset, on his first day at Boston College. They both earned Master's degrees at B.C.

They married in 1978. Keneally currently runs Set Point Paper in Mansfield with his in-laws. They founded the business in 1976.

Habitat fundraiser slated

South Shore Habitat for Humanity will hold a "Battle of the Businesses" from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Oct. 23 at Cohasset High School.

Corporate teams with six-to-10 members will challenge each other in volleyball, basketball and an obstacle course.

Participation for corporations is $200, a tax-deductible donation.

For more information, call the Battle Hotline at 617/982-1248 or write to: Habitat Battle of the Businesses, P.O. Box 127, Norwell, MA 02061.

Special town meeting is 7:30 p.m. Monday

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

At Monday's Special Town Meeting, there's a little something for everyone.

Sandy Beach Parking lot hours, water and sewer lien fees, guard rails and fences, and even handicapped parking at the library are just a few of the potpourri of articles on the town warrant.

Although he's not expecting any battles on town meeting floor that would draw a cast of thousands — Town Moderator George L. Marlette III doesn't think there will be a problem reaching the 100-voter quorum necessary to open the 7:30 p.m. meeting at the high school.

Marlette said the business before the voters should be concluded in just one session.

He predicts the most discussion will surround the article amending the by-laws to allow selectmen to set the opening and closing hours for the Sandy Beach

Boat yard rescuers reach for life line

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The historic harbor location which houses the town's only boat yard got a surprise boost from selectmen.

After stating publicly last week that they could do nothing about saving the 200-year-old site from being turned into a residence — the board decided Monday to take affirmative steps to try to preserve the town's "Motif #1."

According to Building Inspector Robert M. Egan the site is zoned for waterfront business so it would take a variance or zoning change for a home to be built there. Permits would have to be obtained from the local planning and zoning boards and the sewer and conservation commissions and possibly from the state and Army Corps of Engineers, he said.

Selectmen will actively speak and write in opposition to the issuance of permits and variances on economic

The Mariner buys Hingham Journal

The Hingham Journal is under new ownership.

The historic, 166-year-old weekly, one of the oldest newspapers in the country, has been sold to Mariner Newspapers, a Division of Capital Cities/ABC, Inc.

The announcement was made jointly by Henry Bosworth, publisher of The Journal, and David Cutler, publisher of the Mariner Newspapers, following completion of the transaction this week.

This week's issue of The Journal is the last under Bosworth.

The Mariner Newspapers publishes 15 weeklies, including the Hingham Mariner, which was launched almost 13 years to the day - Oct. 14, 1980. The Mariner also publishes five shoppers and the monthly South Shore Business Journal.

"We are delighted the Mariner and the Journal have become one after 13 years of intense competition," said Cutler. "Our goal is to continue the tradition, and along the way to make the combined Journal-Mariner the

Cohasset author helps kids remember life at camp

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

(Editor's note: the following is the first in an occasional series about local authors or artists).

Remembering her childhood experiences in summer camp, Cohasset resident Laura Doherty designed and wrote My Camp Book, a workbook for children to complete before and during their time away from home.

"I don't consider myself an author," she said. "The kids will be the authors.

"The idea had been germinating for a long time. I come from a long family of campers," she said.

— The Mariner visits —

Doherty, who works with children in the third through the fifth grade at John Winthrop Elementary School in Boston, was inspired by one special needs student who went to camp for the first time over February vacation.

In order for him to keep up with his studies, she designed a booklet with different activities.

"He did every page and when he came back he showed the class. It meant a lot to him," she said.

Plus, he used the book to talk about his camp experience with his mother.

"Parents can get an idea of how the kids liked the camp. They have something that they can go over (together) and get more than monosyllabic answers."

In a workbook-style paperback, Doherty gives children a variety of tasks designed to enhance their verbal

Railroad group to meet

The citizens' advisory committee for the Old Colony Railroad Greenbush Corridor transportation improvements project will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 21, at Cohasset town hall, 41 Highland Ave.

Transportation impacts on the alternative proposals will be discussed as part of Chapter IV of the supplementary draft of the environmental impact statement/report.

For further information, call Joseph Connor, MBTA project manager, at 722-3422.

Juvenile cell repaired

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan thanked Building Inspector Robert Egan for his "cooperation and professionalism" in repairing the door to the cell used for juvenile offenders at the police department.

Noonan said Egan's help saved the town "in excess of $300."

The door to the juvenile cell was vandalized by a prisoner July 7, he said.

Most wanted list

Gary Alan Irving, 33, is on the Massachusetts "10 Most Wanted" list issued by the Massachusetts State Police Violent Fugitive Arrest Squad.

Irving is wanted on a warrant issued from Dedham Superior Court for a 1978 conviction for aggravated rape and assault and battery in Cohasset, police said.

The fugitive squad provides assistance for interstate and intrastate investigations concerning escapees and other fugitives from justice. The squad maintains constant channels of communication with law enforcement agencies throughout the state and the nation and functions as liaison among agencies with a common purpose regarding the apprehension of fugitives.

Irving has a light complexion and has blonde hair and blue eyes; he is six feet tall and weighs about 180 pounds, police said. Anyone with information about Irving's whereabouts should all the fugitive squad at 566-4500 or Cohasset police at 383-1055.

Use of town seal okay'ed

Selectmen will allow use of the Town Seal on an informational bulletin about resolving parking problems in the village.

Chamber of Commerce president, Bob Martin, presented the bulletin to the board Monday.

The Council on Aging and Community Center are encouraging their staff and program participants to use the parking spaces in the town parking lot as much as possible, Martin said.

Employees of businesses in the village are asked to park in an "all day parking lane" which are the spaces adjacent to the old railroad bed. And shoppers are encouraged to use the town parking lot whenever possible.

"It is hoped that these steps will open up the parking spaces on South Main Street and Ripley Road for shoppers who have short errands," the bulletin states. "This might also help in the revitalization of the downtown shopping and business area."

The bulletin is the result of a recent meeting of interested parties which was hosted by the Community Center, Martin said.

Merle Brown gives $50

There's a consensus among selectmen that decorating the Town Common with lights this Christmas would be a nice touch.

Monday night, Selectman Merle S. Brown said he'd donate $50 toward the amount needed for the lights and electricity.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said it would cost about $125 to install temporary electrical service on the Common for the lights.

Traffic safety addressed

In response to residents' concerns, Safety Officer Clifton B. Jones recommends educating children to traffic hazards and installing "Not a Thru Way" and "Children" traffic signs on Flintlocke Ridge Road but no speed sign.

The signs, which Hwy. Supt. Harold Litchfield has in stock, could be posted immediately, Jones said.

In a recent petition submitted to selectmen, residents in the neighborhood asked for a 20 mph sign.

"Under state law, in order to place a 20 mph sign, it must be approved by the Registrar of Motor Vehicles and the Department of Environmental Management," Jones explained.

"It will also require traffic counts conducted by the state. This may be an expense to the town," Jones said, adding that he could not think of a side street in the town that has a speed sign.

"If one is placed here, it would open the door to numerous requests for more," he said.

Jones explained that under state law the speed limit inside a thickly settled district is 30 mph. But, he said, posting a"Children" sign would alert drivers to slow down and "the speed could be easily enforced." Under state law, drivers must slow down when a special hazard exists like pedestrians.

Jones said the intersection of Flintlocke and Aaron River Roads is very dangerous and the tree & park department would trim back growth to enhance visibility.

But signs and police enforcement do not completely address the problem.

"If the residents of Flintlocke Ridge Road would educate their children not to use the street as a playground and to be alert to motor vehicles — along with the new signs, I think that this would help eliminate any risks to the children in the area," he said.

"You can be sure my patrols in this his area will increase, and any violator will be cited accordingly."

Selectman Jane Goedecke agreed that parents should stress traffic awareness with their children.

"Kids believe a dead-end street is an extension of their yard," she said. "It's a nice place to play, but it can be dangerous."

Ambulance billing update

Jane E. Henderson, clerk at the fire department, said the town billed 30 ambulance calls in September for a total commitment of $9,783.30. Receipts deposited with the town treasurer for the month amounted to $8,403.52.

Since July the town has billed $31,422.62 in ambulance calls and received $22,540.24, a collection rate of about 70 percent.

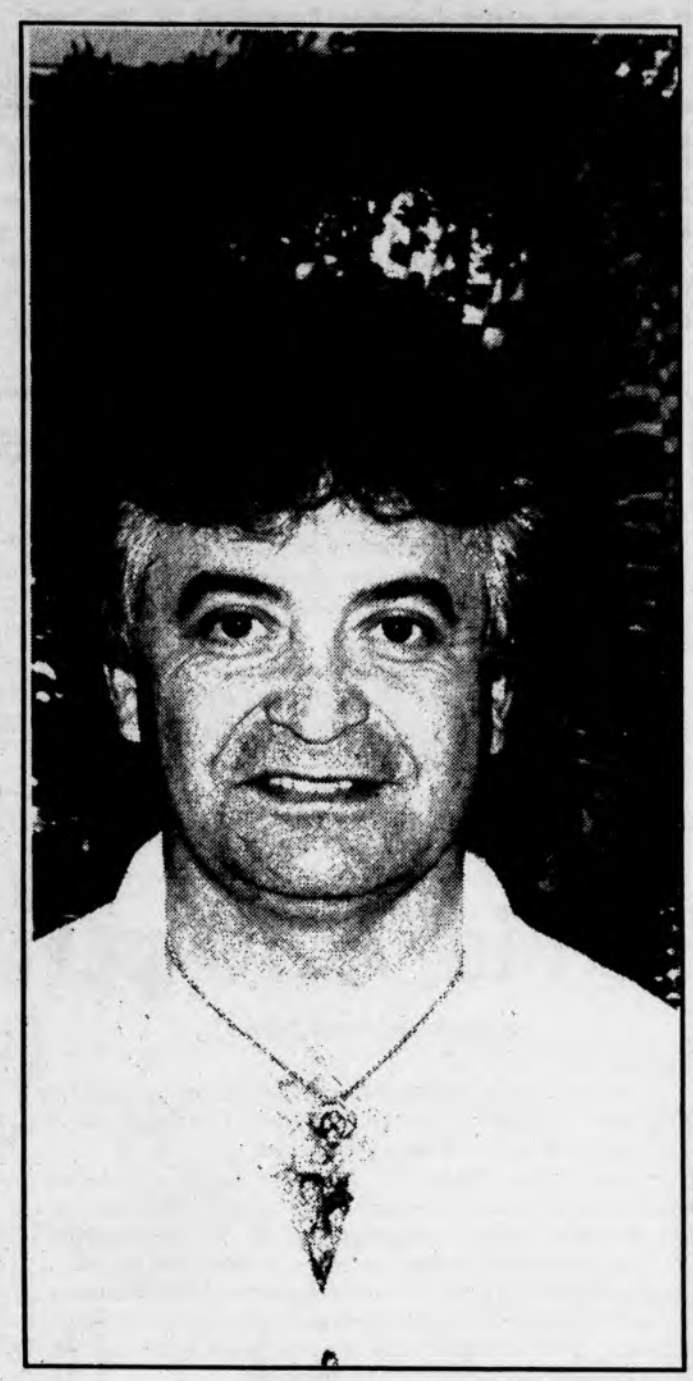
Hernán Rodriguez



Name: Hernán Rodriguez

Occupation: Owner of Hernán Salon.

Best day of your life: June 5, 1972 — the day I came to this country.

Most embarrassing moment: It was my first haircut at hair-styling school. My first client had long, straight hair. He said 'cut it short.' I cut his hair too short and it stood straight up on his head and there was nothing I could do about it.

Goal: To help people out in business and in life. (Hernán hosted a cut-a-thon Sunday at his salon to benefit the American Cancer Society).

Favorite season: Summer. I love the warm weather.

Best vacation: A cruise to the Caribbean. It was relaxing and the weather was beautiful.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: People who are two-faced.

Favorite book: "The House of the Spirits," by Isabel Allende.

Favorite movie: "West Side Story."

Biggest worry: The economy. I always worry about it because it affects my business.

Favorite place: Washington, D.C.

Favorite junk-food: Potato chips.

Person you'd most like to meet: Paul McCartney.

DO YOU NEED A WILL?

To answer the question "Who NEEDS a WILL?", it is simpler to respond in the negative; YOU DO NOT NEED A WILL IF YOU INTEND TO DIE WITH NO FAMILY, NO FRIENDS AND NO ASSETS TO BE CONCERNED ABOUT... Obviously, for most of us, this is not the case!

Ensure that your wishes are carried out in the event of a catastrophic illness or even death... Protect yourself as well as those you love!

WHAT YOU WILL NEED:

- Will: Allows you to determine those individuals who receive your property at death. It also allows you to name a personal representative for your estate affairs, appoint a guardian for minor children and set up trusts for your children.
- Health Care Proxy: The appointment of a person you trust to make medical decisions in the event that you are unable to.
- Living Will: A declaration that in the event of a catastrophic illness, you do not want to be kept alive by artificial means.
- Power of Attorney: Naming another person you trust as your "agent" to handle your general financial affairs if you are unable to.

At the Law Office of Alan H. Segal we believe that in today's world every individual should have these basic and necessary documents. Therefore, we offer basic "Will" packages at an affordable price. More importantly, we understand your busy schedule and can produce your Will package within a half hour. All this without sacrificing service and quality! Our basic Will package includes the necessary documents mentioned above.

Call 617-848-6272 and ask for Carol for an immediate appointment (day and evening appointments available).

Boat yard rescuers reach for life line

grounds. And they formed a subcommittee to focus on the issue and pursue having Cohasset harbor declared a protected port by the state.

The board was under pressure to act from fishermen, who see their livelihoods threatened if the boat yard closes, and residents, who also want the aesthetic aspects of the site preserved.

The 82 Border Street location houses the Mill River Marine Railway, a boat yard whose continued existence fishermen find crucial to their economic survival.

"Everyday a fisherman loses by not being out in the ocean, he loses money," Jason told the board.

Jason also stressed that Cohasset harbor which has served a fishing fleet for 300 years ought to be protected by state law for waterfront uses. Apparently there is an act on the books to protect harbors.

"If (Rep.) Mary Jeanette Murray could get together with Greg (Doyon), that would be a start," he said.

Reached by telephone Murray said she was researching the matter and would have more information on possible state protective measures later this week.

"I support trying to keep the site as a boat yard," she said, adding towns need to protect their harbors for future generations.

Donzé, who collected 160 signatures from concerned residents, said he was looking for guidance from the board.

Selectman Jane Goedecke suggested that a group of citizens get together to form a plan to purchase the site if the new owner becomes frustrated by the long permitting process and decides to sell.

The 16,000 square-foot parcel was recently sold to William Hanney, president of Stoughton-based Entertainment Cinemas, for $350,000. Hanney reportedly wants to build a house at the harbor location.

John Hartshorne, 115 Border Street, said the town should look at the site as a "public utility."

"It is central to the life of the town," he said, suggesting that the town forgive the taxes on the boat yard to help make it economically viable.

Peter Adams of The Glades in Scituate said the families who spend summers there depend on the boat yard to repair mooring docks and boats.

"We haven't lost a boat since Hurricane Carol (in the 1950s)," Adams said. "There is goodwill that exists between this particular facility and our point.

"I wanted to let you know how we felt about this (issue)," he said.

Rick Sears, 17 Deep Run, said selectmen should act to have the port protected.

"The people of Newburyport watched as their commercial harbor property was converted to condos," he said.

Grist mill once stood there

According to David Wadsworth, senior curator of the Cohasset Historical Society, a tidal grist mill existed at the Border Street location where the Mill River Marine Railway now stands from 1792 until the mid-1800's.

A natural sluiceway still runs under the largest building on the site and part of the old grinding stone is still down there, Wadsworth said.

In 1862, the mill burned to the ground and shortly after that Abraham Tower bought the parcel and built a lumber wharf. The large building which housed the lumber mill still stands.

"Sometime around 1900, it became a boat yard," Wadsworth said.

Government Island's eligibility for listing on the National Register of Historic Places will have no effect on the boat yard, Wadsworth said. National register listing does afford properties some protection from development.

"I can't think of any impact on Government Island from the private property over there," Wadsworth said referring to the boat yard.

Parking lot.

Selectmen purposely left specific hours out of the proposed by-law change to give them the flexibility to change the hours when appropriate.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan originally asked selectmen to close the beach at 8 p.m. to curtail underage drinkers from congregating at there at night. Consensus among selectmen was to close the beach at 9 p.m., although some board members were reluctant to restrict the parking lot hours which would affect all citizens. The advisory committee was split on the issue, voting 4-2 against the request.

The conservation commission will make a pitch for a conservation agent. A majority of selectmen do not support the addition of a new position at a special town meeting and think the commission should wait until the annual town meeting. The advisors are unanimously opposed to this request.

Voters will be asked to appropriate money to repair town fences and the guard rail at Cunningham Bridge but not to support paying for a new guard rail at Jerusalem Road at this time.

The Jerusalem Road guard rail would cost $17,500 and there is no accident history at this location, according to Hwy. Supt. Harold Litchfield.

best weekly newspaper in Massachusetts. Hingham, a place of discerning readers, would expect no less."

The office will remain at 73 South St. in the historic Hingham Journal Building.

Bosworth, who has owned the Journal 13 years said, "It was not an easy decision to make. Selling the Journal is like selling a part of history. I have great respect for history so my decision to part with the Journal was made with mixed feelings.

"Thirteen years ago my good friend, the late Frank MacLean, decided it was time for him to let go and he sold the Journal to me.

"Now I feel it time for me to let go. I want to concentrate on my other newspaper, The Quincy Sun, which I founded 25 years ago in my hometown. It is time for me to do it because trying to produce two completely different community newspapers has become more difficult in these economic times.

"David Cutler, the new publisher, is an experienced, talented newspaperman who also has great respect for history. I believe he will consider ownership of the Journal a public trust and will strive to improve it as a community newspaper.

"Both he and I consider the publisher of a historic newspaper such as the Journal a temporary custodian or caretaker. Publishers come and go, but it is more important the newspaper stays on."

The Hingham Journal was originally The Gazette, founded in 1827. It became The Hingham Patriot in 1838 and the Hingham Journal in 1850.

Bosworth purchased the Journal in October, 1980 from Frank MacLean who had been publisher for 34 years. MacLean succeeded his father after the latter's death in 1946. The newspaper had been in the MacLean family since 1930.

Anglers seek local shore-side fishing permission

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Citing a Colonial law permitting any "free man to walk to fish or fowl" Ed Nowak, regional editor of The Fisherman, appealed to selectmen to allow anglers on the town's beaches.

And state Dept. of Fisheries and Wildlife representative Jack Sheppard said if the town agrees, the state would help out financially when town refurbishes its beach parking lots.

Nowak proposes the town allow anglers, who show a permit to park at Sandy Beach, to have walking access to the shore.

Because parking is controlled by a town by-law, selectmen agreed to present the matter to the annual town meeting in the spring.

Nowak said Scituate has arranged for visiting anglers, who show fishing rods and reels or active membership cards in a recognized fishing club, to purchase a permit sticker for $5 at the police station. The permit which is valid from Sept. 6 through June 30, will allow parking in designated beach lots where anglers can walk the beach.

He hoped Cohasset would accept these "parking-to-fish" permits as valid.

Nowak said the waters are full of stiped bass and flounder.

Sheppard said if the town left the lots open in the off season for fishermen only, the state would pickup up 10 percent of the cost of reconstructing the parking areas.

He stressed state officials are pushing for more public beach access.

"The speaker of the house was thrown off a beach in the Cape and that's caused all kinds of repercussions," Sheppard said.

Nowak said anglers would not abuse the beaches.

"They know the people paying the taxes can trump their privileges," he said.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said the board would be interested in seeing how Scituate does with the program.

Bill payment okay'ed

Selectmen authorized payment of the following bills:

- $2,474 to Brewster W. Fuller & Associates for consulting services in July and August regarding the cemetery site selection study;
- $3,163.14 to Civil Designs, Inc., for professional services (statement date 10/4/93) regarding beach and highway repairs;
- $8,990.75 to Paul Gentile Painting Col, of Quincy for exterior painting of town hall (original portion).

Fire chief's salary set

Newly appointed Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln will receive $48,500 the first year of this three-year contract, followed by 3 percent increases in each of the next two years making his annual salary $50,000 and $51,500 respectively.

Selectmen unanimously approved the chief's contract Monday pending town counsel's review.

❑ Oct. 8 retired Naval Academy Professor Ellery Clark Jr. was the guest of his former midshipman student at the Naval Academy.

Rear Admiral Strasser, currently the president of the War College in Newport, R.I. invited him to attend the retirement ceremonies for civilian professor Frank Uhlig, distinguished editor of the War College's Naval publications. Both men had a prominent part in the founding of the annual review of the United States Naval Institute's most famous publication. The admiral shared memories of the good old days on the banks of the Severn some 30 years ago.

The War College was founded by Admiral Stephen B. Luce, who, with the aid of Captain Mahan, taught the Navy how to begin sound thought on the naval aspects of warfare.

❑ With all of the news going on "around town" we have forgotten one very important person that really counts!

Hats off and a big salute to Roger Lincoln, our new Fire Chief. We know that he will do a super job! Congratulations, Chief, we are proud of you and your efforts.

❑ Here comes a birthday wish to a very special person, Ken Fone! Hope your day was a happy one, that your year is special, and that you continue on with your special ways. We love you!

❑ Hope that everyone read the article in the Boston Globe about Jim Kuhn, and how since he left Boston Magazine many others have tried to take his place ... of course no one can, as all of those who know him can testify! Aren't we in Cohasset lucky that we know what we have!

❑ Did you hear about Gino Digirolomo? We all know Gino from CHS days, and remember him fondly.

Well, Gino was recently selected to the Malden Catholic Hall of Fame and they are going to hold an awards dinner Nov. 6! All of you Gino fans can attend. Call Clark Chatterton at 383-0560 for the details.

It will make Gino so happy to know how much you care, he is a special man!

❑ Olympic hockey news folks, you have got to watch Jim Campbell!

Jim, the son of Jim "Whitey" Campbell and Eleanor (Tower) Campbell is soaring! And scoring! Mom and Dad are both CHS grads, classes of 1959 and 1958, and are so proud of their Jim, who is a real star! Not just a team member, he really does an awesome job. His Olympic team played Boston College Wednesday, Boston University Friday, and the University of Maine Saturday.

Here is Sondre Haviand, the AFS student from Norway, who is staying with the Gray family on Nichols Rd. Have you seen him Rollerblading "Around Town?" It is one of his favorite things to do. Be sure to give a great big Cohasset hello!

Be sure to watch for him, he is a real star we will hear a lot about!

❑ Saw Rodney Milbourne last week, reports that his wife is doing super after their accident last summer. A wonderful gal, here's to a continued speedy recovery!

At the Annual Firefighters of the Year Awards, Weld gave Robert the award for his study of Cohasset residents and any medical problems they might have. Many are seniors who may need emergency services. They filled out a form and returned it to him, thus, EMTs have information available to them immediately in the event of an emergency.

We certainly are proud of you and your efforts, and are lucky to have such a caring person in our town!

❑ Cohasset makes the map in a wonderful category, and Melissa van der Werf and Becky Callentine are the reason. They recently won places on the Universal Cheerleaders Association All Star Team, which is a first for Cohasset Cheerleaders.

The day after Christmas they head for London to perform in the Lord of Westminster New Year's Day parade in London.

Both of these talented gals have to raise $2,000, the cost of the trip. They are hoping for grants from local service groups as well as individuals (that means you, right?). We are cheering for you two gals, and we are extremely proud of you and your efforts!

❑ It's the time of year when all have to get thinking about the Chamber of Commerce Auction, the only fundraiser the Chamber has. The Lighthouse Keepers Association and the Teen Depot will also be sharing the proceeds this year. The auction will be held Nov. 13, and they are looking for donations of merchandise, services or a gift certificate.

Call Keith Knowles at 383-6266 or 1331 for more information.

❑ Don't forget about Jim Campbell. His Cohasset relatives, Sheldon Sladen, Shellann Durkin, and Sam Zappalo, are so proud, and with good reason!

❑ That's the news from here for the week, won't you please call with yours?

Crowley/Rudduck

Kathleen Ann Crowley, daughter of Mrs. Evelyn J. Bridge of Cohasset and the late Neal F. Crowley, married Richard T. Rudduck Jr. of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard T. Rudduck of Toledo, Ohio August 7 at St. Anthony's Church. The Rev. John J. Keohane officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, J. Nelson Beveridge. Maid of honor was Kathleen Trice of Leominster. The bridegroom's father, Dr. Richard T. Rudduck served as best man.

The bride is a graduate of Georgetown University and the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. She works for J. Walter Thompson, U.S.A., in Detroit, Michigan.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Wabash College and the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. He works for Deloitte & Touche Management Consulting in Detroit, Michigan.

After a wedding trip to southern France, the couple is living in Novi, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Rudduck

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Ardizzoni

Sargent/Ardizzoni

At an August 28 ceremony at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset officiated by the Rev. John J. Keohane, Ruthann Sargent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sargent, became the bride of Thomas Joseph Ardizzoni.

He is the son of Mrs. Bruna Ardizzoni of Hanover.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Massasoit Community College. She is employed by the Community Center of Cohasset as coaching director of the Gymnastics program and also serves as Cohasset High's varsity gymnastics coach.

The groom is a graduate of Hanover High School and ITT Technical Institute. He is a self-employed contractor.

The couple spent their honeymoon in Mexico, California, and Las Vegas.

Cohasset's week

Seniors are thanked

The treasurer/collector's office thanked volunteers from the Senior Center and their coordinator, Kathy Bryanton, for stuffing more than 3,000 real estate and personal property tax bills.

Treasurer/Collector Elizabeth B. Ripley said it was the fifth year that the seniors have helped out.

"We appreciated their spirit and their sense of dedication to their community," she said.

Ripley said the seniors gave a total of 62 hours with a "dollar value" of volunteer time equalling nearly $500.

Waste bans in effect

Citizens utilizing the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility are reminded that recycling is mandatory. Newspapers, corrugated cardboard, magazines, white office paper, computer paper, glass, metal cans, plastic bottles with a "2" on the bottom, scrap metal, batteries, tires, waste oil and yard waste must be recycled.

April 1 two more so-called "waste bans" went into effect. The substances which will no longer be accepted at SEMASS, the town's disposal facility, are glass and yard waste. At the present time there continues to be small quantities of glass and yard waste mixed with the rubbish.

Users of the Recycling Transfer Facility are urged to keep all yard waste and recyclable glass out of the general rubbish so the town will avoid any potential penalties in the future. Please assure that glass is clean prior to recycling as there are no facilities for washing glass at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

Locals to perform in Sleeping Beauty

Four Cohasset residents are performing in the classical ballet "The Sleeping Beauty" at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts Oct. 21 through Nov. 7. Emily Libby, Elizabeth Myers and Corey Sullivan will dance as garland girls and Adrina DeVitre as a fairy page. All the girls are students at the Deer Hill School and dance with the Boston Ballet Norwell Studio Extension.

Tickets for "The Sleeping Beauty" are available by calling Ticketmaster at 931-ARTS or in person at the Wang Center, 270 Tremont St., Boston.

Lafuente/Murray

Mrs. Josefa Lafuente of Woodside, NY, announces the engagement of her daughter, Jackeline to Robert J. Murray Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Murray of Cohasset. She is the daughter of the late Fransico Lafuente.

Miss Lafuente is a graduate of St. Vincent Serreran, Manhattan and holds a BS in finance from Boston College. She is employed by the Bank of Boston.

Her fiance is a graduate of BC High and holds a BS in finance from Boston College. He works for Peat, Marwick, Mitchell as a CPA.

A September 1994 wedding is planned.

Notes and comment

Our weekly feature 'Picture this' continues to be one of the most popular items in the paper. At a glance, we can tell a lot about the person from answers to questions like favorite book, most embarrassing moment, biggest worry, and best or worst vacation.

We have fun writing the column and have captured regular Cohasset folk and even the occasional well-known official like Governor William Weld.

But after nearly two years — at times it's not always easy to track new individuals to be our person of the week.

This is where you can help. Do you know someone you'd like to see featured? Town officials, shop owners, teachers, or just ordinary folk will do.

Working with our readers is part of what makes putting together a local paper worthwhile.

So please drop us a note or give us a call at 1-800-649-6661 with names of individuals you'd like to see in Picture This.

And we also send a great big thank you to all the good sports out there who have participated in the past!

Robert Protulis may not realize how quotable he is.

The Cohasset firefighter was recently recognized by state officials for his fine work in developing a database with medical information on Cohasset residents, many of them senior citizens, who may need emergency services. Thanks to Protulis' efforts, EMTs will have the information available to them immediately in the event of an emergency.

At Monday's selectmen's meeting state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray presented Mr. Protulis with a citation from the legislature and another signed by Gov. Weld.

"I think you've been through as many governors as I have fire chiefs," Protulis told Mary Jeanette.

It may be our imagination but it appears there are a few open parking spaces in the Village lately. Selectmen discussed problems with cars parked there for well over the hour permitted at their public meeting three weeks ago. Since then, the Community Center, Chamber of Commerce, and local businesses are working hard to encourage drivers to park in the town lot.

We hope the able-bodied among us — who have more to do than a quick errand — are getting the message. Freeing up South Main Street spaces for some members of Cohasset's elderly population provides an invaluable service for those who find it difficult to walk from the back lot.

On the subject of traffic, we saw a mother pushing a stroller walk right across the middle of South Main Street, Tuesday and she wasn't more than 15-feet from a crosswalk. Then we saw another mother with her pre-schooler ignoring the crosswalks as she "jaywalked" right across Depot Court Let's face it, drivers are not going to be educated to stop at crosswalks if pedestrians don't use them.

Don't forget about Town Meeting at 7:30 p.m., Monday at Cohasset High School. Come on down and take part in your local government! Whether it's computer purchases, hours at the Sandy Beach parking lot, or lien fees on your water bills, you won't be bored. The discussion is always lively. And remember decisions made at town meeting can affect your pocketbook. Town meeting provides the forum for your input — take advantage of it!

Will rail tunnel shake Hingham?

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

In an effort to preserve Hingham Square as the Old Colony Greenbush Line makes plans to run through town — Hingham selectmen recently granted the MBTA permission to begin studying the possibility of an underground tunnel.

At the same time, they approved money for additional historical studies in the downtown area.

MBTA officials will conduct a seismic survey downtown — by drilling three holes in strategic locations. Tests will then help determine if a tunnel is possible.

The MBTA will drill holes 15 centimeters in diameter near 130 South Street; next to the entrance to the South Shore Country Club entrance; and near 22 Hersey St.

Commuter rail service from Boston to Scituate with a tunnel under Hingham Square is one of six alternatives being considered to enhance mass transit to the South Shore.

The MBTA did not tell selectmen when the drilling would begin.

This is the first time the MBTA has shown serious interest in the tunnel concept.

Historical groups in town have lobbied for a tunnel to preserve Hingham's historic district from the noise and disruption of the train.

"I don't think they'd be doing this without the work of your group," selectman Martin Crane said to Alexander Macmillan, chairman of the Hingham Historical Commission.

Macmillan asked for additional consultant fees to study Hingham's historic property near the proposed Old Colony Railroad path.

The study may also turn up new archaeological finds downtown.

The Massachusetts Historical Commission said the region near the South Shore Country Club may have archaeological remnants from the Archaic and Woodlands periods, according to Macmillan.

"This is a survey to determine whether any such sites exist," said Macmillan.

Macmillan said the consultants have already worked since Labor Day, Macmillan said.

Selectmen agreed that Hingham's historic value must be presented to the MBTA.

"It's what Hingham must do to protect its interest," said Selectmen Chairman Edna English.

Macmillan said the results may be necessary for the MBTA's environmental impact study, scheduled to be ready by the end of the year.

Even if the MBTA is off schedule, Macmillan said that the data will be helpful.

In addition to above-ground commuter rail service from Boston to Scituate and commuter rail service with a tunnel under Hingham Square, the MBTA is also studying the possibility of expanding commuter boat and bus service.

Lightkeeper's group holds open house

Dear Cohasset residents:

You are cordially invited to see the completed Lightkeeper apartments Sunday, Oct. 31, noon to 3 p.m., before they are occupied and no longer available for public viewing.

The Bancroft public meeting room will not be completed until early next year and the actual gala ribbon cutting celebration will be early May 1994.

As you know, the Massachusetts Historical Commission recently voted to include the residence on the National Register of Historic Places.

We still lack sufficient funds to complete the commercial kitchen, and important outside site-work. The Cohasset Conservation Trust has very generously given us a $20,000 interest-free loan that will be forgiven if we can raise the project balance of $40,000.

Please consider a tax-deductible donation to: Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, P.O. Box 514, Cohasset, 02025.

College students hear from home

The "Little Pieces of Home" packages were mailed to the town's 1993 high school graduates, Oct. 14, said Bob Martin, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

The was the fifth year that the Chamber sent these packages and "this was the best package so far," Martin said.

The packages included donations from Kimball's By The Sea; C. Spirito Inc. Barry Waste Service; Hingham Mutual Ins. Co.; Bank of Boston; Noble's Camera Shops; The Gillette Co.; the Parent School Organization (PSO); Origins; Buttonwood Books & Toys; The Goodale Company; PIP Printing; Dr. Barry Tufts, DMD; Dr. Edward Woods, DMD; Cohasset Savings Bank; Ernest Grassey, CPA; Goodwin Graphics; the Cohasset Mariner; Hub Shipping; Harbor Travel; National Abatement Services; and the junior/senior high school.

Special additions to the package were the "Bears" which a devoted group from the Council on Aging made under the direction of Dorothy Bryanton and bookmarks made by third graders at the Osgood School under the direction of art teacher, Linda Stevens.

it's happening

"Inca Son" to perform

"Inca Son:, native Inca dancers and musicians will perform from 8 to 10:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23 at the Coffee House Off The Square at Old Ship Parish Hall, 107 Main St., Hingham. Tickets are $10 at the door to benefit Central American medical relief. For information call Sue Krueger at 545-0-585

Author to speak on healing

In the first of a new community lecture series, "The Old Ship Forum," Joan Drescher, creator of healing art for healthcare facilities, will explore the power art has to heal body, mind and spirit in a health care setting. She will also guide a multi-media journey through "On Wings of Light: Meditations for Awakening to the Source," the book she created with Joan Borysenko.

The lecture will begin at 7 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 24 in the Old Ship Parish House hall, 107 Main St., Hingham. For information call 749-1679.

Help for Alzheimer's families

Attorney Wendy Crawshaw of Crawshaw & Lesser in Wellesley will speak on "Legal Issues for Alzheimer Families" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 27 at Park Community Hall, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham. This is an import issue as there have been recent changes in Medicaid law which will impact most families facing nursing home care.

The program will include information on guardianship, powers of attorney, trusts and other options. A question and answer period will follow the lecture. For information call 749-5417.

Flu clinics to be held

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the board of health will conduct the annual flu clinics from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23 and Oct. 30 at the town hall. The flu shot is free to all Cohasset residents. For more information call the league office between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Flu is very contagious. Most people who catch it get well without any problem, but flu sometimes leads to pneumonia, which can be fatal. Immunization is very important for people at high risk for pneumonia and other problems caused by flu. Anyone 65 or older, those with chronic medical problems (heart disease, asthma, kidney disease, diabetes, lung disease, anemia) and people whose immune systems have been weakened by disease such as cancer or AIDS are considered high risk. Those who are not high risk but want to avoid the flu may also get the shot. A new flu shot is needed every year. The vaccine cannot give you the flu.

Pneumococcal vaccine will also be available at this time for those 65 and older or others considered high risk. As there is a limited supply of pneumococcal vaccine, it will be administered on a first-come, first-serve basis. There is no charge for either vaccine for Cohasset residents.

Many think of pneumococcal vaccine as a "pneumonia shot," but it also prevents infections of the blood and of the thin membrane that covers the brain and spinal cord (meningitis). People 65 or older and anyone with chronic illness should get this vaccine. Most need only one dose which can safely be given at the same time as the flu vaccine. People at high risk for serious problems caused by infection should get a booster every three to six years.

Travelers to meet

The Mature Traveler's Club will meet from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 24 at the Hingham Public Library in the Whiton room. There will be a discussion on traveling alone and upcoming events will be planned. Call 545-2735 for information.

Steeple climb set

New North Church is planning a full weekend with its 6th annual Apple Festival and Steeple Climb Saturday, Oct. 23 and a special "Pewholders Service" and potluck luncheon Sunday, Oct. 24.

The Apple Festival will be from noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23 at the church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham. Visitors may tour the historic sanctuary and galleries and climb to the top of the steeple. Children under 8 cannot be allowed in the steeple.

Pewholders Sunday service will begin at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 24 and will honor New North members, neighbors and friends who, as "pewholders," contribute annually to maintain the fabric of the historic structure. Guest trumpeter Ted Haines will join music director Sue Krueger to provide special music. A potluck luncheon will follow the worship service in the parish house. Childcare is available during the service.

AARP to meet

The South Shore Chapter #1139 of the American Association of Retired Persons will meet at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 28 at the Sons of Italy Hall, Rte. 3A, Hingham. After a short business meeting, Ted Rubin will speak on current legislation in Massachusetts. Refreshments will be served. Any member of the national AARP or NRTA may join a chapter and is welcome at this meeting.

Cooking class at CCC

The Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main St. is offering a four-week cooking class from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning Tuesday, Nov. 2. Each week instructor Anna Abbruzzese will lead students in preparing a different soup, stew or chowder and a homemade bread. For information call 383-0088.

Halloween fun day set

The community center, 3 North Main St. is sponsoring a Halloween fun day from 1:15 to 3 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 28 for children in grades K-4. This is an early release day. Activities include bowling, a haunted house tour, crafts and more. The fee is $15 and preregistration is required. Call 383-0088 to register.

Leaf-rakers available

Leaf-raking will be the first official fundraiser for the 38 Cohasset teenagers planning to go to Appalachia for their 1994 summer work project. Arranged in teams of three to five, they are all set to come and rake your lawn for the bargain price of $7/hour/volunteer.

There are three specific dates and times they will be "on call." Teams are available to work between 9 a.m. and noon on the next three consecutive Saturdays: Oct. 24, 30 and Nov. 6.

To schedule your rakers, call or leave message for Ami Argus (office: 383-0345 or Home: 383-9325).

Coming up in November will be the group's Thanksgiving pie sale (pumpkin, apple and pecan).

Antiques to be sold

The 17th annual Antique Show and Sale to benefit the Beechwood Congregational Church will be at the Deer Hill School, Sohier St, Saturday, Nov. 6 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Elder care support offered

"Understanding Your Aging Parents (or Partner)" is being offered from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday evenings at the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

The series is jointly sponsored by the Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate Councils on Aging, and by the Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Association. The public is invited.

Patricia Clark, Executive Director of the Hingham Visiting Nurse will discuss teaching family members to assist elders with personal care and methods of improving safety in the home on Oct. 26.

Information on community resources available to older people and their families will be presented on Nov. 2. This will include such things as daycare centers, home health services, support groups and insurance matters.

For information or to register, call the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Learn furniture refinishing

The recreation department is sponsoring furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization classes to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop. Class is scheduled to begin on Saturday, Nov. 13. The fee for the 10-hour program is $60 and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention. To register call 383-6971.

Barn sale planned

There will be a barn sale to benefit the Bare Cove Fire Museum at the Hersey House Barn, 229 North St., Hingham from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23 — Rain or shine.

Halloween on the common

The Community Center Nursery School will host its annual Funraiser, The Halloween Fair on the Common, Sunday, Oct. 31, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. In case of rain, the fair will be held in the Cohasset Community Center.

Children of all ages will gather in their Halloween costumes to partake in an afternoon of fun and laughter. The fair will begin with the traditional costume parade around the Common followed by many special activities, games of skill and games of luck. Yearly favorite activities include cupcake decorating and apple creature creations.

This year some new games have been added for the children to enjoy. Be sure to stop by The Treasure Hunt, The Witches Broom Race and Ghostball in the circle of games.

Every child will leave each game with a prize and each activity with a delicious creation to eat! Face painting, balloons and refreshments stands will complete an afternoon of fair-going. There is sure to be a good time had for all!

Pumpkins of all kinds may be decorated for the pumpkin contest and dropped off at the Common at 1 p.m. Pumpkins will be judged in many categories, each one is sure to be a winner.

Tickets for all games and activities may be purchased at the fair; tickets are four for $1. Most games will cost 50 cents to play.

Everyone is welcome. The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School sponsors this event for the enjoyment of all.

Farmers Market news

The Hingham Farmers Market will hold the final free drawing for a basket of fall produce Saturday, Oct. 23. Last month's winner was Barbara Lang of Hingham; the runner-up was M. Kerr, who will be entered for our last drawing. The market will remain open Wednesdays and Saturdays through Oct. 30.

The market vendors and Market Master, Dave Sturgis, thank their customers and friends for their continued support of the market. Look for Hingham Farmers Market opening in May.

Oklahoma is coming

Hingham Civic Music Theatre's Rodgers and Hammerstein classic "Oklahoma!" opens at Hingham High School Friday, Oct. 22, at 8 p.m. and continues with a Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. Oct. 24. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 29 and 30, performances are at 8 p.m. The HCMT production celebrates the 50th anniversary of this landmark musical, which opened on Broadway in March of 1943 and ran for nearly six years.

Hingham High School is located at 41 Pleasant Street off Route 228. The auditorium is handicapped accessible. For further information call (617) 749-0083 or 749-9699.

Homebuyers seminar set

The Norwell and Hingham offices of Shawmut Bank are hosting a free seminar targeting first time homebuyers. The seminar will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 4 at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St., Hingham.

First time homebuyers will receive information regarding credit issues, what type of mortgage will fit specific needs, prequalification process and what the attorney's role is.

For reservations call Terry Narus at 871-8650 or Linda Grilli at 749-9007.

Haunted walk planned

The New England Wildlife Center sponsors a haunted house/walk from 6 to 10 p.m., Friday, Oct. 29, in Bare Cove Park.

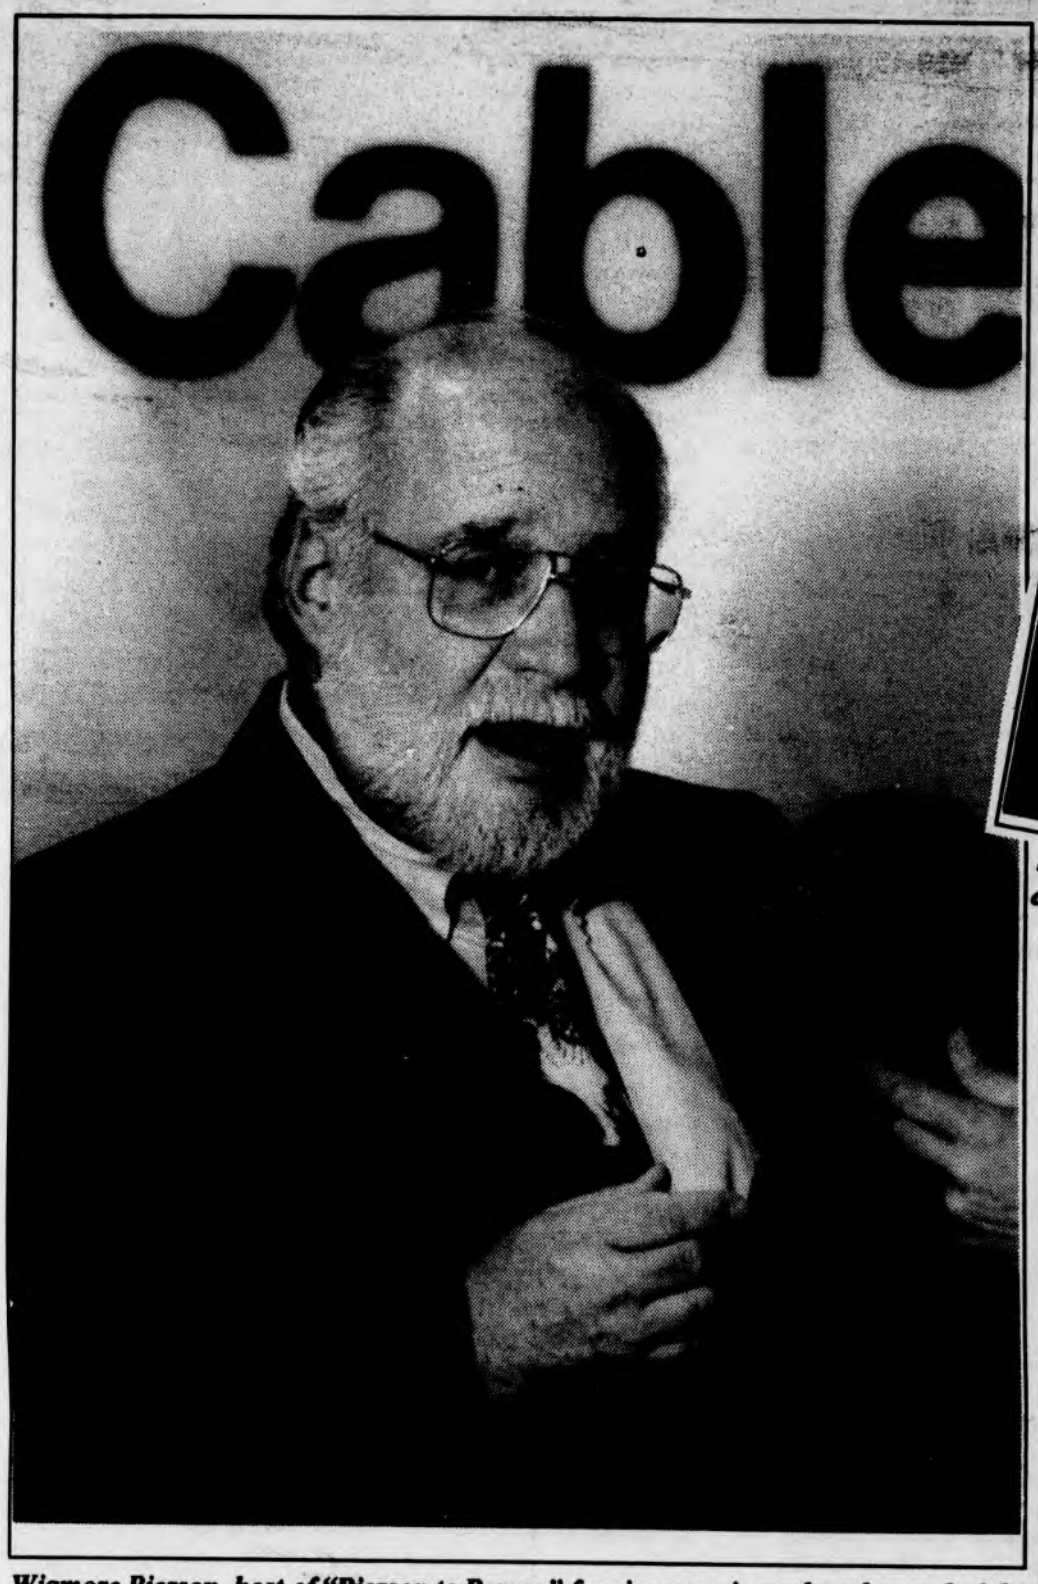
The walk lasts about 20 to 30 minutes and tours through a variety of abandoned munitions bunkers and woodland trails.

There will be refreshments, games, bonfires, and non-haunted hay rides. This event is good for all ages. Admission is $7 and $6 for members. All proceeds go to help pay for the cost of medical care for sick, injured and orphaned wild animals.

The New England Wildlife Center, founded in 1983, is a non-profit, educational organization dedicated to the treatment and rehabilitation of wildlife, natural science education and environmental research. The center is located in Bare Cove Park at 19 Fort Hill St., Hingham.

Please call 749-5387 for information.

Cable TV volunteers honored



Wigmore Pierson, host of "Pierson to Person" for six years, is on the other end of the microphone during Continental Cablevision's reception for its community programming volunteers.

Scituate programming director Bob Belliveau is pinned with a boutonniere by Cohasset director Wendy Copithorne.

Enjoying the evening are Joe Hayes, general manager; Jodee Doyle, a volunteer; Bill McColgan, Hull programming director; and Marion and Ralph Barnes, producers of "Points South."

Cable volunteers honored at special night

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Volunteers on local cable television shows in Hingham, Hanover, Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell came together last Wednesday for the ninth annual awards ceremony.

But for the first time since its inception, the ceremony deleted the awards portion of the program.

Instead, about 100 volunteers in semi-formal attire crowded a function room at the Barker Tavern in Scituate for a small-town's answer to the Emmys.

They took a moment in the spotlight and a selection from a gift table, courtesy the Continental Cable Company. Volunteers were allowed to say a few words at the podium and then they chose from a table laden with sweatshirts, t-shirts, cups and portfolios with the Continental Cable logo.

More than 200 volunteers donate between three and 30 hours per week to put out 40 hours of programming on cable channels 3, 52 and 53, according to Scituate program director Bob Belliveau.

"What we do in community television is to train and educate those that want to make a mark and give something back to the community through the use of the medium," said Belliveau.

The awards ceremony is Cable's only chance to thank volunteers and give them a chance to say what community television means to them.

"Creativity without greed is a really powerful thing and you should all be happy about what you're doing," said Michael Germaine, volunteer and director of the special artistic program, "Van Goatee's Crib."

Those who attended the awards ceremony represent only a fraction of volunteers who gave time and effort to programming. Continental Cable made its best effort to recognize as many volunteers as possible.

Program directors from the five towns introduced each night of programming with a selection of the top video performances from the year.

A special Bloopers section, introduced by former Norwell program director Wendy Larrabee, reminded cable performers and crew to laugh at themselves.

Volunteers who had never spoken on television learned quickly what a demanding task it is.

Technical difficulties like lost audio and timing snafus happen to the best of professionals, but cable fans fell out of their chairs when Jamie Oliver had to put more coins in the pay telephone so he could complete his live commentary from the polls during "Election '92" coverage.

As Hull resident Peter Seitz tried to report live from a poll, his young daughter tugged on his sleeve saying, "Look at the camera, Daddy!"

And of course, there were reels of tapes where broadcasters, interviewers and talkshow guests burst out laughing on the air.

Maria Freddura could hardly keep a straight face as her husband, Paul, straightforwardly discussed the merits of squid during an interview.

Milestones marked the year in community cable as well. For the first time, live selectmen's meetings aired in Scituate and Norwell. John and Sally Thomas, although not present, were recognized for their work volunteering to tape Scituate's meetings for 10 years.

Bill Modestino, who produced "The Pilgrim Conference Scoreboard Show" with Tom Connors for nine years, passed away this summer. Connors plans to run a memorial tape of Modestino's work to air on the program, aired live Saturdays and taped Monday nights.

After a brief demonstration of ribbetts, clucks and caws, Bob Detwiler, host of the children's reading program "Children's Corner," told why he loves his job.

"If you're a ham like I am it's a wonderful opportunity to have a good time and encourage the people out there to read, read, read," he said.

The producers of "Senior Spectrum," including Mary and Louis Homanoff, Florence Kelley, Margo Cartwright and Rita Sparrow were there to get their kudos for getting information out to senior citizens.

As many as 20 volunteers work for "Newsbeat 53," staffed primarily by volunteers aged 20 to 25. Volunteer reporter/anchor Peter Whitfield said their youthful spirit adds vitality to programming.

A core group of volunteers at Wednesday's celebration were: Andy Needel, Ron Gomez, Charlie Meyer, Mike Finnerty, Brenda McColgan and Chris and Heather Rudolph.

Hull programmers Charlie Karas, Rich Schmeir and Eric Vafides were cited this year for their storm coverage during the blizzards and storms last winter.

They stayed on the air with live weather updates for up to 36 hours at a time, throughout the state-of-emergency periods.

Other Tuesday programs include "The Home Center," with Gail Bell and "Arts Calendar," with Ralph and Marion Barnes.

Marion Barnes echoed the sentiment of many volunteer producers when she invited one and all to join their efforts to help produce programs. There is always room for one more, they said.

Local celebrity Wigmore Pierson, now seen in 40 communities in the South Shore and around Boston on his talkshow, "Pierson to Person," thanked more than 900 guests he has interviewed on his show since he began with Bill Weeks, then town moderator for Cohasset.

Some of the youngest cable producers were Scott Finegan, Joel Reil and Matt Athanasiou, all 12, of Norwell.

In order to get a jump on their careers, they participate in the Wednesday night program, "K.I.D. News."

"It's good experience. Maybe I'll get a job in T.V. advertising," said Athanasiou.

"I'm using it to learn producing and directing skills. I'd like to be a film director," said Finegan.

"I think you should start getting the most experience you can now. When you get older...you'll have all the experience you need," said Riel.

Doug Humphrey and Charlie Peterson, who also work on "K.I.D. News," couldn't be at the awards ceremony.

Evelyn Wolfe helps more children get involved with "Kids Talk," produced annually by her sixth grade classes at Plymouth River School in Hingham. The annual program runs in the springtime, she said.

Hull program director Bill McColgan introduced the remaining annual programs and specials, including "Tablescapes," a fundraiser for the South Shore Arts Center; "Taverna '93," the Cohasset Greek festival; the "Special Olympics," "Heritage Days," "Secret Gardens of Hingham," by Peg Smith, and the "South Shore Arts Festival."

Ted Abadessa produced a "Sportfishing," where young children had a chance to participate, he said.

One child was so excited about his catch, "we had to hold him by the ankles just to make sure he didn't fall overboard," Abbadessa said.

Sunday programming is almost entirely devoted to church news and programs.

"Fatima Today," one of the longest-running religious programs on cable, is staffed by Frank Condry, Nick Pizzella, Kaye Drohan, Virginia Orfao, Louise Marciano and Nancy Stevenson.

Other programs include "Time In The Wood," produced by Charlie Duquette; "First Celebrations," produced by Al Hodgkins; "Amazing Love," produced by Pam Bennet; and "Thomas: The Believer," a one-man play, produced by Stephanie Young.

"Tommy Dunham's Comedy Club" follows the Sunday religious programs with antics by Joe Yuska, Michael Barnes, Kathy Kraysler, Marc DeLorey, Tom Connors, Ben Fuller, Paula Knudsen, Lauren Giallongo, Pat Lambert and Ralph and Marion Barnes.

Scoliosis and education reform to be discussed

Joseph P. O'Brien, president of the National Scoliosis Foundation will discuss the latest news in the research and treatment of scoliosis on Wigmore Pierson's "Pierson to Person" at 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 21 on Channels 3 and 53.

The second guest will be Prudance Goodale, principal at Scituate High School. She will discuss the 1993 Education Reform Act and the school councils now being elected at each public school across the state.

Cohasset author helps kids remember life at camp

their trip.

"It's supposed to prepare them before they go," she said.

One of their activities is to write a list of things to bring.

Another page leaves space for parents to write a letter to their children, so they can read it their first night away from home.

Turn the page and there is a space to make a map of the camp. Some of her former students read a book about a camp and they drew maps to go along with them.

"They really got into it. Some of them were incredibly artistic," she said. "Kids love to design."

On a similar theme, Doherty leaves a page for children to design a camp flag. Doherty wanted to make a logo, but a flag was easier for children to understand.

Campers gain a new perspective on the page which says, "There's a spider on the ceiling in your cabin. What does he see?"

Doherty explained, "The spider was just an example. Drawing is a good motivator. It's a way of communicating."

As she marketed the book to area bookstores and through the media, Doherty learned to appreciate book agents and publishers. She decided that she would much rather devote her energy to creative writing than marketing, she said.

"It's like housework, or cleaning up after a nice meal," she said.

Despite her preference to write rather than sell her book, she made a press release and sent it to about six area newspapers.

"I've been doing press releases for years," she said. "I think it's really important."

She learned about their effectiveness as past-director of the Cohasset Community Center. She once had so much merchandise for a White Elephant Sale, she was worried that she wouldn't be able to sell it all.

She sent press releases to radio stations, newspapers and every media source she could think of.

"On the day of the sale I couldn't get a parking spot," she said.

Last summer, she employed the same outreach skills with similar success, she said.

In addition, she sent samples to camps in Massachusetts. Although the book was published too late for last summer's campers, several have expressed an interest in using the book for the upcoming season, she said.

The book is available at Buttonwood Books and Cards and Shards, both in Cohasset, Bookport in Hingham, and the Front Street Bookshop in Scituate Harbor for $5.

Although Doherty didn't know it, the Bookport in Hingham displayed in the window.

"One of the nicest things that has happened is that the friend that I used to camp with called," after seeing the book on display, she said.

Doherty rekindled a friendship which had been dormant since the third grade.

Doherty has written other children's stories, but is still trying to publish them. She decided to publish My Camp Book on her own so that she could have full control.

"(Two publishers) said I needed a bigger book," she explained. "But I don't feel that a child going to camp is going to spend time on it (if it is too long)."

My Camp Book was something new for Doherty.

"I love trying new things," she said.

In addition to a 20-year teaching career intermittent with rearing three college aged children, the former Mariner Around Town columnist has written for Boston Magazine and the Patriot Ledger.

In her spare time, Doherty paints and takes photographs. One of her photos won an award in the South Shore Arts Festival several years ago.

Currently, she is writing a children's book series about multi-culturalism in city schools, using her own experiences as a background.

"What I would really like to show is that even though you hear of the shootings, (positive things go on in city schools every day)."

She lives on Cedar Acres Lane with two of her children and her husband, John.

Girls look to soccer tourney

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset is now playing the percentages.

The veteran Green Wave team entered the game with the simple desire to improve its already golden record in the South Shore League. Cohasset and its girls' soccer squad had the same aspirations in Thursday's 2-0 loss. Plus some.

Tourney time is just around the corner and the Cohasset clock is ticking. The magic number stands — as it has all season — at 59 percent.

The Skippers have to end their regular season season schedule with at least 59 percent of their games having resulted in victory. A win over Abington would have made the goal that much easier.

But, as they've proved in the past and again this season, the Green Wave is hardly a pushover when it comes to girls' soccer in mid-October on.

"We have a tough two weeks," said head coach Don Satter, who is no stranger to playing past the regular season after coaching at Newton North for

Critical mistakes hinder Skippers

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

You expect a young football team to make mental and physical mistakes as it works its way towards a long-range goal of putting together a consistent, winning squad.

That pretty much sums up Cohasset's 14-0 drubbing by the Carver Crusaders in Saturday's non-league contest. Mistakes on both sides of the ball ran rampant as a critical fumble and interception paved the way for Cohasset's third straight loss.

The Skippers (1-3) opening-game victory against West Bridgewater is beginning to feel like a lifetime ago as Cohasset has been shutout in two of its last three games.

Head coach Ted MacDermott was pleased with the Skippers' overall effort, particularly with their play in the early going when they stopped the Carver (3-1-1) on its first possession.

Cohasset's play changed in a hurry, though, when Carver resorted more to an air attack that punctured the Skippers' secondary.

The fall high school sports season is just about half over.

Therefore it is time for mid-term grades from the professor of local sports.

Here goes and if you have any complaints remember the first rule in journalism: Consider the source.

Best Dynasty

Dave: The Silver Lake boys' soccer team.

The Lakers, under coach Bill Johnson, won the Division I state title in '88, have clinched berths in the state tourney seven straight years and have won the Old Colony League title for three straight years.

So far this season they are undefeated and the No. 1 ranked team in the Boston Globe Coaches Poll.

Credit has to go to Johnson, who founded the program at Silver Lake, as well as the players and the strong youth soccer programs in the member towns.

Joe: The Norwell girls' cross-country team

They're not only tough in track. The Clippers no longer have Bob Littlefield as their coach, but have a solid replacement in Chuck Martin. The former Medford High standout was fifth in the 1983 All-State Meet and has run a 4:17 mile. And don't forget, Martin was the one who trained former Norwell runner Andy Thompson and Duxbury phenom Andy Downin. He knows what it takes to run well.

Biggest Turnaround

Dave: The Hingham High football team.

The Harbormen, under first year coach Tony Rolfe, have won three of their first five games after several years of frustration and sub .500 records.

Rolfe brought a high-powered offensive attack from his assistant coaching duties at New Bedford High and a new winning attitude.

It also helps to have Corey Farina, one of the fastest and toughest backs around, in the backfield.

Joe: The Abington High School football team

Coming off a miserable 0-10 season in '92, the Green Wave is still undefeated at 2-0-3. Head coach Jim Kelliher is known throughout the South Shore League as a no-nonsense coach and that's exactly the way his team has played this season.

Biggest Surprise

Dave: The Scituate High field hockey team.

After losing 18 seniors from a state tourney team due to graduation, it appeared to be a drastic rebuilding year for the Lady Sailors.

However, the club under coach Paul Svenson, has jumped out to a 5-3-2 record and is on line for a second straight tourney berth.

Svenson said the players' hard work over the summer and athletic ability are the reasons for this year's success.

Who am I to disagree.

Joe: The Hull High football team

Head coach John Anderson said this was by no means going to be a rebuilding year after winning the South Shore League and losing to Ipswich in the Division 4B Super Bowl. But that's exactly what it has turned into.

Most versatile player

Dave: Hingham girls' soccer player Debby Elsden.

After the Harborwomen's starting goalie Christi Gignon went down with an injury early in the season, Elsden stepped into

Sharks take two big wins

In the first two games the Sharks put on an offensive clinic, at times seemingly able to score at will.

The next two games were totally different as Bay State Sharks squirt minor team faced off against two veteran teams that represent the iron of the metro league.

First up was last year's North American Amateur Hockey Association division champions, the South Shore Kings. Few teams move the puck as well as the Kings and off the opening face off they began their game of puck control by pinning the Sharks in their own end. The Kings worked the puck in front for two point blank shots on goal but were robbed by goalie Gabe Winer.

The Sharks got on the board first about midway through the first period. The face-off was in the Sharks zone and after a quick huddle you knew there was a play on.

Center Brian Boyle was the quarterback for this one. He turned and had Ryan Hatch move a few steps to his right. The face-off came back onto Ryan's stick who then hit Pat Devine with a pass near the blue line. Pat spotted Dave Saggese all alone at the redline and David passed ahead to Brian Boyle as he crossed the Kings' blue line. Brian had Kings' defensemen all over him but he brilliantly used his body to protect the puck until he hit the top corner.

The next score was also the Sharks'. Brian Lewis and Matt Bourassa had just finished breaking up a Kings play at the redline when Greg Osborne picked up the loose puck and headed up ice.

Thumper turned on the jets and used his speed to beat the Kings' defense. He finished the play with a pretty goal on the shortside.

The second period saw the Kings come back and tie the game. at 2-2. It was an exciting period of up and down hockey with the Sharks keeping it close with some outstanding goaltending from Gabe Winer and a number of big plays in their own end by the Sharks defensive corps. Scotty sparks Garrett Daigler, Matt Bourassa, Ryan Hatch and Kenny Roche were under constant pressure from the Kings' forwards.

The third period was all Sharks. They quickly regained the lead when Dave Saggese popped in a Brian Boyle rebound. Nick Dunn and Chris Coady were without their crafty linemate Bobby Noonan who was sick in bed but supersub Chris Follett filled in and did a great job.

The Sharks finished the scoring when goal and was a standout for the team keeping them in several close games.

When Gignon returned, Elsden moved back to the field and continued her strong two-way play for first year coach Kristin Harkins.

So, if a baby-sitter cancels at the last minute, or if the singer you hired months ago can't make it to your wedding because of the flu, give Debby a call. She'll do the job.

Joe: Rockland girls' soccer player Nikki Begin

Scoring aside, the two-time all-star hustles back on defense and has been a big source of protection with the fullbacks in front of fellow co-captain Jen Kinsman in goal.

Best player who hasn't played that much this season

Marshfield High boys' soccer player Bill Deftos.

Off-season injuries to his ankles have limited Deftos, last year's leading scorer in the Atlantic Coast League, to only four games this season.

However, in those four games, Deftos has been a standout. He recently scored a hat trick against Hingham in the Rams 3-0 win and in the process set a school record for most goals scored.

If he is healthy down the stretch, the Rams could be a tough team in the Division I state tourney.

Best football team

Dave: Norwell High School.

The Clippers, under coach Jim Sullivan, are 5-0 and are alone in first place in the South Shore League.

If running back Joe Krainin can stay healthy and productive, the team should be the favorite down the stretch for the SSL title and Super Bowl berth.

Krainin rushed for 1,000 yards last season and has more than 600 so far this season.

Joe: Ditto, but don't tell Brett Johnson and the Hanover Indians I said so.

Most dominant player

Dave: Silver Lake boys' soccer player Steve McAuliffe.

McAuliffe dominates the game from his midfield position. He breaks up defensive plays, sets up the Laker offense and is tireless on the field.

He is also a standout basketball and baseball player for the Lakers.

Add him to any high school boys' soccer team and the team has a chance for the state tourney.

Joe: Abington High cross-country runner Zack Smith

The senior all-star has won the South Shore League Meet every year since ninth grade and has every course record in the league except for two. Case closed.

A potentially dangerous situation existed during Saturday's Cohasset/Carver football game that I've noticed at several gridiron battles over the course of the past three years. The Skippers' cheerleaders were lined alone the sidelines yelling their encouragement, just a few yards from the players not on the field.

The danger? Just picture a fullback sweeping around the end only to be tackled out of bounds by a tough, b[illegible] defender, say, Skipper co-captain Andy Church, who weighs in at 224 pounds without equipment. Now imagine Church and the fullback—lets say he weighs 180 pounds—barrelling into one of Cohasset's cheerleaders who can't get out of the way in time. That's 404 pounds of built-up momentum colliding with a 110-125 pound cheerleader. The odds of this situation happening is far from unrealistic. And if it did occur, you can bet the girl (or girls) would sustain some sort of injury. In fact, they'd be extremely lucky to come out of it with a few bumps and bruises.

The cheerleaders aren't on the sidelines all the time. During half-time they perform their routine to fans from the playing field. And they do many of their cheers on the track circling the field, well away from the action on the field.

Cohasset's cheerleaders provide a big boost to a team still in its building stages. From the players right on up to the fans in the bleachers, they're appreciated for their efforts. Lets keep them far enough away from the field, out of harms way, so they can continue to display their talent.

While I'm on the subject of Cohasset football, Scott Theriault and co-captain Chris Rolandelli are currently ranked 2-3 in scoring among the team's playing independently. It's too bad we won't be able to see how the two senior backs would fare in the touchdown department when the Skippers officially become members of the South Shore League next year.

The Oct. 19 South Shore League field hockey match-up between the two undefeateds, Hanover and Hull, has the makings of a dandy. For starters, Hull has scored 39 goals this season, while allowing just two. Those pair of goals came in its season-opening 2-2 tie against the Indians. The tie stands as the only blemish on the undefeated records and it was Hanover who beat Hull for the SSL championship last year.

There was also a fair amount of controversy surrounding Hanover's goal, which tied the game in the waning seconds. According to Pirates' head coach Clare Brady, the referee didn't hear the umpire count down the final seconds. She argued the final goal was scored at least two seconds after the clock had wound its way down to zero.

The contest will also feature two of the premier players in Eastern Mass. Hull's Michelle Frazier and Hanover's Sue Johnston are ranked 2-3 in overall points. It should be interesting to see who gets the edge in the Frazier/Johnston match-up by the final whistle.

Marshfield's Kenneth Beers is entered in the 33rd annual Drambuie Rusty Nail Hole-In-One Sweepstakes. Beers drilled a hole-in-one on the 155-yard, 17th hole at the South Shore Country Club on Aug. 20.

Beers and SSCC golf pro Kevin Taylor, who validated the sweepstakes entry, are eligible to win a grand prize of a one-week trip for two to Scotland, a VIP tour of the Drambuie Liqueur Co. and $1,000.

The sweepstakes is one of the country's most successful sports promotions of its kind.

Boston Bruins' broadcaster Derek Sanderson will be bringing his personal story of his battle, and ultimate triumph, over alcohol and drug addiction to Scituate High School on Oct. 25 at 7:30 p.m.

Sanderson, a member of the Bruins during their 1970 Stanley Cup season, speaks regularly to high-school age students and has the reputation of being a powerful speaker, able to get his message across in a no-nonsense manner.

Sanderson is appearing on behalf of the "Tucker Anthony Cares" program. Anthony, a New York Stock Exchange member, centered in Boston, shares a deep concern for youngsters threatened by alcohol and drugs.

10 years. "We had a good practice yesterday. They realize they're going to have a tough two weeks and they're going to go for it."

With six games remaining Cohasset must come away nine points richer. And to do that, the Skippers have to beat three teams who have already defeated them during the first half of the season.

Regardless of whether they qualify for the tournament or not, Satter likes the knowledge the Skippers have acquired playing against the more physical teams in the SSL.

"We are a very young team," he said. "Every game is a very good learning experience for us. There are occasions where we take our lumps while we're getting that learning experience."

The Green Wave provided a fair amount of tutoring in Cohasset's most recent game. Abington showed the Skippers they can't play lethargically when a squad comes at them with a kick-and-run offense.

"We came out a little timid," said Satter, who believes much of the lethargy displayed by Cohasset was due to a near full-week lay-off between games.

"Abington is bigger than us and it showed in the first half. We got ourselves into a little hole by halftime and couldn't climb out."

Karen Curran and Jen McCarthy took care of the Wave's scoring in the first half. That proved to be all Abington needed as they hung on to shutout Cohasset, despite the Skippers' surge in the second. As has been the case in so many games this season, the Skippers outshot Abington, 20-18. Erin Murphy and Hanna Begin each had more than one great chance to score, but couldn't capitalize after storming through the Green Wave's backfield.

Cohasset goaltender Catie Campbell returned from her eight-game lay-off and played surprisingly well. Campbell, who broke a finger in practice after the team's first game of the season, practiced for just three days before Satter gave her the nod to start.

"She played very well," he said.

For half a game, so did the rest of the Skippers. They'll have to add another half of solid, physical play. Fifty-nine percent offers little leeway.

Sharks take two big victories in youth hockey action

Dave Saggese got his second goal of the game off a nice pass from a hustling Pat Devine. Final score Sharks 4, Kings 2.

This was the first big test of the year for the team and they passed with flying colors.

The next big test would come the following day against hard hitting arch rival Hobomock Chiefs. The Chiefs came out flying for this one. They out skated, out hit and out hustled the Sharks in the early going and had a 1-0 lead to show for their efforts.

Despite the pressure, goaltender John Lynch kept it close with some big saves. The Sharks got on the board when a still not fully recovered Bobby Noonan stole the puck in the slot and hit the five hole with a quick wrist shot. Bobby must have been feeling better because on his next shift he put a beautiful open ice hit on a Chiefs' player, picked up the loose puck and hit Greg Osborne with a pass at center ice.

Thumper lit the light and it was 2-1 Sharks. The game got very chippy in the second period with both teams getting called for crosschecking, high sticking and charging.

The Sharks next goal was short-handed. Scotty Sparks and Garret Daigler teamed up to get the puck to Dave Saggese and it was 3-1.

The lead was short lived as Hobomock fought back to tie the game. That was as close as it would get.

Scotty McGinn and Brian Lewis worked the puck into the Hobomock zone. Brian faked the shot and passed to Greg Osborne. Greg had his second goal of the game and the sharks had the lead for good. Nick Dunn was robbed once and hit the post once, both times after Chris Coady worked the puck out from the corner. The Sharks' fifth goal came after Ryan Hatch took the Chiefs' puck carried hard into the boards, Garret Daigler picked up the loose puck and sent Brian Boyle away alone to hit the top corner.

The final goal of the game went to Pat Devine. Matt Bourassa banged hard into the corner and won the battle for the puck. He passed behind the net to Kenny Roche who went end to end on a beautiful rush, swung behind the Hobomock net and passed out to Dave Saggese.

Rather than make a poor shot Dave made a nice pass to Pat for the goal. As the final seconds ticked away the Chiefs were breaking into the Sharks' zone on what seemed to be a breakaway. The puck carrier was caught from behind by a diving Ryan Hatch who hooked his stick and prevented the shot at point blank range from being taken.

The puck glided harmlessly to goalie John Lynch, the buzzer sounded and the Sharks were 4-0 for the season.

Critical mistakes hinder Skippers

"I thought the first quarter we were in charge. In command," said MacDermott. "We stopped their first drive."

Relying mainly on the ground game, MacDermott had to hit the skies when Shawn Lucier ran untouched into the end zone from 5-yards out and scored on the conversion to make it 14-0 with 1:13 left in the half.

"After falling behind 14-0 you just can't stay on the ground," MacDermott said. "We don't have that player who can score from anywhere on the field so we had to put the ball in the air."

Cohasset's defense did the job when it mattered during Carver's opening drive. The Crusaders picked up four of their seven first downs, but Mike Riley and Chad Whitman stopped back Derek Medico cold when Carver opted to go for the first on a fourth-and-4 from the Skippers' 14.

The defense came up with a number of other strong plays that MacDermott should be pleased with when he reviews the game film.

Andy Church and Brian Pattison were in on a number of tackles. Dorian Bryant burst through the Carver line, early in the fourth quarter, and sacked the Crusaders' elusive quarterback Tony DeMeo (11-of-20, 168 yards, 1 interception). And Chris Rolandelli prevented Carver from pulling further ahead when he intercepted a DeMeo pass at the Cohasset 36.

But it was the mistakes that far outweighed what good the Skippers could do on offense.

Scott Theriault bobbled a punt, which was recovered by Carver at the Cohasset 49. DeMeo completed passes of 22 and 14 yards to Chris Lodge and Brian Helms. Each pass was good enough for a first down. DeMeo kept the ball for himself and completed the drive on a first-and-goal from the 8 to make it 6-0 at 4:15 of the second. He pitched the ball to Lucier on the conversion, but the wide receiver couldn't make it in for the two points.

The Crusaders struck again on their very next possession. A Cohasset offsides moved the ball back to the 35. Skipper quarterback Jeff Littlehale faded back to pass on a third-and-14, but his throw was picked off by DeMeo, who ran it back to the Cohasset 24. Four plays later and Lucier ran in untouched from the 5.

MacDermott told the team at halftime it had to remain focused on its ultimate goal and to avoid the mental mistakes they had made.

"We can't lose sight of what we want to do," said MacDermott.

By game's end, he knew there was a lot of work ahead of the team if it wanted to improve. "We're still at the drawing board," MacDermott said.

Bay State games to be held in February

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation and the Northern Berkshires Chamber of Commerce are proud to announce the return of the Bay State Winter Games, Massachusetts' own Olympic-style winter sports festival, to the Northern Berkshires for its ninth year. Competition in four sports and a variety of special events are scheduled to be held February 11, 12, and 13, 1994.

The 1994 winter events include: figure skating at Williams College in Williamstown, MA, alpine skiing at Jiminy Peak in Hancock, MA, cross country skiing at Swift River Touring Area in Cummington, MA, and Masters ice hockey, for players over 30 years old, is tentatively scheduled to be held at Vietnam Veterans Memorial Skating Rink in North Adams, MA.

Among the special events is the Bay State Skate, a figure skating exhibition featuring local and national figure skating stars, which will take place Saturday, Feb. 12 at 7:30 p.m. at Williams College Lansing Chapman Rink. Last year's Bay State Skate once again played to a capacity crowd. Star figure skater Mark Mitchell's spectacular routine highlighted the night's many sensational performances. Previous performers include seven U.S. Olympic figure skaters, most recently Nancy Kerrigan and Paul Wylie. This year's star performers are yet to be confirmed.

Drama workshop opens

A.R. Gurney, the author of "Love Letters" and one of America's most popular playwrights, will be represented on the stage of Cohasset High School Oct. 28-29, when the Cohasset Drama Workshop presents one of his most effective works, "What I Did Last Summer." This warmhearted, gently humorous memory play delineates the coming of age of a teenage boy against the background of World War II. It was originally produced by off-Broadway's prestigious Circle Repertory Company

Charlie (junior Kevin O'Donnell), an incipiently rebellious 14-year-old, is summering in a well-to-do vacation colony on the shores of Lake Erie with his mother (junior Mary Ellen Rayment) and sister (senior Jennifer Vanderpool) while his father is in the Pacific. Although he intends to spend the summer loafing with his friends Ted (junior Nick Welz and Bonnie (sophomore Grace Deveney) before going off to an expensive boarding school in the fall, Charlie encounters an iconoclastic art teacher (senior Karen Kristiansen) who exposes him to her "radical" ideas about life. A conflict between Charlie's conservative mother and his new mentor is inevitable.

"What I Did Last Summer" is being directed by Ron Emmons. Assisting him are art director Maria Petrakis, a junior, and stage manager Allison Ritts, a sophomore. Performances will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Oct. 28 and 29. Tickets are $4 in advance and $5 at the door. They may be attained from the main office at Cohasset High School.

A conflict between Charlie's conservative mother and his new mentor is inevitable.

"What I Did Last Summer" is being directed by Ron Emmons. Assisting him are art director Maria Petrakis, a junior, and stage manager Allison Ritts, a sophomore. Performances will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Oct. 28 and 29. Tickets are $4 in advance and $5 at the door. They may be attained from the main office at Cohasset High School.

College financial help

MassPlan, a comprehensive, easy to understand college loan program for middle-income families is now available.

The MassPlan, administered by the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority, is a set of financing options including a fixed or variable interest rate and a home mortgage option.

The MassPlan is designed to help middle-income families who do not receive sufficient financial aid from traditional sources and who can benefit from the program's simplified approach to college financing.

For more information about the MassPlan, or for a brochure and application, call 1-800-842-1531. Brochures may also be obtained by calling Senator Brian McDonald at 722-1646.

TAYLOR LUMBER Goes To
THE KIPLING HOUSE
Brattleboro, Vermont

In 1892 Rudyard Kipling came to the United States to find sanctuary in Vermont with his wife's family. Soon after he moved there he was captivated by this fresh and sparsely populated country and decided to settle there permanently. He purchased eleven acres in Brattleboro V.T. and built an enormous house. This he called Naulakha, The Jewel Beyond Price. One hundred years later in 1992 an English company purchased the property and decided to renovate it back to it's original design and Edwardian varnish. Taylor Lumber was honored to be chosen to supply materials to this home, where Kipling entertained his best friend Mark Twain and wrote Captains Courageous and The Jungle Book as well as many other famous novels.

Sally Anderson

Books and Sally Anderson have been a team since her childhood.

"When a new book came into our home it was a treasured possession," she recalls.

"My mother respected books, and she wanted us to do the same."

So after retiring 11 years ago, Sally found the natural place to give some of her time: the library.

For several hours on Monday mornings, Sally helps library staffer Nancy Knight with the new books that come in.

special friend

"Nancy's a wonderful gal who does everything here efficiently and well — and she tells me what to do and how," Sally adds with a smile.

Sally "cracks the spine" of the new books — which involves opening 20-or-so pages at a time and pressing them flat. The procedure helps extend the life of a book, by loosening up the spine, she explains.

And while trying to resist the temptation to stop and read the new releases — Sally also adds the date-due slips and covers the book jackets with plastic.

Sally also helps out by mending the old books. She uses tape, cardboard, glue — whatever it takes, she says.

For Sally — whose favorite reading includes biographies and historical fiction — it's a labor of love.

"It's wonderful to have a library as good as this in a small town," she notes.

Before moving to Cohasset from Hingham where she and her husband spent 30 years, Sally worked for Talbot's gift department for 14 years.

Part of her job involved going to New York to gift fairs — which were more work than fun, she recalls.

The mother-of-three and grandmother-of-four also volunteers for the American Cancer Society by driving sufferers to their chemotherapy treatments and by answering the society's hotline.

When her kids were small, she volunteered at the Museum of Science in Boston.

"I ended up in their library. I did mending for them. It was fun and a great challenge," she recalls. One of her favorite memories was seeing the original Audubon books which are housed in the science museum library.

Sally has found the Paul Pratt Library to be the perfect match for her time and energy.

"I thought the library might be fun," she says. "It was and it is.

"I've enjoyed it (volunteering) very much. Working here on Monday morning is a great way to start the week."

Greenbush Line numbers add up, MBTA says

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

By the year 2000 — 78 Cohasset commuters will be dropped off with a "kiss" at Cohasset's station, according to the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority.

And if commuter rail returns to the South Shore — 19 people will walk to the station and 171 will park at the Rte. 3A site near the old skating rink.

Last week members of the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) learned of these figures which are part of a feasibility study on restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad.

Surface rail and surface rail with a tunnel under Hingham Square are among six alternatives being studied by the MBTA.

Consultants said close-to-home, reliable transit alternatives which reduce travel time will attract commuters who would otherwise go by car.

Estimated travel time by train from Cohasset to Boston is 42 minutes.

According to the study, during the morning rush hour — the Greenbush Line rail would attract about 3,000 or about 16 percent of the corridor's Boston-

Music Circus seeks liquor license, corporate dollars

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Next summer the South Shore Music Circus(SSMC) may try to boost profits with more country acts and beer and wine sales.

But don't let that fool you: the management will try to raise even more money through corporate sponsorship.

According to general manager Vince Longo, who came on board in November 1992, SSMC is seeking a relationship with a major corporation. Corporate dollars would be used to boost the Music Circus in exchange for exposure.

As it enters its 44th season, the non-profit South Shore Music Circus and its Hyannis-based counterpart, the Cape Cod Melody Tent, are struggling to break even.

Good summer weather boosted sales to the point where SSMC is in the black and the Melody Tent has narrowed its debt-gap, Longo said.

But profits based almost entirely on concessions would increase dramatically with a beer and wine

Town meeting wraps up in record time

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

George Marlette said one of his goals as town moderator is to "demystify and streamline" the town meeting process.

And he went a long way toward reaching the latter half of his goal at the special town meeting Monday. The twenty articles on the warrant were wrapped up in less time than the average selectmen's meeting takes.

Business got underway at 7:45 p.m. and was completed in about two hours.

The 170-plus who turned out were in a voting — not a talking mood.

Sixteen articles were given the nod and four were indefinitely postponed.

In spite of opposition from the advisory committee, voters decided to allow selectmen to set the hours at the Sandy Beach parking lot.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said closing the beach earlier in the summer months will help curtail underage drinking at the site.

Noonan said one of his priorities is to curb the teen-age drinking problem in town.

"Sandy Beach is the best place to start," he said.

Speaking in opposition, Ken Ingber of the advisory

'Spring forward, fall back,' Sunday

Early risers pick up an extra hour of daylight this weekend while the 9-to-5 set faces the prospect of driving home from work in the dark.

The clocks go from 1:59 a.m. back to 1 a.m. Sunday morning as the state moves from the summer's Daylight Savings Time to the winter's Standard Time.

Remember, set the clock back one hour when you go to bed Saturday night and avoid the embarrassment of finding yourself in church an hour ahead of everybody else on Sunday morning.

Cohasset's week

Gift is acknowledged

Selectmen acknowledged a $140 gift from the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce which went toward purchasing grass seed for the Town Common.

At the request of Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle, the board has sent a letter thanking the chamber for its contribution.

Surplus equipment noted

Selectmen gave town accountant Michael Buckley the go-ahead to declare surplus seven Digital VT102 terminals, five matching keyboards, and a Digital Letterprinter 100.

These items were purchased in 1983 and have either been replaced with newer Digital equipment or PCs, Buckley said.

"A survey conducted by the town of Hingham in 1990 revealed that this equipment is obsolete and practically worthless. The items are available for inspection in the (town hall) basement," Buckley said.

Island irrigation denied

The Massachusetts Highway Department has denied the town's request to install an irrigation system to the traffic island on Route 3A & Sohier St.

"After reviewing the proposal, the Department feels that water entering the road from wind blown spray or a misdirected sprinkler head on such a small island area could cause a safety problem," Bernard McCourt, district highway director said.

Asphalt at the island was recently dug up by the highway department and the area was planted by volunteers led by resident Susan DiPesa.

Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon he planned to contact the state to see if the island could be watered during the growing season.

In the state's memo there was also some confusion over the location of the island. The memo referred to the island being near Cushing Plaza not Cohasset Plaza. Doyon said he would check to see if the state meant the 3A/Sohier Street location.

Derek Youngman talks to the ducks much to the amusement of his parents, Brad and Ellen, at the town common. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Appointments are made

Selectmen have appointed Donald DiMichele, 264 Jerusalem Rd., to the Zoning Board of Appeals as an associate member and Robert Hillman, 21 Norfolk Rd., to the cable-TV committee.

Vacancies still exist on the handicapped commission, cable-TV committee, school facilities committee, Government Island study committee, water resources protection committee, and mosquito control committee. Call the selectmen's office at 383-9900 for information.

Greenbush Line numbers add up

bound commuters.

Using 1990 census data and MBTA forecasts — the study also concludes that the rail alternative would attract numbers on a par with commuter rail lines in other parts of the state.

A 1992 MBTA report indicates weekday boardings on the Needham Line of 1,337; Framingham 2,863; Lowell Line 3,197; and 3,558 on the Fitchburg Line which has 17 stations. This compares with more than 3,800 projected inbound boardings on the Greenbush Line for the year 2010.

Barry Faulker, senior project manager with Sverdrup, said restoration of the Greenbush Line would have a substantial impact on Rte. 3A traffic eliminating 840 auto trips and "a somewhat lesser" impact on Rte. 3 and the Southeast Expressway, which would lose 415 automobiles during peak periods.

Faulker said commuter rail alternatives would divert more than 1,600 people (representing 1,260 automobile trips) in the year 2000 from principal routes. However, no attempt was made to estimate latent travel demand, between the South Shore and Boston or other destinations, which may occur to fill up the vacated highway "spaces," he said.

Travel time saved using rail vs. faster commuter boats and buses was also discussed.

Committee members and those in the audience did not entirely accept the study's figures.

Louis Eaton of Cohasset said a commuter's destination in Boston as well as his origin should be considered.

Saving two, four, or eight minutes "washes away when compared with where you're going," he said.

Eaton suggested the MBTA take a page from political 'poll-sters" book.

"The figures should be subject to an error of plus or minus four percent," he said.

The state-mandated CAC, composed of members from affected communities, meets monthly to review the feasibility study for Greenbush.

In addition to above-ground commuter rail service from Boston to Scituate and commuter rail service with a tunnel under Hingham Square, the MBTA is also studying the possibility of expanding commuter boat and bus service.

Music Circus seeks liquor license, corporate dollars

concession at SSMC.

At $4 per beer, the SSMC will be able to raise its concession sales by 25 percent, but also draw beer and wine companies as sponsors for different acts.

Based on its track-record of community support, SSMC board chairman Bruce Tuthill said he hopes the neighborhood will be amenable to beer and wine sales at SSMC.

Since 1986, SSMC has donated $1.3 million to local charities.

"We're going to ask the community to help us a little bit (in return)," he said.

Cohasset High School athletic director Clark Chatterton manages the vending contract for the SMCC and the Melody Tent during the summer.

This fall, SSMC will apply for one of the available Cohasset liquor licenses.

While half of Longo's job is business manager, the other half is talent buyer and coordinator.

His plan for the ensuing season includes increased country acts, and more variety in the schedule.

Country music star Laurie Morgan almost sold out with subscription sales and Mary Chapin Carpenter sold out in Hyannis, Longo said.

Two radio stations, WCLB and WBCS, surfaced in the past year with "deep pockets" for concert promotions, he added.

Instead of having annual stand-by performers, SSMC plans to vary the talent from year to year.

"It's like planting corn in the same field every year," said Tuthill.

Country singer Willie Nelson was asked to skip the SSMC this year, for fear that his popularity would wear thin, but the star refused.

Nelson loves playing the 2,300-seat theater, plus he plays golf while he is in town, Tuthill said.

The intimacy of the theater and the vacation amenities are the draw for the artists, Tuthill said.

"We've got to appeal to them at a different level. We can't do it with a check," he said.

Longo is using the SSMC charm and a personal connection to lure Jerry Seinfeld, of T.V.-sitcom fame, to perform next season.

Longo said he booked Seinfeld on his first gig ever in Worcester four and a half years ago, he said, but he has not heard whether the sought-after star will return the favor on the South Shore.

Tickets for the popular comedian would be offered first to the 1,600 members of the SSMC's specialty ticket holder's clubs: the V.I.P-Club and the Gold Circle Club, then to the general public.

Longo's experiment with slightly lower ticket prices had little effect on sales last summer, he said. He lowered ticket prices by 18 percent — an average of about $2.50 per ticket last season.

Lower ticket prices mean a lower premium for the acts, but not much difference for the audiences, Longo explained.

"I thought it was the national trend at the time," he said.

On the South Shore, audiences appreciated the slightly lower price, but ticket sales at the Melody Tent were unaffected.

"You can't lower ticket low enough (to combat a recession)," Tuthill said.

Tuthill blames the recession and the nature of the entertainment business for SSMC's financial struggles.

"We've had a very scary experience in these last couple of years," said Tuthill, who wouldn't disclose the company's recent sales figures.

The company will release the season's financial totals at the beginning of November.

SSMC suffered six cancellations last season — five of them in July — more than any other year.

Acts cancel if they don't think they'll be able to make the money they originally planned on, Longo explained. They may say they're sick or that they were called to [redacted] a television or movie role.

"In years past, they were given more of a percentage of the gate. If they're not doing well, they get sick. They don't want to perform," Longo said.

"The general trend in music is that artists are demanding more money up front."

Longo's answer was to have less shows and be choosy about the acts — and to keep the upper hand in the talent's guaranteed payment.

Cosmetic changes accompany the business plans at SSMC: the Circus recently bought a new, $46,585 tent complete with it's own ventilation system, which will make the tent more comfortable in the summer heat, Longo said.

Town meeting wraps up in record time

committee said the town should enforce the laws prohibiting underage drinking rather than changing the by-law.

Approval of the $156,367 needed to pay for the new teachers' and school employees' contracts also drew some discussion.

School officials were asked to explain the affects of the newly enacted education reform law on the budget and what impact the teachers' contract would have on Prop.2-1/2 constraints.

Marlette quickly ended the chance for any drawn out debate on the new education reform law explaining that town meeting was not the forum to discuss the issue.

Harbormaster Shawn Kelly will get a computer and printer for his office after all.

He won the support of the computer study committee before town meeting. The computer committee hadn't recommended a computer for the harbormaster because Kelly's predecessor, Irving Gadow, didn't want one.

Kelly said he needs the computer to track the mooring list, user fees, and other record keeping.

Voters also opted to use a collection agency for ambulance bills which are unpaid after 120 days or more.

In other action voters:

- appropriated $3,200 for a clerk in the assessors' office;
- set the stage for a inter-municipal agreement to share public works equipment with other towns;
- approved spending $55,000 for repairs to the Sandy Beach riprap wall.
- appropriated $5,000 to clean a drainage ditch along Atlantic Ave.;
- approved spending $56,000 to update the town's computer system;
- authorized $4,992 to install guard rails on Atlantic Ave. near Cunningham Bridge;
- entered into an agreement with Hingham and approved an expenditure of $2,500 to jointly purchase and maintain a van to provide transportation for the disabled;
- appropriated $1,000 to install a handicapped parking space at the library;
- approved spending $3,021 for new generators;
- spent $2,941.26 to pay several bills from FY'93.

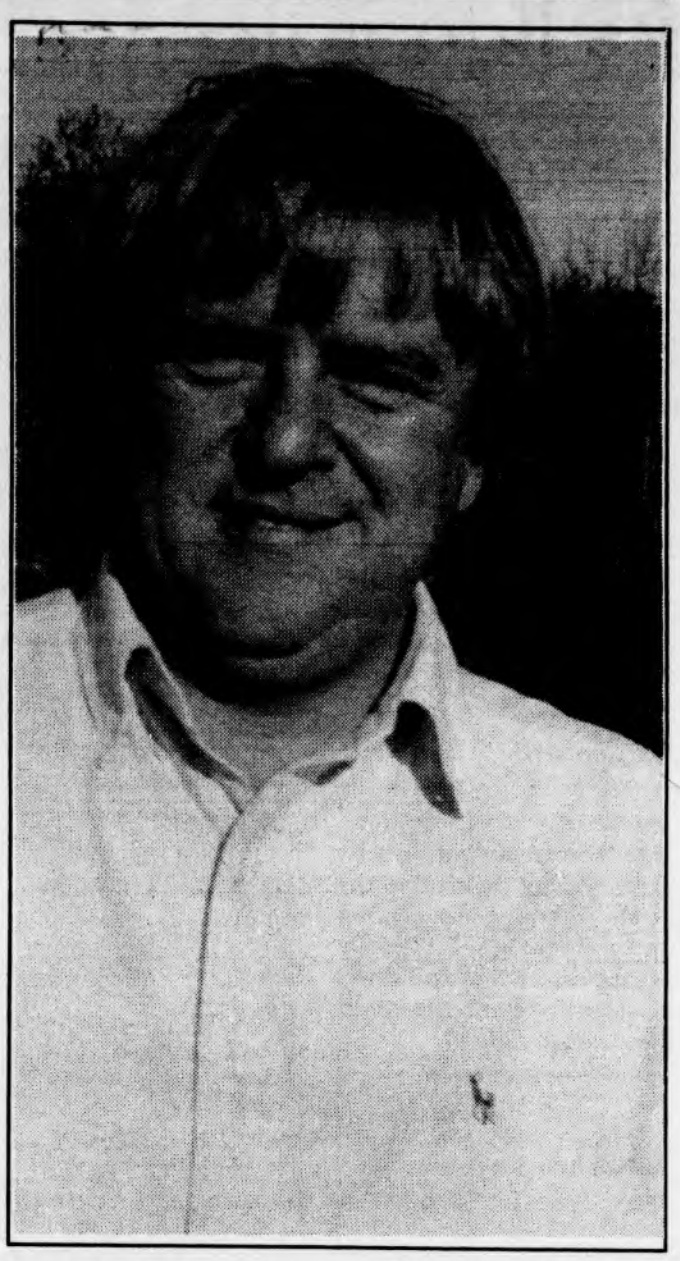
Clark Chatterton



Name: Clark Chatterton

Occupation: Athletic director at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High and head of the concessions at the South Shore Music Circus and Cape Cod Melody Tent.

Best day of your life: Thanksgiving Day 1963 — which was the day I got married.

Most embarrassing moment: Being in the business I'm in dealing with so many people at the Music Circus and school — there are too many to mention! For example, last week the field wasn't lined for soccer.

Goal: Staying healthy and continuing to do what I'm doing.

Favorite season: Summer. There's no question about it. I love the warm weather and never complain about it.

Best vacation: The last two Christmases. We took the whole family to Florida and plan to do the same this year.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: The State House on Beacon Hill.

Favorite book: Red Badge of Courage by Stephen Crane.

Favorite TV show: All "news" shows. I'm a news junkie.

Biggest worry: That my family all stays healthy.

Favorite place: Cohasset without doubt.

Favorite junk-food: Fries and the Buffalo Wings, Sallyann makes. (Clark's wife, Sallyann is the Around Town columnist for the Cohasset Mariner).

Person you would most like to meet: Jim Ed Rice.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

INGREDIENTS FOR INVESTMENTS

QUESTION: Why has real estate proven to be such an excellent investment over the years as compared to other investments?

ANSWER: Housing prices have gone up steeply since the mid-60's for two basic reasons. First, the number of new housing units built each year was far below that which it should have been. Since there is a steady growth in population, this puts pressure on our housing reserves and prices rise.

Second, there have been inflationary increases in land, labor and material costs that go into building a house. Historically, real estate values have always increased faster than the cost of living

Drama workshop opens

A.R. Gurney, the author of "Love Letters" and one of America's most popular playwrights, will be represented on the stage of Cohasset High School at 8 p.m. Oct. 28-29, when the Cohasset Drama Workshop presents one of his most effective works, "What I Did Last Summer." This warmhearted, gently humorous memory play delineates the coming of age of a teenage boy against the background of World War II. Tickets are $4 in advance and $5 at the door. They may be attained from the main office at Cohasset High School.

Early release day

Oct. 28 will be an early release day in Cohasset for Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools only. There will be no afternoon kindergarten and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: buses will leave Deer Hill School at 12:25 p.m. and Joseph Osgood School at 12:55 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all schools.

DO YOU NEED A WILL?

To answer the question "Who NEEDS a WILL?", it is simpler to respond in the negative; YOU DO NOT NEED A WILL IF YOU INTEND TO DIE WITH NO FAMILY, NO FRIENDS AND NO ASSETS TO BE CONCERNED ABOUT... Obviously, for most of us, this is not the case!

Ensure that your wishes are carried out in the event of a catastrophic illness or even death... Protect yourself as well as those you love!

WHAT YOU WILL NEED:

- Will: Allows you to determine those individuals who receive your property at death. It also allows you to name a personal representative for your estate affairs, appoint a guardian for minor children and set up trusts for your children.
- Health Care Proxy: The appointment of a person you trust to make medical decisions in the event that you are unable to.
- Living Will: A declaration that in the event of a catastrophic illness, you do not want to be kept alive by artificial means.
- Power of Attorney: Naming another person you trust as your "agent" to handle your general financial affairs if you are unable to.

At the Law Office of Alan H. Segal we believe that in today's world every individual should have these basic and necessary documents. Therefore, we offer basic "Will" packages at an affordable price. More importantly, we understand your busy schedule and can produce your Will package within a half hour. All this without sacrificing service and quality! Our basic Will package includes the necessary documents mentioned above.

Call 617-848-6272 and ask for Carol for an immediate appointment (day and evening appointments available).

Cohasset Metco kicks off year with family dinner

By Joan Kovach
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Metco Program celebrated the start of another school year with its annual Cohasset Metco Family Dinner held Sunday, Oct. 24 at the high school cafeteria. Dinner chairperson Dayle Dickinson once again, with the help of her volunteer cooks, assembled many pans of delicious homemade lasagna. This, accompanied by garlic bread and salad supplied by the Cohasset host families, made wonderful feast. After dinner, luscious desserts contributed by the Boston families complemented the meal, and for a few of the children in attendance, we noticed, made up the entire meal. Later, everyone enjoyed watching the younger children bob for apples and capture donuts hung from string. About 150 people were in attendance. Although smaller than some of the previous dinners, this party provided an informal opportunity for Boston and Cohasset families to meet and visit with each other, some for the first time.

Before dinner, Ms. Dickinson announced some of the programs Metco is starting up for the year. They include the following:

•STAYDAYS, which offer an opportunity for the grammar school students from Boston to spend some time in Cohasset outside of school, will begin on an early release day, Thursday, Nov. 4. On STAYDAYS, Boston students visit their host families from 1 p.m. until 2:50 p.m., when the bus leaves.

•METCO NEWS, a project aimed at increasing communication between Metco and the community, will publish articles, such as this one, in the local press and welcomes writers, editors, typists, photos and stories. Those interested may call Joan Kovach at 383-6358.

•EXTENDED FAMILIES PROGRAM is a new project opening up Cohasset Metco to anyone interested in the program who wants to participate. Anyone who supports the philosophy of the Metco Program and is committed to maintain Metco as a presence in our community may participate in any one of a variety of ways. For more information or to submit your name or ideas, please call Marilyn Adams at 383-0257.

•THE BOSTON LATE BUS, a supportive transportation service for Boston students who stay late to participate in extracurricular activities at Cohasset High School is back, and needs support. Budget cuts on the state level ended the late bus about four years ago, which meant students had to stay in Cohasset on school nights or travel on public transportation until late in the evening after activities if their parents could not drive to Cohasset each night to pick them up. Support from the Gridiron Club and soon, we hope, from other organizations and individuals, as well as contributions from Boston parents, businesses and the funds raised by a dance to be held later this year, will have the Boston Late Bus rolling once again. around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ We must begin with Boston University news. Among the 1,144 students receiving degrees (after much hard work) were Beth J. Bissonnette with an MBA in Business Administration and Management; Elizabeth M. Collind, B.S in Special Education; and, James Martin, MAPhD in Physiology. We congratulate all of you. Please, let us know what great jobs you have!! B.U. has a great reputation!

❑ Okay folks, on to Babson News!! Michael S. Connor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy F. Connor of 45 Windy Hill Road fame, is entering as a first year student. We surely wish him well!

And John D. Pompeo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Pompeo, 11 Ripley Road, graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree.

Dan, as most know, is seeking fame in the hockey world, he is super and certainly should be able to do whatever he wishes with hockey!! We wish you the best in your endeavors, Dan!

❑ Kimberly and Mark Hannon of Pembroke are very happy to announce the birth of their first child, Sydney Elizabeth Hannon, Sept. 11 at the Quincy Hospital. Sydney weighed 7 pounds, 10 ounces.

Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. David Pinkus of Hingham and Mr. and Mrs. William Hannon of Cohasset.

❑ Boy, does the Collins family have news this week!!! Remember when we told you about Matthew, and how he won a medal recently in the Olympics for rowing? Well, he was recently outstanding male athlete of the year, elected by the U. S. rowing team. YEAH!!! Matthew.

Laurel Collins is following suit, she is a member of a rowing team also! Her team, part of University of Massachusetts, won the New England Championships, plus she and her team won the National Championships (College). Do you wonder why their parents, Fran and Gail, are ever-so-proud of their children? Oh my!!!

❑ Boy, does Saint Anslem College have news!! Cohasset news!! Tara A. Gallagher of 364 Beechwood Street, and Michael J. Reynolds of 364 Beechwood St, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Reynolds Sr. of 364 Beechwood Street, have both enrolled at the famous college and we certainly hope that they will send us news about their brand new lives!!

We miss you, but hope that you got the Chamber's special package, especially for you!! Did your dorm mates xxxooo the presents?

❑ We extend deep sympathy to the Laugelle family. Betty was a special lady who will be missed. Great people, great family.

❑ Congrats go to Michael E. Tetreault, who was appointed to the personnel board. Thank you for giving the time and the efforts to a great job!!

❑ Did you know that the Summer Program, under the Cohasset Recreation Department, had 330 children? And, under the direction of Ted Carroll, it was a tremendous success? We, as townspeople, should be proud, and the next time that you see Ted give him a round of applause, he most assuredly deserves it!!

❑ We certainly wish the best for Bernie Mulcahy, everyone wants him to get better!! Please know that we are all thinking about you, Berine, and all the rest of your family!!

❑ Don't forget this weekend is Homecoming, every grad and those-to-be will be there! It is so much fun, the players will be thrilled that you attended and cheered for them, be sure to take part!!

❑ So many people have called, everyone wants to have a contest for the scariest house, costume, etc! The costume part is easy, go to the Common and get your award. If we think (we will be around) your house wins, we will let you know!! In the meantime, please have a happy SAFE Halloween!

Happy Halloween! Drive by Salt Marsh Farm, 116 S. Main St. and be delighted by the wonderful "flying" witch that Tina Watson has on display for all of us to enjoy. Now might also be a good time to express our gratitude to Tina for the time she spends and talent she displays each year filling the two stone planters near the Old Town Pump outside her hardware store in the Village. I know how eagerly I await each season anticipating the lovely color and textural combinations of plant materials Tina so artfully "conjures up" each year. Thank you, Tina, for giving all of us in Cohasset so much to enjoy season after season, year after year!

The good old Hallowe'en

We hate to say it but Hallowe'en appears to have gone the way of sandlot baseball.

The holiday we knew has been organized out of existence.

It wasn't that long ago that all we needed for a good game of baseball was a splintered bat, a taped ball, some gloves, a vacant lot and a half dozen kids with nothing to do for hours at a time.

Now it's full uniforms, aluminum bats, shiny new balls, a real diamond with real bases, 18 or more players, including a DH and a middle reliever, and, above all, adult coaches to show us what to do and how to do it.

In too many places, it's Little League or nothing.

Nor was it that long ago when Hallowe'en was a time for kids to dream up their own tricks to spring on the adult world bringing harmless but annoying little victories over the big folks who had their way on the other 364 nights a year.

One of the favorite tricks was to tie the front and back doors to the porch railings of the house under attack, ring the door bell and flee to safety while cussing — but sometimes smiling — homeowners climbed out windows to free their doors.

More soap was applied to store windows on Hallowe'en than was used on bodies during Saturday night baths. Good natured store owners were resigned to spending the morning after, All Hallows Day, scraping soaped graffiti from their windows prior to opening.

Those things don't seem to happen anymore.

Most of today's youngsters, it would seem, go to parties organized by adults down at the Elks hall or the K of C bungalow, where they bob for apples, carve pumpkins and do all the correct things under the supervision of those who were once the enemy.

A while ago, the trendy thing the adults thought up for the kids to do was to go around collecting money for UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund) when all they really wanted to do was tie a few doors to porch railings, soap a few windows and collect an occasional Snickers bar for themselves.

A those few youngsters who still go out trick-or-treating are usually accompanied by older folks to make sure they do things right and are done right themselves by the people who treat them.

Perhaps it's all for the best — especially when razor blades start turning up in the apple treats and the fears expressed for the safety of the little trick-or-treaters have come to be legitimate.

But let's not forget there was a time — not that long ago — when both tricks and treats were harmless and Hallowe'en was enjoyed by all.

Guidelines for a safe Halloween noted

To Cohasset citizens:

Chief Brian W. Noonan and Safety Officer Cliff Jones of the Cohasset Police Department remind our readers that Sunday, Oct. 31, is Halloween.

According to Chief Noonan, every year there is the potential for children to be struck by a motor vehicle as they are pursuing trick or treat fun. The children may get excited about Halloween and not observe the safety rules. Motorists are warned to be especially alert and careful on Halloween night.

The hours for "Trick or Treating," Sunday, Oct. 31, in Cohasset are from 4 to 8 p.m. Chief Noonan and Officer Jones recommend the following guidelines be followed:

1. Younger children should be accompanied by a parent or older person.
2. Stay in your own neighborhood.
3. Do not cross the street between parked cars.
4. Visit the houses on one side of the street and then cross at the corner to the other side.
5. Avoid long dragging costumes and high heel shoes as they may cause you to fall.
6. Makeup or painted faces are preferred to masks which may reduce visibility, or make sure the mask eye holes are oversized.
7. Do not go alone. Travel in groups and at least one person should carry a flashlight.
8. Do not eat any treats until you get home and have your parents check them.
9. Parents should disregard any treats that are not wrapped or have torn wrappers.
10. Residents should leave outside lights on so that children can see where they are walking.
11. Greet children at the door. Do not encourage them to come inside.
12. Remove obstacles from steps, sidewalks, and lawn, so children will not trip on them.

Chief Brian W. Noonan and Officer Cliff Jones hope you all have a safe and Happy Halloween!

Cliff Jones, Safety Officer
COHASSET POLICE DEPARTMENT

Local talent brings youth to Boston Ballet

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Dwarfed by a set designed to look like a real forest and castle, child dancers proved they could hold their own in the Boston Ballet's production of Sleeping Beauty.

Energy radiated from five Hingham and Cohasset dancers as they scurried off the Wang Center stage the night before the Oct. 21 opening performance for a press interview.

Sam Murphy, 10, and Patrick Keneally, 11, both of Hingham, and Liz Meyers, 11, Corey Sullivan, 10, and Emily Libby, 11, of Cohasset are performing in the Garland Dance in the ballet's first act.

They agreed that since they have been dancing for so long, they overcame stage fright a long time ago.

"We're probably used to it," said Corey. "When you're on stage, you forget about everything and you just dance."

As child performers, they said they knew that only a portion of the limelight is theirs.

"Thinking that you're on stage and all these people are looking at you — sometimes you're not the center of attention," said Emily.

Sharing a stage with world-class dancers and wearing ornate costumes and make-up are the rewards of discipline and hard work, they said.

They all commute to Boston several times per week for rehearsal. All child dancers have supervisors and special waiting rooms, where they follow strict behavior rules or they know they will be told to leave.

"Parts are very difficult," said Patrick, who has studied for three years. "I play a lot of sports, and it's good for my footwork. You've got to work very hard. Some parts don't feel very good, like splits.

"I like how many people there are; the art of it; the big stage. The company has some really good dancers," he said.

But he doesn't intend to pursue a career in dance.

"I'm gonna go for a couple more years and I'll probably stop."

However, his friend, Sam Murphy, was drawn to dancing when he was three years old, and would like to pursue a career on the stage.

Patrick and Sam both have the role of Fritz, the brother who steals and breaks the Nutcracker in the Christmas ballet of the same name, this winter.

"It's the biggest role a boy can get," Sam said. "What I'm most looking forward to is being in front of everybody...at the Wang."

More boys than ever are studying ballet, but Patrick and Sam said they sometimes get teased by their peers. It doesn't seem to bother them.

"It depends where you live and who you're around," said Sam. "Some kids go with their parents and see ballet. Some kids don't get to go and they think it's just for girls."

Five children from Hingham and Cohasset are performing at the Wang Center in Boston Ballet's Sleeping Beauty. Patrick agreed. "I try to think of comebacks, but most of them — they've gotten over it," he said.

The addition of boys to ballet classes didn't change the lesson much, according to the girls. But working with male partners was different because of the level of training.

"They learn things differently than us," said Liz. "Sometimes they need a little help."

Associate director Anna-Marie Holmes described what it takes to be a child performer for the Boston Ballet.

"We (sought) a certain height and a certain look and we had them do certain steps," she said. "They had to have a nice personality."

Ironically, Holmes' first ballet performance was the leading role of Aurora in Sleeping Beauty when she was 14.

She has cast and directed children for Boston Ballet for eight years.

"It's exciting because it's a new experience for them," said "It's very important that you lay down the laws.

"It's not like a school recital. This is very important to them. It gives them the experience they need.

"All of the children are in our school. (To audition for Boston Ballet productions is) part of the privilege that comes with it."

Demands are not limited to the children, however. Sheila Keneally, Patrick's mother, has sacrificed time and travel to Boston for countless rehearsals. She said she has the most supportive car-pool ever.

Like other parents of children in Boston Ballet productions, she realizes that the parents' commitment is as high as the children's.

"They have a really good time out there," she said. "He's always been very enthusiastic about it. The way he projects himself — he's really proud of it."

Sleeping Beauty is performed in a prologue and three acts at the Wang Center in Boston through Nov. 7.

Gulph Grist Mill once dominated Mill River tide channel

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

In the 18th century, small New England villages were largely self sufficient. People kept their own farm animals, grew their own farm and garden crops, made their own clothing and often their own furniture. They also ground their own grain and flour. Along small rivers and tidal channels there arose grist mills grinding grain for local residents. In 1792, by votes of town meetings, Cohasset and Scituate agreed to allow the building of a new tidal grist mill at Cohasset Harbor. The mill was located at the entrance to the Gulf, on the southern edge of the Harbor where Border Street now crosses the tidal estuary near Government Island. The old mill building itself is gone, as is its tidal dam, but the successor to the original mill is still there at the same site, and is one of the buildings in a modern boat yard.

The original mill building was a large salt-box shaped structure, and its location is known. It was constructed over a naturally formed tidal race or sluiceway. One side of the building rested on a large rock located a few feet from shore, the other side was on the shore itself. Beneath the building flowed incoming and outgoing tides used to power the mill's wheel. Across the rest of the entrance to the Gulf (old spelling: "Gulph") was a tidal dam to regulate the flow of ocean water in and out of the Gulf. This assured an adequate supply of water to power the mill wheel during periods of slack water at low tide.

February 27, 1792, Cohasset residents voted to allow Elisha Doane, a prominent businessman, and Isaac Smith of Hingham to build a grist mill and tidal dam at the entrance to the Gulf. Scituate residents followed suit on April 2 of the same year. Scituate also required that their residents be allowed to use the mill; that imported grain must not be used if there was sufficient local grain to grind, and that a gate be constructed in the tidal dam for the passage and repassage of vessels in and out of the Gulf. Cohasset's Elisha Doane built the first grist mill at the Gulf and ran it for the benefit of Cohasset and Scituate townspeople.

In 1795 a dispute arose between the two towns over which was entitled to collect taxes due on the Gulf Mill. The decision went in favor of Cohasset, with Scituate collecting the taxes on another mill located elsewhere. Nov. 7, 1796, Cohasset allowed the proprietors of the mill to construct a road across the tidal dam, and in April of 1797 accepted the road as a public way, as long as the mill was kept in "proper order to grind for the inhabitants of the town." Thus Cohasset and Scituate were linked by a road across the estuary at the Harbor. (At that time and until about 1838 the adjacent area now called Government Island belonged to Scituate.) In 1832 Elisha Doane died and the mill passed to his son, James Cutler Doane. Apparently the younger Doane, busy with his fishing schooner fleet, did not want the new property, for in 1837 he sold it to Luther Blodget and John Tyrrell of Boston. In 1843 these two co-partners defaulted on their mortgage, and the mill became owned by a local bank. There followed a series of owners; the property changing hands several times until 1854, when James Tolman of Roxbury took possession of the mill amid conflicting claims of ownership.

Meanwhile, work had been continuing on the tidal dam to insure a steady flow of water to the wheel and the passage of small vessels in and out of the Gulf. Then on May 5, 1858, all legal claims resolved. Tolman deeded the mill to real estate agent Duncan Bradford of Charlestown for $2,500.

The Gulf Mill burned to the ground in 1862. Finally, Feb. 15, 1868, agent Bradford conveyed the land, still without a building, to the brothers Abraham H. Jr. and Newcomb B. Tower of Cohasset for only $600. The Tower brothers had a successful marine hardware business located nearby at Tower Wharf and owned a fleet of fishing schooners. Subsequent to the purchase, the Towers constructed a new building on the site of the old mill. This became their lumber storage building, run in conjunction with Tower's "South Wharf", a large wooden structure adjacent. This is the building which exists today where the original grist mill once stood. The nearby tidal dam was maintained by the town of Cohasset until the early 20th century, but has long since disappeared. Sometimes still called the "Gulf Mill", the present building is the last surviving part of the once extensive Tower family business at the Harbor.

Flu clinic to be held

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the board of health will conduct the annual flu clinics from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 30 at the town hall. The flu shot is free to all Cohasset residents. For more information call the league office between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Flu is very contagious. Most people who catch it get well without any problem, but flu sometimes leads to pneumonia, which can be fatal. Immunization is very important for people at high risk for pneumonia and other problems caused by flu. Anyone 65 or older, those with chronic medical problems (heart disease, asthma, kidney disease, diabetes, lung disease, anemia) and people whose immune systems have been weakened by disease such as cancer or AIDS are considered high risk.

VOLUNTEERS ARE PRICELESS

The winding down of the baseball season and the beginning of the football season in October always bring a flurry of activity and heightened interest on the part of sports fans. Add to that the return of our kids to school in September and most households are pretty busy adjusting to a winter schedule. This year your Council on Aging teamed up with the Chamber of Commerce by spending many hours making teddy bears to be placed in a package to be mailed to Cohasset High school graduates who are away at college, as a reminder that the folks back home are thinking of them while they are adjusting to a new life — hitting the books — for the first time without parental prodding or supervision.

As we approach this holiday season, a time when the spirit of giving and thanking is so prevalent, it reminds us that your Council is foremost in the spirit of thanks as we acknowledge the good ladies who responded to the call from the Chamber on the teddy bear project, which was terrific, as well as to all our volunteers. Whether you are a van driver, lunchroom worker, SHARE volunteer, or any of our other volunteers, without you we could not succeed. So please know that the Council on Aging is aware of your good work and appreciates the sacrifices you make to help the Council be successful. May you all have a happy and rewarding season and thanks for volunteering.

T. Gerard Keating, Chairman Council on Aging

VOLUNTEERS ARE NEEDED

Please call the Council if you can spare a few hours a month to help us.

- Drivers - to drive the Senior Shuttle one day a month.
- Luncheon help - help with the luncheons on Tuesdays and Thursdays.
- Bakers - to bake for special meetings and functions sponsored by the COA.
- Writers - to write articles for the monthly Vista or by-line for the Senior column in the Mariner.
- Office help - to answer the phone in the afternoons at the COA or setting up medical appointments.
- Seniors who would enjoy helping kids in the afternoon, after school, here at the Community Center.

If you are interested in helping in any of the above, please call Kathy at 383-9112.

KITCHEN HELPERS NEEDED

Tuesdays or Thursdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., for Senior Luncheons. Please call Lindsay Guild 383-0078 or Council on Aging 383-9112. Volunteers wanted once a month or every week. Please come by to help me set tables, serve and clean up. Qualify for the SHARE Food Program. Help your community and make new friends at the same time.

SHARE SIGN UP

Monday, Nov. 1, through Friday Nov. 5, at the Council on Aging office, 3 North Main Street $13.00. Please note no sign up on Saturday of that week.

BAGGING DAYS

The week of November 15-18, will be at the SHARE warehouse on Will Drive, Canton, from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m. If you are interested in helping with the bagging, please call us.

DISTRIBUTION

Your order will be given out on Saturday, Nov. 20, from 8:00 AM until 10 a.m. only!! Mark this date on your calendar now so that you don't forget.

OUTREACH NEWS

My office hours are as follows: Monday 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Wednesday 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. If these hours are not convenient for a home visit for you, please call me at the office so we can arrange a mutually agreeable time. I am also available during the week at my home. If you need to reach me at home, please call the COA office and Marguerite will give you my number.

For your information - Mass. Commission for Blind (MACB) is a state agency which provides free service to individuals who are legally blind. The goal of the agency is to help people remain as independent as possible. A social worker can make a home visit and assess what services (i.e. adaptive equipment) are needed. For more information, call the MACB at 727-5550 or 1-800-392-6450.

Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing - This agency helps hearing impaired people obtain assisted listening devices and guides them in obtaining funding for hearing aids. In-home assessments can be done at no cost. For more information, call the Commission at 727-5106.

Friends' membership drive

The Friends of the Cohasset Library was established 25 years ago to encourage awareness and support of the library. The efforts of the Friends enable the achievement of library services well beyond what your tax dollars provide.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT

During the past year, contributions to the Friends amounting to over $9,000 enabled the library to

- add hundreds of books to its fine collections.
- conduct a summer reading program and puzzle club to improve children's reading skills.
- purchase family passes to the Aquarium, the Museum of Fine Arts, the Museum of Science and the Children's Museum.

VOLUNTEER EFFORTS

- helped coordinate the dedicated efforts of more than 50 volunteers — a labor contribution valued in excess of $30,000
- presented a standing-room-only lecture by Boston book seller Kenneth Gloss on the market for old and rare books
- continued a weekly "Library Corner" in the Cohasset Mariner to keep the community informed about library programs and activities

NEW THIS YEAR

- established ongoing art exhibitions in the reference room, featuring local artists
- Friends of the Cohasset Library were recognized by the Mass Library Association with a first prize for their continued efforts to promote the library within the community.

As the Friends of the Cohasset Library begin a second quarter century of service to the library, the group again appeals for your support. Become a Friend, or renew your past support.

Fall library hours

Hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.

Tie as good as a loss for girl booters

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

With Wednesday's rainout of their scheduled game against Hanover, the Cohasset girls' soccer season will come down to that one game against the Indians to decide if the Skippers qualify for the South Sectional tournament.

"You do what you have to do," said head coach Don Satter. "I'm asking the kids to give me 110 percent. And that's what I'm doing as a coach.

"Do I mind it? No. It's a challenge. A tie is no good to us now. We must win."

Cohasset had to beat the teams it beat during the first half of the season and pick up three points against squads they lost to. The Skippers lost to Abington and Norwell, and tied East Bridgewater, who they lost to the first time around. With last Friday's 2-0 win over Carver and their 4-0 victory against Scituate on Monday, Cohasset must beat the Indians and 0-15 Hull to assure themselves a spot in the South Sectional tourney.

The Skippers played one of their better games of the season in their 4-3 loss to Hanover, earlier in the schedule. But what Satter especially likes about the Indians is their style of play.

"We match up well against them," he said. "Their style of play gives us less problems than some other teams that previously beat us."

Like Cohasset, Hanover is more of a passing, control type of team. The Indians stay away from the kick-and-run set up that has given the Skippers fits throughout the season.

"We play best when we're able to get ourselves into a rhythm," Satter said. "Kick-and-run disrupts your rhythm."

Cohasset has been disrupted in another way. And the team doesn't need it at this crucial part of the season. Corinna McMackin sustained a season-ending knee injury against Norwell that has Satter scrambling to make moves to replace her.

"It's definitely a big blow," he said of McMackin's injury. "She's our number-one marking back and one of the best athletes on the team."

Satter moved midfielder Tracey Connor back to defense to cover for McMackin. Connor will join Jen Ripley and Emily Henderson on defense. Henderson is back in the lineup as a field player since the return of starting goaltender Catie Campbell. Satter has been extremely pleased with the play of both Ripley and Henderson.

"In the last segment of games," he said, "both of them have been extremely solid."

The pair are doing exemplary jobs of marking the ball, challenging for balls in the air and maintaining a physical, aggressive game. Offensive players they have been covering have managed to produce very little against them recently.

The irony of the game against Hanover is that it is of vital importance to both teams, but for completely different reasons. The Indians have been battling Norwell all season for the South Shore League championship. They are currently one point behind. A championship would give them home-field advantage and an easier opponent in the early round of the tourney.

Cohasset? "We're hoping our incentive is greater than their incentives," Satter said. "We're fighting for our lives to qualify for the tournament."

And a tie just won't do it for them.

Cohasset goaltender Catie Campbell is back in the net after returning from an early-season injury. The Skippers will need a strong performance from her when they take on the Hanover Indians in a must-win situation.

At the end of Saturday morning's 1-1 tie between the Hingham High girls' soccer team and Sandwich both teams met at the center of the field with their right arms extended.

At that point every team member for both teams as well as the coaches high-fived each other while shouting out, "Good game."

This robotic drill in sportsmanship was over in about 20 seconds.

I haven't been to every high school game over the last few years, but I'm pretty certain every team congratulates their opponents, win or lose, after every game.

Whether it's a line of high-fives or a cheer like the one I saw earlier in the season at a Marshfield field hockey game, ("Nice game Cohasset. Thanks referee's") high school teams at least go through the motions of sportsmanship after a game.

That is to be commended because congratulating someone who you were trying to kick, tackle, run over or strike out just minutes before is very difficult to pull off.

I know because I'm a former high school bench-warmer and a competitive person.

It is hard for me to paste a smile on my face and act nice towards a team that just won.

Maybe it's a character defect of mine, but I imagine there are some other players and coaches that also have a hard time after a tough loss being a sport.

However, sportsmanship is far from just congratulating your opponent after you win or lose.

Some aspects of sportsmanship include: playing by the rules, always hustling, not arguing with the referees or your opponents and most importantly, realizing it is only a game.

I've played in and watched some very important games and many times I have seen losing players cry after things didn't go their way at the end.

Now I have nothing about expressing emotions but crying over a lost sporting event is a bit much, especially at the youth league level.

Being disappointed, down in the dumps or even mad, is to be expected. But shedding tears because you lost by a point in a game is not being a good sport.

So remember all you future high school sports stars, play hard, hustle, shake hands afterward and hold your head up whether you win or lose.

Save your tears for something more important, like reading your SAT scores.

Ski lessons offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct Blue Hill ski lesson registration Thursday, Nov. 18, at the recreation office, Cohasset Town Hall, between 3 and 4 p.m. and again from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Registration forms must be signed by a parent or guardian for participation in this five-week program. Beginner through advanced level instruction is available for children and youth ages seven and older. Lessons are scheduled to begin Thursday, Jan. 6, 1994 and meet for five consecutive weeks through Thursday, Feb. 3. The bus will leave each week from town hall parking lot at 3:30 p.m. and return from Blue Hills at about 6:45 p.m.

The fee for the ski lesson and transportation for the five weeks is $95 and checks should be made payable to Town of Cohasset. Those participants who require equipment rentals may rent at Blue Hills. The cost for the rental package is $40 per person. The rental fee can be included in the check for program fee. This is the 17th year that ski lessons at Blue Hills have been offered through the Cohasset Recreation Department and over the years hundreds of youngsters have had the opportunity to learn how to ski or improve their technique.

Sharks down Moritz

The Bay State Sharks Squirt Minor team got back to its winning ways this past weekend with a 4-2 victory over a very tough St. Moritz team. The win kept the Sharks undefeated at 6-0-1 after last week's 3-3 battle with the Springfield Jr. Olympics this week's game became a must win.

As has been the case in the last few games the opposition was "up" for undefeated Sharks. St. Moritz came out flying. They looked good as they kept the Sharks pinned in their own zone by out-skating, out-passing and out-hitting the home team. Hingham's Johnny Lynch was minding the Sharks' net for the first half of the game and was called upon to make a number of tough saves in the early going. "Lynchy" kept the Sharks in the game but the St. Moritz persistence and the Sharks' inability to clear the puck resulted in an early 1-0 Devils lead. The Sharks got on the board a few minutes later. Kenny Roche, who was a one-man wrecking crew, dumped the puck into the Devils zone. With St. Moritz trying to break out, Hingham's Garret Daigler made a nice play along the boards and stole the puck. Daigler passed to Brian Lewis of Cohasset, who popped in the tying goal.

The second period was a well-played period of up and down hockey with the Sharks holding a territorial edge. The Sharks took the lead when South Boston's Kenny Roche broke the puck out of the Sharks zone and hit Stoughton's Greg Osborne with a nice pass at center ice. Thumper turned on the jets and went wide into the corner. From there he hit Scotty McGinn of Hingham with a sharp pass in front of the net and Scotty banged it home for the score.

When the Devils tied the score at two, it seemed to be the wake-up call the Sharks needed.

The Sharks took the lead for good on what had to be the prettiest goal of the year. Brian Boyle stick handled through center ice and hit Dave Saggese at the Devils blue line. Saggese carried the puck down the right wing and found a wide-open Pat Devine coming in off left wing. Pat converted the pass to a top-corner goal. Stoughton's Gabe Winer was in the Sharks net for the second half of the game and was super. He robbed St. Moritz of two sure goals, one with a quick, pad save and one with his glove. He also got some help from defensemen Ryan Hatch of Hanover, Scotty Sparks of Norwood and Matt Bourassa of New Bedford.

Though they didn't score, the Shark's blue line, Nick Dunn (Marstons Mills), Bobby Noonan (South Boston) and Chris Coady (Hanover) were awesome. They kept the Devils off-balance throughout the game with some great hits. The Sharks got an insurance goal late in the third period when the boys from Hingham struck again. Brian Boyle got the puck out front to Pat Devine who dished-off to Dave Saggese for the tally.

There's a new rivalry heating up in the South Shore League that's as competitive as any Thanksgiving Day football game. And it's without a doubt, a more even battle than many of the mismatched turkey day games.

Defending SSL champion Hanover and Hull have waged a fierce field hockey duel this season and, will more than likely, wind up in a tie for the league championship.

In their two meetings this season, the squads finished with 2-2 and 0-0 ties. The two goals were the only pair scored against the Pirates all year, while the deadlocks are the difference between a perfect record for each club.

There also doesn't appear to be any love lost between the Indians and Pirates, judging by Hull coach Clare Brady's comments.

Brady stated that the Hanover players should have been penalized for several illegal hits dealt to her athletes during the second game.

Both games, too, had their own share of controversy. In the first game, Brady argued the Indians scored the game-tying goal seconds after time expired. And in the second match, a goal was taken away from league All-Star Michelle Frazier when an official said the ball hit a player's foot and was redirected into the net, according to Brady.

But field hockey fans may not have to wait until the '94 season to resume to see the teams battle one another again.

There's a better than average chance the two teams will meet somewhere in the South Sectional tournament. The "rubber game" could prove to be a dandy if it ever materializes.

The October 26, South Shore League Cross-Country League Meet at the Strawberry Valley Golf Course in Abington wasn't really expected to provide too many surprises.

Three-time winner Zack Smith of Abington was the overwhelming favorite. His stock rose even higher after breaking the Green Wave's 10-year course record by 10 seconds. Hanover's Don Reardon held former record, which he set back in 1983. Others who were strong bets to finish in the spots after Smith were East Bridgewater's Steve Shepard, Hanover's Ryan Ennis and the Green Wave's Ben Pugh.

The girls' competitition was expected to provide the best competition of the day as Abington's Melissa Henderson, East Bridgewater's Stacey Jordan and a host of Norwell runners, led by the squad's No. 1 harrier, Lisa Sammartino, were the favorites for the individual title.

Boston College has its share of local flavor on the '93-94 hockey team. Junior Rob Canavan of Hingham, Abington's John DeMarco via Archbishop Williams High School and Kingston's Toby Harris, who attended the Northwood School, are all on the 30-man, Eagle roster.

And from the Dim Bulb Department: A friend of mine who currently coaches the Archbishop Williams girls' cross-country team told me a humorous story of a conversation he had with a female classmate when he was in high school. He was the No. 1 runner on the team at the time and the girl was obviously intrigued by both my friend and his interests. But mainly my friend.

The girl asked him how many miles he ran a day. He replied that he put in "about ten."

Obviously impressed, the girl responded, "you run ten miles a day?"

"Sometimes I skip a day," he said.

"You skip ten miles a day," she said incredulously.

Needless to say, he didn't skip off into the sunset with tweedle dumb.

Haunted house, Sunday

The Second Congregational Church youth group is sponsoring a haunted house from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 31 at the church on Highland Ave. There will be a special haunted room for preschoolers and a haunted house for older children.

Admission is $1 for the haunted house and $.50 for the haunted room.

Nov. classes at CCC

The Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main St. is offering is accepting registrations for classes beginning in November. Computer classes, including keyboarding, Lotus 123, Word Perfect 5.1, Computer Kids and computer for the novice.

Children's classes include cake decorating and multicultural cooking. For information call 383-0088 or pick up a brochure at the center.

Puppet show planned

"The Grasshopper and the Ant," is the main story this month for the preschool puppet show from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. Friday, Nov. 5 at the community center. Admission is $2. Call 383-0088 for information.

Elder care support offered

"Understanding Your Aging Parents (or Partner)" is being offered from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday evenings at the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

The series is jointly sponsored by the Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate Councils on Aging, and by the Hingham and Norwell Visiting Nurse Association. The public is invited.

Information on community resources available to older people and their families will be presented on Nov. 2. This will include such things as daycare centers, home health services, support groups and insurance matters.

For information or to register, call the Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Antiques to be sold

The 17th annual Antique Show and Sale to benefit the Beechwood Congregational Church will be at the Deer Hill School, Sohier St, Saturday, Nov. 6 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Register for Girl Scouts

Girl Scout registration is ongoing. For information call Becky Bates-MacArthur at 383-0362.

Adult volunteers are needed to help the girls in a variety of activities. Any interested adult is invited to an information meeting Monday, Nov. 1 at Stop & Shop meeting room. For information call Pat Stens at 828-3750.

PAC plans lecture

The parents' advisory council of Cohasset is sponsoring an evening with Dr. James Mehegan, "Living and Learning with the LD and Attentional Problem Child" at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 9 in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. Refreshments will be served at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Mehegan is the director of counselling at Taber Academy and is in private practice on the South Shore. For information call Ann Whiteley at 383-9310 or Dr. Velma Begley at 383-1541.

Leaf-rakers available

Leaf-raking will be the first official fundraiser for the 38 Cohasset teenagers planning to go to Appalachia for their 1994 summer work project. Arranged in teams of three to five, they are all set to come and rake your lawn for the bargain price of $7/hour/volunteer.

There are three specific dates and times they will be "on call." Teams are available to work between 9 a.m. and noon on the next three consecutive Saturdays: Oct. 30 and Nov. 6.

To schedule your rakers, call or leave message for Ami Argus (office: 383-0345 or Home: 383-9325).

Coming up in November will be the group's Thanksgiving pie sale (pumpkin, apple and pecan).

Halloween on the common

The Community Center Nursery School will host its annual Funraiser, The Halloween Fair on the Common, Sunday, Oct. 31, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. In case of rain, the fair will be held in the Cohasset Community Center.

This year some new games have been added for the children to enjoy. Be sure to stop by The Treasure Hunt, The Witches Broom Race and Ghostball in the circle of games.

Pumpkins of all kinds may be decorated for the pumpkin contest and dropped off at the Common at 1 p.m. Pumpkins will be judged in many categories, each one is sure to be a winner.

Tickets for all games and activities may be purchased at the fair; tickets are four for $1. Most games will cost 50 cents to play.

Everyone is welcome. The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School sponsors this event for the enjoyment of all.

CJHS holds bake sale

On the weekend of Nov. 6 - 7, the Cohasset Junior High School Calss of '99 will hold a bake sale to raise money for scholarships and senior events.

Saturday, Nov. 6 the sale will be from 9 a.m. to noon at town hall during recreational basketball signup.

Sunday, Nov. 7 items will be for sale after church at St. Stephen's and St. Anthony's.

Cohasset test scores top state, nation

By Sean Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The football team may have eked out a 7-7 tie with Sharon this weekend — but on another playing field, the Skippers were unstoppable.

In all major testing programs — Cohasset students surpassed their counterparts across the state and nation.

Jack Leary, director of student services, summarized Cohasset results in comparison to others in all major testing programs administered last year.

According to results published by the college Entrance Examination Board — Cohasset's average scores were considerably higher than the national and state average.

In the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), which is scored on a scale of 200-to-800 points, the national average on the verbal component for 1993 was 424 and the state average was 427. Cohasset students averaged more than 60 points higher with 491 on the verbal component. And Cohasset scored an average of 540 in the math in comparison with the national average of

Holiday lights planned for Town Common

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Selectmen decided the town common will be illuminated with holiday lights this year.

But it's not yet clear how many lights will be placed on how many trees.

Selectmen unanimously voted "to do what looks best" at their board meeting Monday.

Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon explained that it will cost about $400 for the necessary hardware to provide the electrical service. The cost of the lights depends on how many strings are needed. Selectmen haven't decided whether to light all nine trees around the pond or to light every other tree.

If all nine trees around the pond are illuminated —

Lady Skippers soccer squad looks for long tourney run

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

There's a term Cohasset High soccer coach Keith Clark stayed clear of when practices started up in late August. The word rebuilding wasn't uttered by Clark or any member of the Skippers' 11-3-4 squad this season.

At first look, it might have seemed the appropriate way to describe the '93 season. Cohasset had graduated 10 seniors from last year's 14-3-1 tournament squad.

A good chunk of talent was gone from high-school soccer program. Still, Clark held steady.

"I think we could have used that term if we wanted," he said, "but I didn't want to."

The second-year coach feared if the players looked upon the year as one to gain experience for further down the road, they may not have played to their full potential. And he, for one, believed the team was talented enough to have a season on par with '92.

"We're an intense, skilful team," said Clark.

The main strength of the Skippers this year has been their solid play up the middle of the field. Two-year All-Star Chris Kondrat has proved to be one of the top midfielders in the South Shore League, while fellow All-Star Charlie Endris and Tim Brister made opposing teams work for every shot they could on All-Star goaltender Chris Goodman.

One of toughest goaltenders in the league, Goodman wound up with four shutouts and a goals against average of just over 1.00 during the regular season. His back-up, Chris McKenna, has improved steadily since the beginning of the season.

Clark said he has would have no hesitation in using McKenna in key situations. "Either one can play," he said. "Chris McKenna could start for other teams in this league easily."

What has made Cohasset's record all the more impressive was the fact that the team was hit by the injury bug and still managed to put together a season that would have most teams foaming at the mouth.

The Skippers got off to a strong start, racing out of the blocks at 4-0. They continued their winning ways

Parking-ban to start

Selectmen approved an all-night parking ban from Nov. 15 — April 1.

Due to severe winter weather, last March the board extended the annual ban from March 15 to April 1.

While the ban is in effect, parking a vehicle on any street for a longer than one hour between 2 and 6 a.m. is prohibited. Vehicles that are in violation of the parking ban will be tagged, police said.

Cohasset's week

Brush chipping starts

The Board of Health has arranged for the town's annual fall brush chipping at the Cedar St. Recycling Transfer Facility. Brush will be accepted only Sunday, Nov. 14; Monday, Nov. 15; and Wednesday, Nov. 17.

The following restrictions shall apply:

No brush from contractors or landscapers will be accepted;

No hedge clippings, twigs or briars — they go into compost pile;

No length restriction; and

No logs.

Please arrange with RTF manager for proper disposal at time of delivery. Questions may be answered at the RTF or call 383-9627 (RTF) or 383-6709 (Tree and Park). The work and co-operation of the Tree and Park Department is appreciated.

County engineers help

The Board of Selectmen of Cohasset has requested the services of the Norfolk County Engineering Department. The Norfolk County Commission, comprised of chairman, William P. O'Donnell (Norwood), Bruce D. Olsen (Stoughton) and John M. Gillis (Quincy), voted to authorize the County Engineering Dept. to locate and determine the southerly sideline of James Lane, Cohasset. Work should commence within the next few days.

Craft show denied

A Marshfield craft-shop owner has been denied permission to conduct a craft fair on the Town Common.

Mari Smith, owner of Crafters' Heaven, wrote to selectmen to ask permission to conduct a craft show next September. She offered to donate $200 to the town.

Selectmen denied the request because use of the Common is traditionally limited to non-profit Cohasset community groups and weddings.

French is appointed

Donna P. French is the newest member of the town's mosquito control committee.

Selectmen unanimously appointed French to fill a vacancy on the board at their meeting Monday.

Vacancies still exist on the handicapped commission, school facilities committee, water resources protection committee, the cable-TV committee, and the Government Island study committee. Interested citizens should call the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Donald LeClair, Norwell selectman and owner of the Webster Cranberry company, helps Kelvin Ferreira fill his bucket with cranberries during a recent Osgood first-grade field rip to the bogs.

Ambulance billing OK'ed

The town will send 34 ambulance bills totalling about $6,000 to a collection agency. Another eight late bills for $481 will be collected in house.

One-hundred-and-eight bills totalling $18,608 will be written off, selectmen said.

As an accounting measure, the bills to be written off include 70 balances from the South Shore Hospital, which the town cannot collect but should be reimbursed for. Many of the others involved transport prior to July 1, 1992 and are too old, selectmen said.

Town meeting voters last week sopted to use a collection agency for ambulance bills which are unpaid after 120 days or more.

'Drug Fighter' award presented

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee was recently honored at a luncheon at the John F. Kennedy Library. The committee was a recipient of the "1993 Drug Fighter of the Year" Award, presented by the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs and the Drug Enforcement Agency. Wayne Budd, former associate attorney general of the U.S., served as master of ceremonies. Other speakers included Georgette Watson, executive director of the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs, and Carlo Boccia, special agent-in-charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration, New England Field Division.

A recurring theme throughout the luncheon was the importance of communication and cooperation among police, community and schools. Each speaker recognized recipients as being courageous members of their communities, working to improve the quality of life.

Police chiefs throughout Massachusetts are asked to submit names of individuals, businesses or community organizations who are working to fight substance abuse and to promote the goal of a drug-free America. Chief Brian Noonan recommended this committee, and the Awards Committee agreed. Among its accomplishments, the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee was cited for being instrumental in establishing "Safe Homes" and an annual Drug Free Weekend.

Ellie Waal, chair of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, accepted the award on behalf of the committee. As she accepted the award, Waal recognized Keith Knowles who was the first chair of the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, and the driving force behind many of the programs which the committee has developed. Waal thanked Martha Gjesteby, chair of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, for her efforts in forming the committee. Waal also thanked Chief Brian Noonan for his support and encouragement. The enthusiasm of the committee was obvious, as Cohasset was represented at a table filled with members and former members.

The recipient of the National Drug Fighter of the Year was Charles Dutton, award winning star of the television series "Roc" which conveys a strong anti-drug message.

Arthur Paquin of Brockton was named the statewide recipient of the award for his tireless efforts to rid Brockton of drug dealers.

The committee presented the plaque to selectmen at their meeting on Nov. 1.

State pledges to clean up polluted shellfish beds

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner staff

State and federal environmental officials last week unveiled a cleanup campaign aimed at halting coastal water pollution and opening shellfish beds to commercial and recreational users.

At a press conference held in Norwell town hall, state Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Coxe and Massachusetts Bays Program executive director Diane Gould publicly endorsed the program which is designed to locate and correct polluted storm drain systems.

Mimicking the efforts of the North and South Rivers Watershed Association (NSRWA), a local non-profit group which began addressing non-point river pollution two years ago with the aid of a $35,000 Mass Bays grant, the state program will target 49 Massachusetts coastal communities, Coxe said.

The immediate goal is to reopen dozens of shellfish beds from Provincetown to Salisbury within one to two years. The NSRWA also has a program, Harvest '95, which is seeking Division of Marine Fisheries (DMF) permission to open beds along the North and South Rivers by the summer of 1995.

Within the state, the Mass Bays program has identified 11 watersheds which drain into rivers and, eventually, Massachusetts Bay. The state program will seek out and upgrade storm drains which are accumulating polluted runoff before dumping their contents into river beds and estuaries.

Animal waste from agricultural operations, lawn fertilizers and failed septic systems contribute heavily to river pollution and are at least partially responsible for the closure of 40 percent of the state's shellfish beds.

Last Thursday, Coxe and Gould met with representatives from DMF, Coastal Zone Management (CZM) and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, state Sen. Brian McDonald, (D-Weymouth), and state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, (R-Cohasset).

"Still to this day, after million and millions of dollars have been spent, 70 percent of our waters are unfishable and unswimmable," Coxe said. "This is wrong and almost outrageous."

"All of us have to work together to reopen these beds," Gould added.

"We need to adopt a shared sense of stewardship when it come to our coastal resources."

NSRWA executive director Dan Jones gave Coxe a tour of pollution sites along the North River, including an illegal outfall pipe at the Scituate wastewater treatment facility and a storm drain mitigation project on Riverside Circle in Marshfield.

In addition to cleanup efforts, Jones is working with Marshfield elementary school teacher Joyce Sullivan and her students in a clam bed re-seeding project on the North and South Rivers.

Several speakers last week noted the economic impact of re-opening shellfish beds to commercial fishermen.

"Water quality in our coastal areas is fundamental to the economics of the coastal zone," said CZM area coordinator Bob Fultz. "One of the things that is evident is that economics and the environment go hand in hand."

Coxe also urged legislative support of an upcoming $300 million open spaces bond bill which would set aside money for the acquisition of land, including $7 million for the purchase and preservation of ecologically sensitive coastal areas.

Town adopts regional fire resolution

Cohasset has joined the towns of Norwell, Hingham, and Scituate in adopting an expanded resolution on regional fire and emergency medical services. Hull is also expected to sign the resolution.

Cohasset selectmen signed an abbreviated version of the resolution one month ago but the other boards of selectmen felt the agreement needed to be expanded, Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon said.

In addition to establishing a steering committee to monitor progress of the goals of establishing a five-town district providing regional fire protection and medical emergency services and task forces to develop a plan—the expanded resolution includes looking into establishing equipment sharing, expansion of mutual aid agreements, and establishing a regional system of capital planning items.

Also, in anticipation of regionalization, the towns resolve to develop alternative methods of funding the proposed Seaside Fire and Rescue Services; to include formulae for the allocation of costs to the participating towns; and the associated management control of oversight.

The five-town resolution follows receipt of a study, paid for through a state grant, which detailed the benefits and costs of establishing a fire protection and emergency services district.

One selectman from each town, the fire chiefs, and administrators of the five communities will sit on the steering committee.

New policy at SS Vocational Technical High School

Any program elimination at the South Shore Vocational Technical High School will now follow a planned phase-out, whenever possible. The policy was approved by the school committee last week.

"When we eliminated a program last year, there was no policy that could be followed," Superintendent James Hager said. "If we have to eliminate another program, we should have a procedure."

The marine technology program was dropped last year, with 16 students enrolled in it at the time. Five are now taking marine tech at the Upper Cape Cod vocational school. The rest were "assimilated in other programs at South Shore," Hager noted.

There was no phase-out plan for marine tech, and until the bitter end, teachers tried to save the program. The first announcement of elimination came last January and there never was a plan for a phase-out.

Under the new policy, in the event a program is voted by the school committee for elimination, every attempt will be made for a two-year phase-out, Hager said.

The superintendent should meet as soon as possible with students and parents about the program elimination, and then report monthly on whether students are changing shops or seeking placement in other schools.

At the end of the school year, the superintendent should report on the effect the elimination is having on those students.

Even though there was no procedure to follow with the marine tech scenario, Hager said the transition has been "smooth."

DO YOU NEED A WILL?

To answer the question "Who NEEDS a WILL?", it is simpler to respond in the negative; YOU DO NOT NEED A WILL IF YOU INTEND TO DIE WITH NO FAMILY, NO FRIENDS AND NO ASSETS TO BE CONCERNED ABOUT... Obviously, for most of us, this is not the case!

Ensure that your wishes are carried out in the event of a catastrophic illness or even death... Protect yourself as well as those you love!

WHAT YOU WILL NEED:

- Will: Allows you to determine those individuals who receive your property at death. It also allows you to name a personal representative for your estate affairs, appoint a guardian for minor children and set up trusts for your children.
- Health Care Proxy: The appointment of a person you trust to make medical decisions in the event that you are unable to.
- Living Will: A declaration that in the event of a catastrophic illness, you do not want to be kept alive by artificial means.
- Power of Attorney: Naming another person you trust as your "agent" to handle your general financial affairs if you are unable to.

At the Law Office of Alan H. Segal we believe that in today's world every individual should have these basic and necessary documents. Therefore, we offer basic "Will" packages at an affordable price. More importantly, we understand your busy schedule and can produce your Will package within a half hour. All this without sacrificing service and quality! Our basic Will package includes the necessary documents mentioned above.

Name: Joe McElroy

Occupation: President of the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Association and master planning manager with Reebok.

Best day of your life: When we got the news — that what we thought was a serious illness with one of our youngsters — turned out to be a false alarm.

Most embarrassing moment: I forgot an appointment with a three-star general. (Mr. McElroy, who was a captain at the time, is a retired lieutenant colonel with the U.S. Army).

Goal: That my family stays happy and healthy and that we pick-up some grandchildren someday soon.

Favorite season: I like months not entire seasons. My favorites are May & June and September & October — when the weather is cool and crisp.

Best vacation: A package tour that included a cruise and DisneyWorld.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: People who make a commitment and don't follow through and those who leave you hanging and don't let you know when their circumstances change.

Favorite book: "Profiles in Courage" by John F. Kennedy.

Biggest worry: That there won't be good job opportunities for my children.

Favorite place: Beaches.

Favorite junk-food: Hot fudge sundaes.

Person you'd most like to meet: Winston Churchill.

Cohasset public schools to seek community input

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

School Supt. Stephen Hart recently presented the Cohasset School Committee with the proposed goals for the school system for the 1993-1994 school year.

And one of the school committee's goals is to survey the community to get input on educational issues.

Hart explained that this present school year will be the first in which the new teacher evaluation system will be fully implemented. Teachers and administrators will rely on other educators from surrounding towns and school systems in order to be trained in the new evaluation system.

In addition to implementing the new evaluation system, another goal will be to continue to provide quality inservice programs and training in order to insure continued professional development. Hart expects to have a complete list of the inservice programs by the next meeting of the school committee.

The school department will also have as one of its goals the implementation of a new science curriculum at both the elementary and secondary levels, with particular emphasis on coordinating the science and math programs at the secondary level. The school system will also continue its efforts to develop a system-wide technology plan.

Hart indicated that it would be his department's goal to continue to work with groups like the Cohasset Education Foundation and the South Shore Collaborative as alternate sources of educational funding and programs.

Members of the committee met Hart's presentation with enthusiasm, noting that these types of quality programs and initiatives involving curriculum and professional development have become standard operating procedure within the school department.

The members were in agreement that it is now appropriate for the committee to begin setting up the framework for a five-year planning strategy for the school department. Because drastic changes in the way public schools are run are imminent as a result of education reform, the committee hopes to collect input from community members, educators and students in formulating a plan for the next five years. Committee members discussed the possibility of conducting a survey of citizens regarding educational issues.

"With a survey we can get the community's feedback on where education is going and where they want it to go," said School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell.

Committee member Russ Reidy hopes that the committee can utilize a clever and aggressive approach to collecting input so that community members recognize the importance of these issues. Ken Wilcox, another member of the committee, hopes that the survey will help educate community members on the issues which face education today.

The committee will begin to focus on the development of its five-year plan and the collection of input from interested parties within the next few months.. Committee members hope that this new plan will help in the development of educational goals in future years.

In other business, Hart announced that the department has two new staff members. Marcia Lajoie will serve as the instrumental music teacher at the junior and senior high schools and Christopher Froio has been hired as an assistant football coach.

Hart also advised the committee that various students from the Cohasset schools will participate in an intergenerational program for the second year in a row. The program, which involves students from Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, encourages students and senior citizens from these communities to interact and identify common interests, concerns and needs.

"This program goes beyond just the needs of the elderly. It tries to encourage the elderly to offer their services to the students," he said.

According to Hart, the elderly can serve as storytellers at the elementary level and can bring historical perspectives to the students at all levels.

Cohasset test scores top state, nation

478 and state average of 476.

In the Test of Standard Written English, another component of the SAT, Cohasset averaged a score of 49.7 on a scale of 20 to 60. This also topped the state and national averages of 42.8 and 42.2 respectively.

Sixty-seven percent of Cohasset students, who took the SAT last year also took various Achievement Tests administered by the College Entrance Examination Board. These tests are required by certain competitive colleges and universities as a condition of admission, especially in the northeast.

The achievement tests are based on areas of study at the high school level. The favorable comparisons with national and state averages continued in these exams as Cohasset students out-scored their national and state counterparts by anywhere from nine-to-32 points in areas such as English composition and mathematics. These tests are scored on a scale of 200-to-800.

Leary also pointed out that 86 percent of those students who took Advance Placement exams in order to receive college credit and/or accelerated college placement received qualifying scores. In total, 63 Advance Placement exams were taken by Cohasset students. This marks a significant increase of the number of exams take over the past three or four years, Leary said.

Finally, Leary summarized the scores of Cohasset students in the Comprehensive Testing Program administered by the Educational Records Bureau during the past school year. Leary said the scores show that Cohasset students are on target. Of the ten grades tested, strengths were identified in eight of the grades.

A strength is evidenced by a median score which is one stanine or more better than the median score of all similar suburban schools and independent schools surveyed, Leary explained. Weaknesses, which are evidenced by a similar one stanine negative deviation from similarly situated schools, were only identified at four of the tested grade levels. Leary explained, however, that even the weaknesses identified still ranked well above the national averages in these areas.

The results of the Comprehensive Testing Program are distributed to parents each year. School Committee member Ken Wilcox said he is concerned that the scores create unnecessary anxiety on the part of students and parents. This, he said, is especially true when scores indicate that a student has scores which indicate strengths in some areas and pronounced weaknesses in other areas. The school committee will consider whether it is productive to continue distributing results each year in light of these concerns.

In other business, Ed Leonard, chairman of the inservice committee, reported on the plans for this year's inservice programs. Leonard said this year's programs will focus on goal setting by teachers and will be marked by a sense of partnership between administrators and teachers. Leonard stressed that teachers will attempt to be actively involved in their own professional development by setting goals, preparing programs, and making presentations to their fellow educators. Some of the stated goals for this school year include the increased use of technology throughout the curriculum and the increased use of the math and writing labs.

The school board also approved a trip to Maine and New Hampshire on Dec. 4 and 5 for the varsity basketball team. The team will scrimmage some competitive high school teams from both states to prepare for the upcoming season.

Town employees are required to use seat belts

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

In a majority vote, selectmen approved a new safety policy requiring town employees wear their seat belts while operating or riding in town-owned or leased vehicles, or in other vehicles while on town business.

The policy does not include police officers and fire-fighters.

Selectmen will pursue investigating whether or not police and fire-fighters can be required to wear safety belts. The board said the requirement, which would be a change in work rules, may be subject to collective bargaining.

Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon said police have to exit their cars quickly. He said cruisers are equipped with air bags.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan stressed the policy should include public safety employees.

"I'm concerned we're not demanding public safety members to wear their seat belts," he said. "Air bags are fine but that's only good in a head-on (collision). They're (police) in the car more than anyone else."

Sullivan added that fire fighters "where they can be strapped in, should be strapped in."

In an interview Tuesday, Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said police officers use seat belts most of the time.

But locking them into a requirement could be a dangerous mistake, he said.

"Most of them wear seatbelts anyway," Noonan explained, "But on certain calls they have to exit the vehicle quickly and ordering them to wear seatbelts could get in the way of the performance of their duty."

Noonan said if a suspect is armed or a police officer has to jump out of the cruiser quickly to apprehend a bank robber, for example, "that extra one or two seconds could cost a life," he said.

Selectman Merle S. Brown said he was opposed to the entire policy.

"We shouldn't be telling people what to do," he said.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke strongly disagreed.

"It's our (town's) money," she said.

The draft policy says that driving errors that an employee may make can be costly to the town and there is potential for serious injuries to the employees and members of the general public.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said he preferred to wait before enacting the policy to see if police and fire could be included.

"We should do it all at once or nothing at all," he said.

The board voted unanimously to pursue requiring public safety employees to use seatbelts. But selectmen approved enacting the policy (minus public safety employees) in a 3-2 vote with Brown and Laugelle dissenting.

A sticker reminding employees to buckle up will be placed on the town vehicles' dash board, Doyon said. Seat belts are already required under state law for employees who drive large, heavy vehicles (more than 10,000 pounds), he said.

Holiday lights planned for Town Common

at $9 a set and four sets per tree — the cost of the lights would run about $325.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said a resident who lives on the Common called her and said "one lit Christmas tree would be a nice thing."

The board also talked about bringing in a cut tree and lighting it. But selectmen determined there would not be much savings in that, because electrical hardware would still be required.

Donations of $125 for the temporary hook-up have already been received. Selectmen are asking for donations to pay the entire cost of the hook up and will pay for the lights from the gift account for town common improvements.

Floating boom used for oil spill

On Oct. 7, person or person(s) unknown poured about five gallons of crankcase oil into the bed of a pickup truck near 40 Border St., Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said.

The oil leaked out of the bed of the truck, onto the pier and proceeded down a drain into the harbor. The Hingham Fire Department offered the use of floating absorbent boom and 50 feet was used, Lincoln said. This equipment is not reusable after being contaminated.

Investigation conducted by the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments has not revealed the responsible party. The contaminated items, including floating boom, absorbent pads and absorbent oil mixture must be disposed of properly. The town is responsible for this cost, Lincoln said.

Selectmen approved a transfer request from the fire chief for $739.30 to purchase 50 feet of floating absorbent boom to reimburse the Hingham Fire Department for use of its equipment and to cover the cost of properly disposing of the contaminated materials and equipment by a company licensed to do so.

The Cohasset Fire Department budget does not include a line item designated specifically for hazardous materials response equipment or clean-up, Lincoln said.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Let's give a huge Cohasset welcome to Alexander Gregory Evans, son of Richard and Lisa (Ferreira) Evans! Alexander was born Oct. 7 at South Shore Hospital. Imagine how happy grandparents Arlene and Bob Ferreira are! And Anne and Frank Evans too!!

By the way, this little guy makes the 17th grandchild for Anne and Frank, and we just cannot imagine how much fun it is when they all get together!

Can't you just see a hockey team coming up, made up exclusively of Evans?

❑ Get your partners guys and gals, it is time to go square dancing! The Social Committee of the Second Congregational Church is going to hold a square dance at the Town Hall Nov. 13 from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the price of $3 per person or $10 per family. There will be an official caller, doesn't that sound like great fun!

Call 383-0345 for tickets, or they may be purchased at the door.

❑ News comes from Franklin and Marshall College, located in Lancaster PA, this week.

Robert Whittaker, a junior there, will participate in the college's off-campus study program in 1993-94. He will study in Berlin, Germany, through the School for International Training. Robert is a 1991 graduate of CHS and is the son of Barbara Moore and the late William Whittaker.

❑ Members of the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee and Town Officials were present at the Second Annual Massachusetts Governor's Alliance Against Drugs ceremony to accept their prestigious award as Massachusetts Drug Fighters of the year, 1993.

The Award ceremony took place at the JFK Library last Monday, and is certainly quite an honor for this community group to receive!

❑ Mike McFadden, mentioned above, is a former member of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, and flew up from Florida to attend the Awards ceremony. He and his wife Joyce (MacDonald) are living right outside DisneyWorld in Florida, and they love it. Good news for anyone headed in that direction, Mike has a house available for a modest rental fee for anyone going to DisneyWorld. If you would like more details, Mike can be reached at 407-892-9327.

Can we come in? Michael, Andrea and Katina Martone brave the rain to attend the annual Halloween Fair sponsored by the Community Center of Cohasset, Sunday. For more photos, see page 14.

Angela is preparing to become an electrical engineer with hopes of attending either MIT or Wentworth. Angela's father, Bruce, graduated from So. Shore Vo-Tech more than 20 years ago.

Angela represents Cohasset's only girl at the school, and all we can say is that Cohasset High School's loss is most certainly Vo-Tech's gain. What a gal and what an asset to the school.

We wish you the best Angela.

❑ Good news for the Vivian and O'Toole families. Jim and Lisa are back from England. Jim received a grant in Social Research at the University of Kent in Canterbury, an honor indeed!! Lisa and Jim now live in Longmeadow with their two daughters, where Jim is the Director of Physiology at Our Lady Of Elms in Chicoppee. Everyone is glad that they are home!

❑ Hats off to Christa Ansbergs of 1 Grace Drive, who was recently awarded the Rensselaer Medal from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, located in Troy, NY.

❑ The DAR is once again saving Campbell's Labels for Education Program, with many everyday labels that you use. All of Campbell's soups (front label panels); Marie's Dressings (lids); Pepperidge Farm Products (UPC symbols); Swanson canned and frozen products (front labels); Mrs. Paul's Frozen Foods (Quality Pledge labels); to name but a few. Nancy O'Toole can give you more information, or any member of the DAR, give them a call to help a most worthy cause.

❑ As the cold weather sets in, don't forget the Cohasset Food Pantry, it is always in need! All food items, cleaning supplies and personal products are always needed, this month the Pantry would especially request cereal, canned vegetables, canned fruits, snack foods, grape jelly, Jello, sugar, pie filling and Spaghetti O's. If we all gave one item, think how well stocked the Pantry would be!!

❑ That's the news for this week, please call and let me know what is going on in your house.

The Grand Tour

with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Linda Snowdale asked that we highlight this lovely Fall arrangement at 289 Beechwood St., The pumpkin-headed scarecrow stands guard in front of the corn stalks and among the russet, pink, yellow and white mums and pumpkins. In front of the arrangement is a planting of orange and yellow dahlias, pink begonias, purple verbena, and snapdragons. Take a ride by to see if you can spot the "cows"!

Drug Fighters

"Not all of us are called, as are our law enforcement officials, to risk our lives for the cause of a drug-free America. It is incumbent upon every American, however, to take a personal stand against substance abuse. By doing so, we can make life safer and more secure for ourselves and for those dedicated to enforcing our laws."

— The Governor's Alliance Against Drugs & the Drug Enforcement Division, New England Division.

Cohasset's Drug and Alcohol Committee has stood out again.

But this time it wasn't just among the people of Cohasset who are well aware of the group's efforts to educate all ages about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse.

Last week, the committee received a 1993 Drug Fighter of the Year award for its work on the "Safe Homes" program and "Drug Free Weekend."

The group established the first "Safe Homes" project in town which helps parents form a network of homes where their teenagers can gather in a drug- and alcohol-free environment.

And the annual Alcohol and Drug-free weekend is a community event and reminder to all ages that fun isn't synonymous with getting high.

The Drug Fighters of the Year Awards ceremony is dedicated to the memory of Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) Special Agent Enrique "Kiki" Camarena — who made the ultimate sacrifice in the war against drugs. Agent Camarena was kidnapped and later killed in the line of duty while investigating drug smuggling in Mexico in 1985.

At this special ceremony, Cohasset's Drug and Alcohol Committee was among 11 honorees from across the state — all of whom share the same commitment: promoting the goal of a drug-free America.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan recommended the D & A committee for this award.

"It was a real privilege to nominate the committee who has worked so hard for so many years and didn't receive the recognition they deserved," Chief Noonan said.

"They were the only community group selected from the whole state," he added.

Hat's off to Chairman Ellie Waal and past and present committee members — including Keith Knowles, who was the committee's first chairman and driving force.

We find it fitting that the ceremony was held at the John F. Kennedy Library. As you recall, President Kennedy said in his inaugural address:

"Ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country."

The Cohasset Drug & Alcohol committee's has answered that call to action. Its members' hard work sends an important message that this town and its people care about the future by taking positive steps today.

The plaque commemorating the award will hang in town hall is a reminder that Cohasset cares.

But the real reward will be in the actions of those who have been touched by the efforts of the D & A Committee.

Every time a Cohasset youngster faced with the choice to do drugs says "no" — the committee's efforts will have been truly worthwhile.

Food pantry donations appreciated

To the Editor:

In this time of Thanksgiving, the workers for the Cohasset Food Pantry want to be sure that the generous people, agencies and businesses of our town know how much their contributions of food and funds are appreciated.

We've tried to thank the donors directly where possible, but there are many who have given anonymously and many whom we may have overlooked. We particularly want townspeople to know how especially helpful some of our local institutions have been: Stop & Shop, for giving us four week-ends of bake sales, a hot dog sale and car wash; Cohasset Savings Bank, for food collections; all the churches for the food collections they have organized; the many businesses that have let us place donation cans in their premises; and, the Cohasset Mariner for publicizing our needs and activities.

All of these thanks, of course, go in the names of the families we are trying to help through bad times. We have been fortunate in being able to provide more than 20 Cohasset families with regular major supplements to their food and household supplies and will be making sure they can partake of the Thanksgiving spirit at a bounteous table.

The need continues. Specifically we are low on canned vegetables, cereals, canned fruit, spaghetti sauce, crackers, cookies, and all types of cleaning supplies and personal items such as shampoos, toothpaste, etc.

So, many thanks to all, and keep up the good work.

Liquor license for Music Circus opposed

(Ed.'s note: The foll owing letter was sent to Cohasset selectmen.)

To Cohasset Selectmen

Regarding the issue of a wine license for the South Shore Music Circus, I wish to register my sentiments. Sohier Street is already a very busy street during Music Circus season. Considering the concentration of moving vehicles and the haste with which patrons seek exit after an evening event I feel Cohasset will be ill served by issuing any sort of alcoholic beverage license to the Music Circus. It is probably true that such a license would raise revenues for the Music Circus, but at what cost?

Revenue would likely be enhanced in two ways, one being directly via the sale of alcoholic beverages at concerts, and the other being a likely increase in patronage by a drinking public (of course this might actually produce a backlash effect). Certainly any environment where alcohol is an issue will be more conducive to problems than would an environment where alcohol is not an issue. People who have been drinking (though a little before the show and a little at intermission may be just fine for most), tend to become less regarding of their impact on others and their community (if it's even theirs). Then there is always the possibility of an increase in petty crime; purse snatchings, rowdiness (I grant you this is conjecture but I feel that it is always wiser, and easier, to deal with anticipated problems, however unlikely, before they become real problems).

The issue of the Music Circus' philanthropy towards local organizations is emotional and persuasive but it is a separate issue, besides you wouldn't legislate more opportunities to smoke in order to enhance cigarette tax revenues. Nor does it seem congruent to encourage alcohol consumption even to finance good causes...it certainly won't appear congruent to Cohasset's younger citizens who, like teens everywhere, already get too many mixed messages and double standards.

I don't mean to begrudge the Music Circus extra income...it's a fine institution and a feather in Cohasset's cap. Let's keep it that way. Surely there might be alternative sources of extra income; perhaps a more varied and expanded snack bar menu, coupled with a nominal parking fee, (fifty cents times 500 or so parking spaces), maybe even photos with the stars (sure to be big bucks there!). And if there are not, then it would still be a shame to risk tarnishing Cohasset's image or putting its citizens into any jeopardy on such a busy street.

Thank you for taking the time to consider these thoughts and for factoring them into whatever decision you render.

Halloween fun a hit

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Community Center's early release Halloween fun day was a huge success. A great time was had by all.

I would like to extend a big thank you to all who helped out. A special thanks to the Council on Aging for letting us use their rooms, to John Bellas of Dunkin Donuts for donating the donuts, and to Diane Dooley for all the hours she put in; without her we would be lost. Thank you all for your support.

Questions and Answers on the Cohasset CEF

By Jim Kinch
Cohasset Educational Foundation

In September the residents and taxpayers of Cohasset were formally introduced to the Activities of the Cohasset Educational Foundation (CEF). In its brochure the CEF outlined its mission and the scope of its activities. However, the members found that not surprisingly this piece raised some questions regarding the nature and possible political aims of the CEF. Is it a PAC? Is this some new version of the PSO or another committee reviewing activities of the school administration? In this article these questions and others are answered. It is the sincere belief of the foundation that the more that is understand about the mission and goals of the CEF, the greater the potential for success of its activities.

What is the mission of the CEF?

In cooperation with the school faculty and administration the foundation will identify projects beyond the scope of the traditional school budget which improve educational opportunities for all students. The foundation will develop innovative resources both private and public to accomplish this. These resources could and will include private donations, corporate grants and gifts as well as private foundation support. To facilitate these donations, the CEF is chartered with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as a non-profit charitable foundation.

Is the CEF a Political Action Committee?

No. While the CEF was established as a separate group to assist in developing projects outside of the traditional avenues available to the schools, there is no political agenda in its charter.

Is the CEF a replacement of the PSO?

No, the CEF is an independent organization designed to foster educational excellence within Cohasset schools. Thus in some ways the two organizations act to complement one another. The CEF and PSO work in concert to assure minimal overlap or conflict in their activities.

How does the CEF interact with the school administration?

The CEF maintains a liaison with the school and the superintendent of the Cohasset System, who is an ex-officio member of the board of directors. Superintendent Hart assists the directors in proposing and discussing projects worthy of consideration and providing research and administrative assistance from the school staff.

Who comprises the CEF?

The foundation membership is basically two tiered. The board of directors constitutes the active membership of the foundation. The board members are volunteers drawn from all segments of the community. Under the charter the only criteria for membership is a sincere commitment to public education and the willingness to work actively and participate in developing specific goals as selected by the directors. The board is assisted in these efforts by a variety of advisors. The advisors are to bring detailed knowledge and insights on various resources, problems or questions facing the CEF.

How does the CEF operate?

The foundation's work is accomplished through a series of committees, each focused on a specific task — Executive, Finance Project Assessment Resource Development and Communications. The executive committee directs and monitors the operation and progress of the CEF; finance concerns itself with the administration of the CEF monetary resources; project assessment reviews proposal suggestions for adoption by the foundation; resource development explores a variety of resource options among including corporate partnerships, individuals and grant writing.

How can an individual participate in the process or learn more about the CEF?

The CEF is very interested in fostering a dialogue within the community as a way to increase the awareness of its mission and to explore new options for resources for the Cohasset schools and our children. The CEF desires input from the community and would like to hear thoughts and ideas on potential projects for consideration by the board.

A message center has been established at the high school at 383- 2833 or by mail at P.O. Box 224, Cohasset 02025.

Arts Boosters celebrate opening of 1993-94 season

The Cohasset Arts Boosters Club held its annual fall organizational meeting recently to plan support for the arts at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School for the 1993-94 academic year. Parents volunteered to assist teachers with each scheduled event and officers were elected: president, Sue McNamara; vice-president, Martha Equi; treasurer, Olga Nohe; and secretary, Beverly Medinger.

The Arts Boosters explored new ideas with Cohasset High School teachers of the arts, including Joel Antolini, Maureen Duffy, Ron Emmons, Bryan Marks, John Packard, Tom Sippel, Jo-Ellen Wood and librarian Susan McFadd. Drama workshop director Ron Emmons is organizing a performance for the community by singer-songwriter David Crossland and a student writing workshop with playwright Sandra Asher. Whispers and Shadows editor Jo-Ellen Wood plans to mail this annual literary/arts magazine to all high school parents. Mrs. Wood is also working on a cross-cultural evening program featuring Asian women. Dr. Packard would like to find someone to videotape all school programs for community cable TV production. With our creative teachers, possibilities are endless, so please encourage your jr./sr. high school student to get involved in the arts.

Please mark your calendars with the 1993-94 Cohasset High School arts events. Teachers and students are working hard on their productions which provide great entertainment for the whole community.

Crucial to the success of the arts is community support, as audiences and as patrons of the arts. Last week the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club sent its annual fund-raising letter to all jr./sr. high school parents and to business patrons requesting financial support to assist Drama Workshop, Literary/Arts Magazine, Junior/Senior Chorus, Show Choir, Barbershop, Jazz Ensemble, to fund scholarships and the acquisition of essential equipment.

Please consider becoming a patron of the arts and send your tax deductible contribution, payable to Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, to Mrs. Olga Nohe, 10 Surrey Drive, Cohasset, 02025. If you wish further information or would like to work with the Arts Boosters, please call Sue McNamara, 383-6945.

Drivers: pay heed to pedestrians

To the Editor:

As a resident of Cohasset and avid runner, I feel compelled to write this message. While running along the winding roads of our seashore, my serenity is so frequently interrupted by the incredible high speeds of passing motorists. As we know, Cohasset has very few sidewalks, resulting in pedestrians going unprotected as they try and reach their destination.

Vehicles going at a high rate of speed have a tendency to catch their operators off guard. The vehicle will shift its weight and slither from side to side when traveling into curves, causing the operator to struggle with the wheel to maintain proper direction. It is at this point, while I am running, I hug the shrubs, fences and their posts hoping that the operator will not lose control.

Seasoned drivers, refresh your memory, speed kills!

Parents of children who have their licenses, instruct them in the severity of taking a life which could be their own. This past summer while in Cohasset Village, I contacted the Police Department when I observed two youths stretched across a hood of a moving motor vehicle, holding on for dear life. The operator accelerated around the corner as I watched, unable to obtain the license plate number. Could this have been your son?

Cohasset Police have maintained an excellent record in traffic enforcement. I have seen the police stopping vehicles as they speed through the community. It's time we assist the police in this endeavor by driving responsibly. Cohasset is a small community, it takes little time to get from one point to another, therefore there should be no reason to speed, endangering lives.

We as a community and those who travel through can prevent accidents once you become aware of the dangers associated with speed. Please watch out for the many pedestrians who frequent all roads wherever you may travel. Your license to operate a vehicle is an earned privilege that can easily be taken away.

Charles E. Santoro

Cast members named

Cohasset Dramatic Club has chosen the cast for their Jan., 1994 production. Congratulations to the following members chosen to play roles in the show: Scott Metevier, Sally Wright, Mike Nakashima, Molly Hochkeppel, Bob Julian, Julia Szulerowski, Deb Fitzpatrick, Dan Walsh and Mike Walsh.

The two-act comedy by Anthony Marriott and Alistair Foot will be co-directed by Angi Walsh and Bob Champagne. Production dates will be announced, but the club is looking at Jan., 1994, for the show to hit the stage.

If there is anyone interested in joining the Cohasset Dramatic Club, there's still time. Call the membership committee: Anita Aherne at 545-1549 or Betty Grant at 843-5822.

Officers and board members will meet at the home of Lisa Pratt Monday, Nov. 1, 7:30 p.m.

Cohasseter cast in musical

JoAnn Kilgore of Cohasset has been cast in the Bay Players of Duxbury fall production of Rogers' and Hammerstein's "The Sound of Music." JoAnn is part of the nun's choir.

"The Sound of Music" will be presented Nov. 12, 13, 21, 22 and 23 at Duxbury High School, St. George St. For information call 582-1898.

Marathon unites the arts

Exhibitions, workshops and lectures are planned for November at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset. The "Blue Ribbon Members Show" will be on display through Nov. 12. "Pieceful Connections: Contemporary Quilt Exhibition" opens Friday, Nov. 19 with a reception at 6 p.m. and a gallery talk by curator Kathleen Weinheimer at 6:30 p.m. The exhibition features contemporary quilts designed by regional artists. There will also be a featured gallery artists exhibition. The opening reception and exhibitions are open free to the public. Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m to 4 p.m.

Several adult workshops are planned for November. "Decorative Stenciling" with Judith Gilkie from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 6; "Papermaking" with Karen Gagne from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13; and "Painting For Me" with Claffy Williams from 9 a.m. to noon, Thursday, Nov. 4, 11 and 18. Holiday workshops will begin at the end of the month.

A lecture series, "Looking at Art," will be led by collectors Stephen Andrus, Muriel Kasdon and Gerald Kriegel at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 10.

For information on art center activities call 383-9548.

Mabel Colburn featured

Duxbury's Mabel Colburn will be the featured artist at the Staircase Gallery at the South Shore Conservatory, One Conservatory Drive, Hingham from Nov. 1 through Dec. 31.

Colburn, once described as an "ebullient lady" and "a painter of some renown," has travelled widely and draws from this experience in creating some of her more scenic pieces. Her fascination with colors and textures is ever present in her impressive collection of watercolors, collages and monoprints, many of which will be on display for two months at the conservatory.

She studied at the Child Walker School of Art in Boston and with various artists in New England. She has worked as an art therapy instructor with the Red Cross at the US Naval Hospital in Rhode Island and at the Children's Hospital in Boston as a director of recreation.

In 1992, she received the Esther Conant Award from the Bumpus Gallery in Duxbury for best show.

Admission is free and open to the public. The gallery is open Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m. to noon. Call the conservatory at 749-7565 for information.

Murder Mystery update

Sorry ... Murder Mystery is sold out. But, if you really would like to contribute to the PSO, remember donation tickets are available at $20 a ticket. This entitles you to five raffle tickets and five tries for our wonderful weekend get-away. Or, take a chance and bid on one of our wonderful auction items.

The silent auction will be the primary fundraiser for the PSO this year. The Murder Mystery night will be a wonderful and entertaining evening, but the majority of the proceeds will come from our Silent Auction. All proceeds from the auction will go directly to the PSO to enrich our children's educational experience.

So do your Christmas shopping early! Anyone can bid by calling Irene Barry, 383-1605. Just leave your name, bid amount, and phone number with Irene or on the machine. Here's your chance to give each other that great weekend or week away; to buy a health club membership for that athlete in your life; to give your son a chance to go to the hockey game and meet the players. Get a head start on your entertaining by having someone else do all the work for a dinner for eight, or have all your friends to the tennis club for a party. Here is a fabulous opportunity to purchase some incredible items at an affordable price and support the schools at the same time. So get your phone ready and bid!!

PAC plans lecture

The parents' advisory council of Cohasset is sponsoring an evening with Dr. James Mehegan, "Living and Learning with the LD and Attentional Problem Child" at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 9 in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. Refreshments will be served at 7:30 p.m.

Future looks rosy for girl booters

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The countdown to the '94 season has already begun for Cohasset head girls' soccer coach Don Satter.

And why shouldn't it? The youth factor that will inevitably work to the team's advantage in coming seasons, fell just short in getting the 8-6-2 squad into the South Sectional tourney this year.

In a must-win game for the Skippers, Cohasset jumped out to a 2-1 lead over South Shore League champion Hanover in the first half on goals by SSL All-Star Kate Carroll and Erin Murphy.

What's even more impressive about the tie against the Indians was that the Skippers were far from their best in the first half. Again, youth played its part.

"I think we reacted negatively to the pressure of knowing we had to win to stay in the the hunt for the tournament," said Don Satter. "And again, this goes back to the youth of the team."

Cohasset was able to regroup in the second half after a nerve-wracking start and began to play better. Hanover scored 15 minutes into the half and held on to the tie to end the Skippers' season.

Satter was pleased with the way the girls handled Hanover's pressure in the second half, particularly after the

Skippers look for long tourney run with a 9-0-3 record more than halfway through the season.

But Clark saw things differently, beyond the undefeated start. He believed his squad still hadn't played the best soccer they were capable of. "Even at that point," he said, "there were a few games we were lucky not to lose."

Injuries to Kevin McKenna, Jim Magner and Endris didn't help matters. McKenna, the leading goal scorer on the team at the time of his injury, more than likely will not play in the tourney. Magner the second-leading scorer has the go-ahead. Endris missed five games with a hamstring pull. He saw action in last Saturday's All-Star game against the Atlantic Coast League, but his hamstring began to act up and he was taken out so as not to injure it further. Clark, though, is confident he'll be ready when the all-important second season begins.

What made the Skippers so successful this season was that it just wasn't the All-Stars who were responsible for the winning record.

"Everyone contributed to our success," Clark said. "There was no one I put in only when we were down."

The Skippers had played sluggish of late, but Clark called last Monday's 3-2 victory over Scituate "a good turning point."

"We're coming into the tournament healthier and moving the game up a notch," he said, "which is necessary in the tournament."

Fullback Brian Duffy and sweeper Tom Greco are expected to play major roles in stabilizing the team's defense, while wing Ben Redfield should continue to pose a serious threat on the left side with his speed to the net. "He has the ability to beat his man and put pressure on the defense," Clark said.

Speedster Ryan Freeman and Chris Adams are two other offensive threats the Skippers will have at full strength.

Cohasset will be attacking this year's Division 2 South Sectionals with a vengeance. The Skippers were bounced quickly in the first-round last year by Abington, a team Cohasset played well against during the regular season.

For the Skippers, a quick exit this season would just not be acceptable.

"This year we're not just satisfied to make the tournament," he said. "We want to go into the deeper rounds."

Clark anticipates SSL champs Hanover (15-0-1), Dover-Sherborn, Medway and Norwell as the clubs that will be weeding out the lower seeded teams in the early going. Plus, there are always those squads that add a variable to the competition by registering stunning upsets over the higher seeds.

"There are quite a few teams out there you don't hear much about," Clark said.

He isn't, however, intimidated by any of the rosters expected to be high seeds.

"If you think of Hanover as one of the best teams," Clark said, "I think we can beat them. I think we could go as far as no injuries and good goaltending can take us."

More than skill, defense, strong offense or solid goaltending, Clark says the major reason, above all others, for the team's tourney qualification was that he stressed playing the game for pure and simple fun. He never based the season on wins or losses. Clark did expect 100-percent from the Skippers every time they went on the field. As it turned out, that was enough to get them where they are now — fun and all.

Last Tuesday's South Shore League Cross-Country Meet marked the first time this autumn that high-school harriers raced in cold conditions. By the time the boys' varsity race started at 4:30 p.m. the wind chill made it feel as though the temperature was in the mid 30s.

What became very clear was that the majority of the runners were not prepared for the frigid conditions. Only a handful of runners were wearing gloves, although many did don long-sleeved jerseys under their singlets. Of course, when it comes to racing, many runners prefer to wear just a singlet even in the coldest of conditions. It depends on the runner's preference.

The only criticism I have about holding the meet at the Strawberry Valley Golf Course is that the runners have no place they can go to get in out of the cold before their race. Runners were huddled together near the finish line under trees, trying to get some relief from the bone-chilling wind.

Beyond that, however, the location and course couldn't be better. Strawberry Valley has trails, long grass fairways and a number of locations from which spectators can view the race from. The league should now try to get some type of long-term agreement so it can hold the meet at the site for the next several years. Times can be compared from year to year and runners will know exactly what they're up against when they're called to the starting line for their race.

Two of the best soccer teams around, the Silver Lake boys' soccer team and the Marshfield High boys' soccer team, have players who can reach the goal from the sideline on a throw-in.

This may not sound like a big deal, but in soccer the only time a player, except for the goalie, can use their hands is on a throw-in.

The throw-in is used when the ball is kicked out of bounds and must be delivered with both hands and come from over the head.

Marshfield's Mike Cosman and Silver Lake's Paul Corcoran can both throw the ball around 40 yards and have it reach the goal. These throws give their teams numerous chances for header goals in front of the net.

"Having someone being able to throw like that is better than a corner kick because it is more accurate," said Marshfield coach Dennis Lassige.

Cosman set up teammate Bill Deftos for an insurance goal in the Rams 3-1 win over Duxbury last week with a throw from the sideline.

The win enabled Marshfield to have a shot at a second straight Atlantic Coast League title.

"The long throw-in has led to more than one goal for us, that's for certain," Lassige said. "It's a very good weapon."

As for Silver Lake, the same can be said for Corcoran's ability. His throws could be the big difference in the state tourney when many games head to overtime.

The Lakers won their fourth straight Old Colony League title last week and are one of the top teams in Division I soccer. They won the state championship in '88.

Luck eludes Skippers' field hockey squad

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Hopefully, sometime next summer a group of the Skippers' field hockey team will spend a week or two camping. They won't need sleeping bags, bug repellent, flashlights or marshmallows, though. All they'll have to have in their possession is a mouth piece, a stick and the desire to improve over this year's season.

With nine players lost to graduation, head coach Debby Bostwick hopes the six remaining players will think seriously about going to camp after this year's 3-7-5 record.

Not that Bostwick was unhappy with the team's effort, mind you, but she knows there will be a void to fill when this year's seniors are absent when practice officially begins in late August. And Bostwick is also quite aware that players from other South Shore League teams are sure to be sweating bullets — and learning in the process — at camp.

"With the size of our school we do well," said Bostwick of her team. "When you don't have 11 true field hockey players, but kids giving their heart and soul, that's what I like."

Several of the players on Bostwick's team were former soccer players who decided to give field hockey a try for the first time. The team's three wins was not a true indication of how well the Skippers did this year. But it was the five ties that jump out at you when you look at their record.

She believes the outcomes of many could have been different.

"In those games," Bostwick said, "I felt we could have buckled down a little more and turned those ties into wins. It seemed as though they (other teams) were always coming back."

She let her team know what was exactly on her mind during Cohasset's 2-1 victory over East Bridgewater in the next-to-last game of the season.

"(I told them) if you want to deal with a 1-1 tie that's fine, but I wanted to win the last two games."

SSL All-Star Cilla Goff scored on a pass from Laura Slotnick in the first half and added a second tally with eight seconds left in the game when she grabbed a rebound and put it in the back of the net.

That was the type of win Bostwick liked to see. The Skippers kept the pressure on EB, while Goff, All-Star Katie Ridge and Slotnick provided the firepower up front. Defensively, Faye Menis did her job in keeping the Vikings away from goaltender Gina Rosano.

Cohasset wasn't as successful in its final game against nemesis Scituate, as they dropped a 2-0 decision.

"We played well," said Bostwick, "but Scituate always gives us a battle."

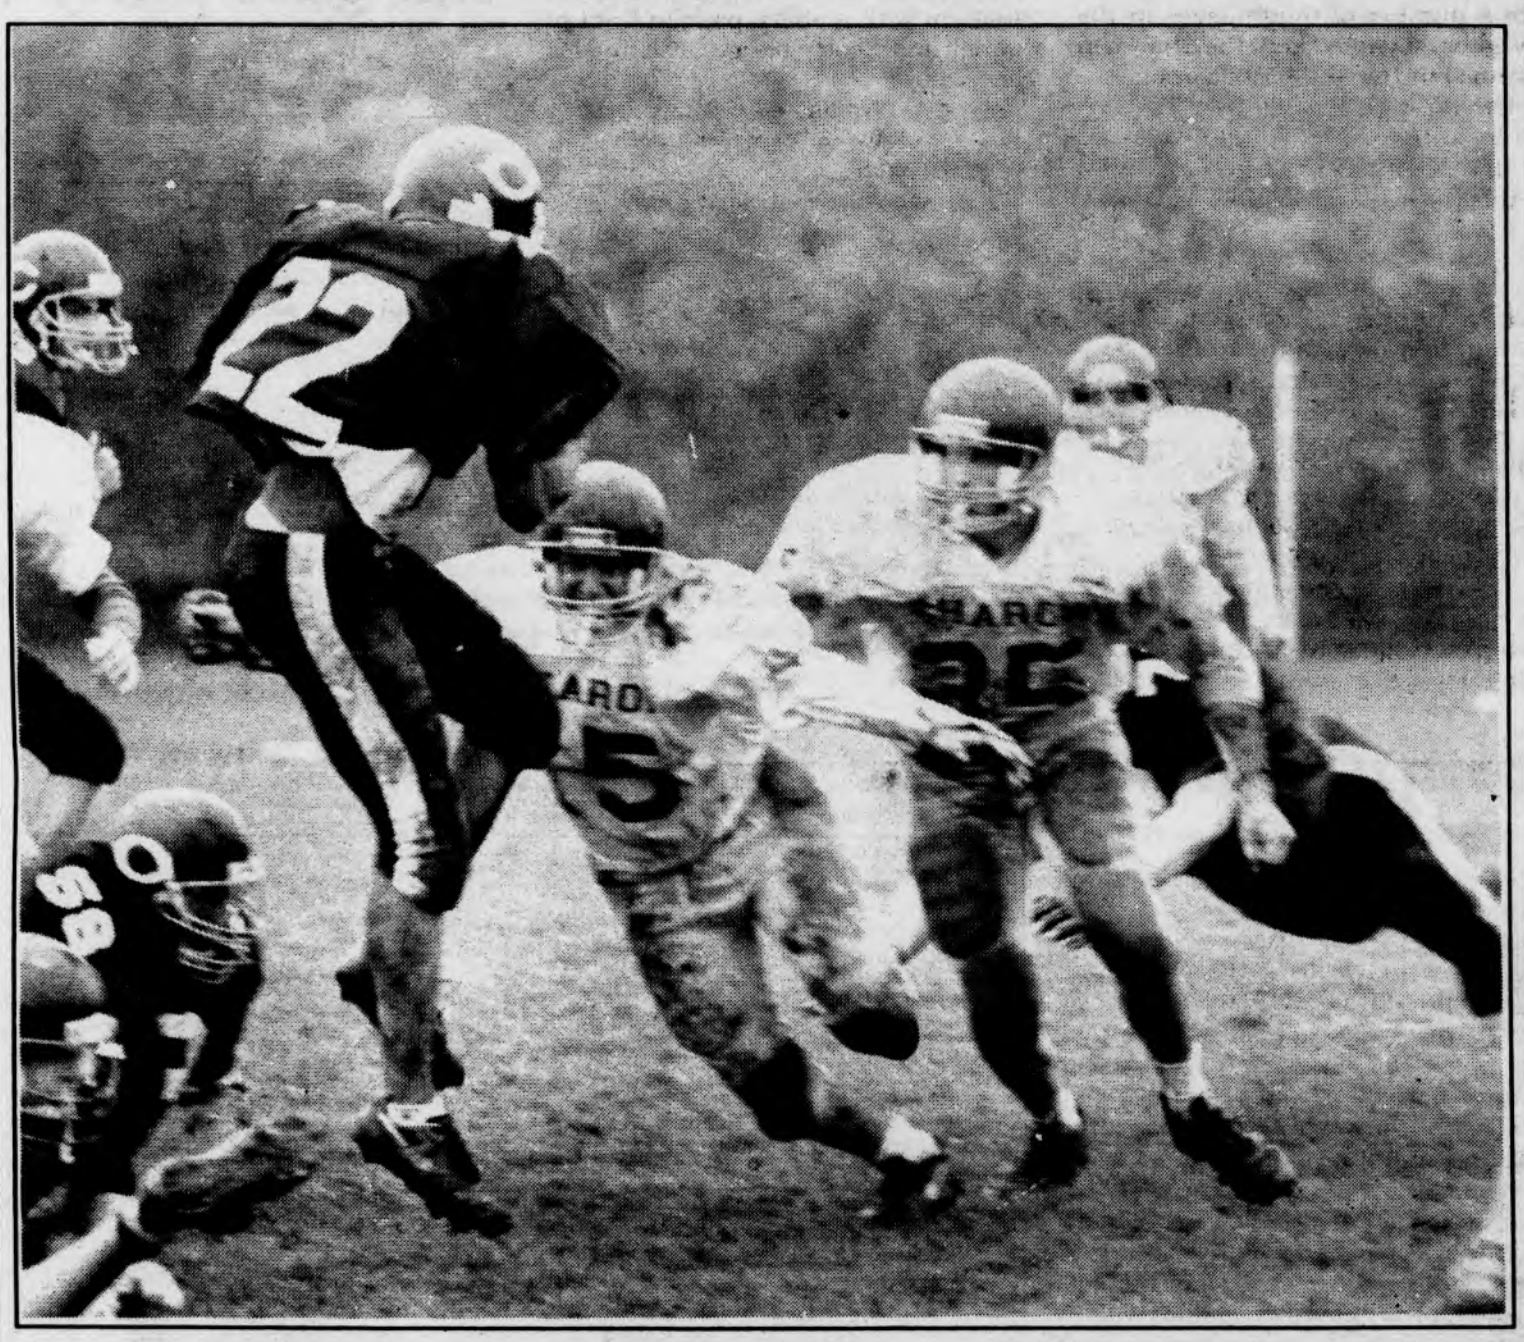
The Sailors scored their first goal when a player emerged from the pack and drove a shot past Rosano on the far side. With just two minutes left Scituate scored again to put the game away.

Bostwick believes some of the contests where the Skippers came up empty was due more to just being overpowered.

"We didn't really have much luck," she said. "Hopefully, in one year I'm to have all the luck in the world."

And a group players, fresh back from field hockey camp.

Crash landing . . .



Thomas Allen (22) goes high to pull down a pass during Cohasset's 7-7 tie last Saturday against Sharon. Allen scored the Skippers' lone touchdown.

Basketball registration Nov. 6

The Cohasset Recreation Department booster's basketball registrations will be held for girls and boys, grades one through nine, at town hall Saturday, Nov. 6, from 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for the program is $20. Checks should be made payable to Town of Cohasset. The shirt charge is included in the fee.

Details on the basketball program will be available at registration. Games are played Saturdays, but not during any vacation periods in order to avoid conflicts.

uncharacteristic sluggish start.

"I was very proud of the way they played against Hanover," he said. "We didn't crack when they tied it up. It was disappointing and frustrating because we showed during the season we were as good as the best teams.

"I would have loved to have had these kids in the tournament for one run at least, but it was not meant to be. Not for this year."

Next year, though, should be a different story all together. Satter is so high on the prospects of the '94 team he is already itching for the last week of August and the first official week of practice.

Cohasset will be returning its top gun, Erin Murphy. A SSL All-Star this season, Murphy led the league in scoring and was 10th in Eastern Mass with 17 goals, 13 assists for 30 points. Carroll, Corinna McMackin and Tracy Connor are also returning, and along with Murphy, will provide the nucleus for next season's run at the tourney.

In its last game of the season, the Skippers won a yawner over winless Hull, 8-0. Murphy jammed home two goals, while Carroll, Megan Fahey, Tammy Maitland, Kathleen Fitzsimmons, Connor and Meghan McNamara all added tallies.

"I had a lot kids on varsity for the first time this season," Satter said. "I think the future is very rosy. In fact, I wish preseason was tomorrow morning."

Sharks down Moritz to get back into win column

The Bay State Sharks Squirt Minor team got back to its winning ways this past weekend with a 4-2 victory over a very tough St. Moritz team. The win kept the Sharks undefeated at 6-0-1 after last week's 3-3 battle with the Springfield Jr. Olympics this week's game became a must win.

As has been the case in the last few games the opposition was "up" for undefeated Sharks. St. Moritz came out flying. They looked good as they kept the Sharks pinned in their own zone by out-skating, out-passing and out-hitting the home team. Hingham's Johnny Lynch was minding the Sharks' net for the first half of the game and was called upon to make a number of tough saves in the early going. "Lynchy" kept the Sharks in the game but the St. Moritz persistence and the Sharks' inability to clear the puck resulted in an early 1-0 Devils lead. The Sharks got on the board a few minutes later. Kenny Roche, who was a one-man wrecking crew, dumped the puck into the Devils zone. With St. Moritz trying to break out, Hingham's Garret Daigler made a nice play along the boards and stole the puck. Daigler passed to Brian Lewis of Cohasset, who popped in the tying goal.

The second period was a well-played period of up and down hockey with the Sharks holding a territorial edge. The Sharks took the lead when South Boston's Kenny Roche broke the puck out of the Sharks zone and hit Stoughton's Greg Osborne with a nice pass at center ice. Thumper turned on the jets and went wide into the corner. From there he hit Scotty McGinn of Hingham with a sharp pass in front of the net and Scotty banged it home for the score.

When the Devils tied the score at two , it seemed to be the wake-up call the Sharks needed.

The Sharks took the lead for good on what had to be the prettiest goal of the year. Brian Boyle stick handled through center ice and hit Dave Saggese at the Devils blue line. Saggese carried the puck down the right wing and found a wide-open Pat Devine coming in off left wing. Pat converted the pass to a top-corner goal. Stoughton's Gabe Winer was in the Sharks net for the second half of the game and was super. He robbed St. Moritz of two sure goals, one with a quick, pad save and one with his glove. He also got some help from defensemen Ryan Hatch of Hanover, Scotty Sparks of Norwood and Matt Bourassa of New Bedford.

Though they didn't score, the Shark's blue line, Nick Dunn (Marstons Mills), Bobby Noonan (South Boston) and Chris Coady (Hanover) were awesome. They kept the Devils off-balance throughout the game with some great hits. The Sharks got an insurance goal late in the third period when the boys from Hingham struck again. Brian Boyle got the puck out front to Pat Devine who dished-off to Dave Saggese for the tally.

Recreation department offers indoor beginner golf lessons

The Cohasset and Scituate recreation departments are co-sponsoring fall indoor golf lessons for beginner players, scheduled to begin Thursday evening, Nov. 4, at the Cushing School, Scituate.

Lessons are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly and the fee for the five one-hour sessions is $60 per person.

Should you wish to register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations are accepted on a first call basis.

Tail-gate party a success

By Barbara Rolandelli
Special to the Mariner

I would like to thank all the football players' and cheerleaders' families who made our fourth annual Tail-Gate Party a success. As a mother of a senior football player, I hope that the support of the school officials, parents and students will continue to grow to enable our young team to experience future successful seasons. Remember, not only is it important to have an excellent education in the three R's, but think of the wonderful qualities they learn from playing a team sport: the discipline, self-confidence, and overall ability to lead both on a playing field and in real life.

Thank you again to all of the parents.

"The Grasshopper and the Ant" is the main story this month for the preschool puppet show from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m., Friday, Nov. 5 at the Community Center. Admission is $2. Call 383-0088 for information.

Mom's morning out

The Community Center is offering baby-sitting Saturdays, Nov. 6 through Dec. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Pre-registration by Thursday for any Saturday.

Fee is $11 for the first child and $7 for the second child. Call 383-0088.

Chamber auction set

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is holding an auction beginning with a free franks and beans dinner at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13 at the community center, 3 South Main St.

Money raised through this effort will not only benefit the chamber's activities but also the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corp and the new teen center.

Order X-mas wreaths

Place your order for Christmas wreaths and boxwood trees to be made by ladies of the Greek Orthodox Church, Panagia.

Wreaths will also be sold at Cohasset Village Fair on Dec. 4.

Call Jean Syrmopoulos at 383-9071 to order.

Homeopathy lecture set

The Wah Lum Academy of Cohasset will host guest speaker Jane Cicchetti at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 19 at the First Parish Church in Norwell Center. Cicchetti is a nationally recognized homeopathic educator and consultant. Her lecture will focus on Homeopathy as a possible solution to many of the problems of today's health care system, including the medicines themselves.

Homeopathy is a two hundred year old science which entails the use of safe, natural remedies producing no side effects, to stimulate the body's healing response.

On Saturday, Nov. 20 and Sunday, Nov. 21 she will teach a beginners workshop in homeopathic acute care at the Wah Lum Academy.

For information call John Loupos at 383-6822.

Scouting for food

Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts of the Old Colony Council are conducting their annual "Scouting For Food" program. Food collected will be distributed locally before the holidays.

Building #19 has donated special food bags which will be distributed by the scouts Saturday, Nov. 13. They hope residents will fill the bags with canned goods to be collected Saturday, Nov. 20.

Call scout headquarters in Canton at 828-8360 for information.

Poinsettias for sale

American Cancer Society volunteers will be selling poinsettias to help support the fight against cancer on the South Shore.

Plants ordered before Nov. 23 will be delivered available for pick-up Nov. 30 and Dec. 7.

For information or order forms, call 341-4210.

CJHS holds bake sale

On the weekend of Nov. 6 - 7, the Cohasset Junior High School Calss of '99 will hold a bake sale to raise money for scholarships and senior events.

Saturday, Nov. 6 the sale will be from 9 a.m. to noon at town hall during recreational basketball signup.

Sunday, Nov. 7 items will be for sale after church at St. Stephen's and St. Anthony's.

Affirming diversity forum

On Sunday, Nov. 14, at 7 p.m., there will be a free public forum at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main Street, Hingham. The program will feature speakers from Parents, Families, and Friends of Lesbians and Gays (P-FLAG), a national federation of groups dedicated to support, education, and advocacy for gays, lesbians, bisexuals, and their families and friends.

This is the fourth forum in the series "Affirming Diversity," sponsored by the Welcoming Congregation Committee of the Old Ship Church.

The Old Ship Church is the oldest meeting house in continuous ecclesiastical use in the United States. It is a free and inclusive church affiliated with the Unitarian Universalist Association, sheltering persons of very diverse points of view. It has a strong tradition of concern for social problems and individual religious development.

For further information, call the church office at 749-1679.

Cub Scouts happenings

Cohasset Webelos from Pack 38 Cub Scouts are working on their communication badge. They were given a guided tour of Boston's Channel 56 by Cynthia Chappell and Shawnda Rose.

They enjoyed the sets of Channel 56, especially "Kids Company." They saw the cameras and lighting for the news. The Cubs attending were: Matt Ogrodnik, Bobby Prutulis, Jody Roach, Sam Dolph, Willie McArthur, David Krueger, Chris Carr, David DeVito and Ben Kinch.

TROOP 28 NEWS

Boy Scout Troop 28 attended a lecture by Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent William Pickett Jr. He showed a video of A.T.F. agents produced by WBZ's Liz Walker, Jack Williams and Charles Austin. By the investigation, the agents were able to capture the arsonist responsible for 200 fires in Boston. The job of the department includes solving arson-related fires to preventing illegal firearms and drug sales and transportation. The Scouts saw many types of guns and firearms confiscated by the D.E.A. agents.

Kennedy Museum featured

Under cloudy skies and with blustery offshore winds at Columbia Point, Boston, Wigmore Pierson, host of "Pierson to Person" on Continental Cablevision, was given the grand tour of the re-dedicated John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library in Boston.

Escorted by Michael Kennedy, youngest son of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy, Pierson was taken back in time to 1963, illustrating President Kennedy's life, leadership and legacies. In addition, Pierson interviewed David F. Powers, presidential assistant and director of the museum.

With a new generation not knowing anything about the Kennedy era, the trustees developed and implemented a "you-are-there sense of immediacy," highlighting a style of "one-on-one" with the visitor, utilizing Kennedy's words and speeches without interpretation or analysis.

The museum's inventory houses approximately 15,000 objects, some never before seen in public. Film and video screens dot the interior of the complex, showing events of 1963.

Locally designed and constructed, the enclave features 10 miles of wiring and uses the latest technology in laser disc and computers, while housing 180,000 still photographs, 400 installed in the museum.

The program will be broadcast in its entirety at 8 p.m. Thursday on Continental Cablevision's Channel 53.

Babysitting course held

The Cohasset Community Center sponsored a babysitting course taught by Linda Farrag. The Cohasset Police, Safety Officer Cliff Jones and Cohasset Fire Dept. gave a lecture on safety and fire prevention. They also showed videos.

The course includes first aid, fire safety, entertaining young children, child development and nutrition.

Sixteen participants completed the course: Lindsey Hubley, Taylor Strecker, Elizabeth Ingber, Lindy Morde, Katie Roth, Betsey Anderson, Ary Afshar, Amanda Cowing, Andi Shaughnessey, Kristen Devine, Jennifer Barnes, Lindsey Gardener, Alicia Laas, Abbi Batman, Kristen Moore and Christopher Pearson.

Homebuyers seminar set

The Norwell and Hingham offices of Shawmut Bank are hosting a free seminar targeting first time homebuyers. The seminar will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 4 at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St., Hingham.

First time homebuyers will receive information regarding credit issues, what type of mortgage will fit specific needs, prequalification process and what the attorney's role is.

For reservations call Terry Narus at 871-8650 or Linda Grilli at 749-9007.

Leaf-rakers available

Leaf-raking will be the first official fundraiser for the 38 Cohasset teenagers planning to go to Appalachia for their 1994 summer work project. Arranged in teams of three to five, they are all set to come and rake your lawn for the bargain price of $7/hour/volunteer.

There are three specific dates and times they will be "on call." Teams are available to work between 9 a.m. and noon on the next three consecutive Saturdays: Oct. 30 and Nov. 6.

To schedule your rakers, call or leave message for Ami Argus (office: 383-0345 or Home: 383-9325).

Coming up in November will be the group's Thanksgiving pie sale (pumpkin, apple and pecan).

Wellspring benefit

The Hingham Woodwind Quintet will present a concert at 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 7 in the Old Ship Church. This will benefit two programs at Wellspring, Inc. in Hull: Partners in Adult Literacy and Intervention Project — a Program for Battered Women.

The Quintet, with members Eric Oddleifson, Dick Norton, Dee Caton, Sally Davenport and Ellen DeNooyer will be joined by three Hingham High School string players, Sarah Hardy, Stephanie Clark and Fay Ferency. John Davenport will accompany some of the selections on the harpsichord. The concert will close with movements from a work by Charles Gounod, "Petite Symphonie."

Tickets are on sale at the Hingham Public Library and Bookport for $10 each.

Robin Lane to perform

Boston actress Robin Lane will perform "Queen of Back Bay," a dramatization of the life of art patron Isabella Stewart Gardner at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 14 at Brandon Woods, 110 Charles St., Hingham. Tea will be served after the performance. Tickets are $12 and may be purchased at the door or by calling 925-3639. Proceeds will benefit the Hingham Catholic Women's Club.

"Queen of Back Bay," researched and written by Lane, depicts Gardner, her times and the palace she created. Lane has toured the U.S. as a singer and actress with her one-woman shows.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 91P2776E1
Notice of Fiduciary's Account

To all persons interested in the estate of Mary E. Fleming late of Cohasset, Norfolk County.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the first and final accounts of Claire Chase as Executor (the fiduciary) of said estate have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the tenth day of November, 1993 the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham this eighth day of October, 1993.

Delays decision by two months

After public outcry, state balks at septic changes

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner staff

After a stiff show of opposition last week by state and local officials, residents and Realtors, the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has delayed by at least two months its decision to toughen septic regulations for Massachusetts businesses and homeowners.

The proposed changes to Title V of the state Environmental Code were to have gone into effect Jan. 1, according to DEP Division of Water Pollution Control director Brian Donahoe.

However, the legislation has been blasted by critics who say the proposed changes would be paramount to a building moratorium in many coastal communities. Other changes, they charge, could cost homeowners tens of thousands of dollars in mandated septic system upgrades.

According to the chairman of Marshfield's coastal advisory board, Doris Crary, the regulation changes as written could effect nearly every home in Marshfield built before 1978.

But strong opposition by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, area health agents, town planners and building inspectors, as well as homeowners themselves, has forced the state to rethink its strategy.

Last week, the DEP held a series of public hearing throughout the state to receive public input.

In Bourne alone, Crary said, 400 people attended a hearing to speak against the changes. A hearing in Worcester was postponed because the meeting place was too small to accommodate the crowd which showed up.

Donahoe said he was pleased with the turnout, adding that it will take officials until at least March before they can tabulate all of the input received.

"We were very pleased that so many people showed up," he said. "That was the whole point of an exercise like this."

The DEP has said statewide septic changes are necessary to protect groundwater supplies which are threatened by inadequate underground disposal of sanitary waste. While experts recognize the need to protect the state's water supply, they feel the changes are too sweeping.

Under the DEP's proposed guidelines, as many as one million Massachusetts homes and businesses would be affected, according to the Mass. Association of Realtors.

All cesspools in the state would have to be removed and replaced with septic systems. Those septic systems the state terms substandard would have to be replaced, and pumping and maintenance records would be strictly enforced. All septic tanks constructed before 1978 would be subject to an inspection which could involve excavation.

The "new" Title V also would redefine the term "environmentally sensitive area." Under the provision, homes within 150 feet of the ocean or 400 feet of a public water supply which suffer more than 50 percent damage in a storm or fire would be prohibited from being rebuilt.

"There is a tremendous public misconception that if you don't live near the ocean this isn't going to impact you," Crary said.

"This is legislation that impacts everyone who isn't hooked up to town sewer. If you read the way (the DEP) describes 'environmentally sensitive areas' you will see that it is not just a coastal issue. If there is a creek behind your house or a wet spot in your back yard, or especially if you are located by the source of the town's water, you are in an environmentally sensitive area."

In some instances, homes which can not not comply with the new Title V regulations could be torn down. Using what Crary called a "Health and Safety" clause, the DEP would not be required to reimburse the homeowner.

In other environmentally sensitive areas, homes would be required to be surrounded by one acre of land. Crary said the DEP inflated the amount of wastewater generated per person per household by more than four times the municipal average in order to justify its acreage requirement.

"About 90 percent of the Cape, and in some cases, whole towns would become environmentally sensitive under the proposed DEP regs," Crary said.

The role of health agents also would be redefined, as the state is proposing to place them at construction sites for the entire duration of perc tests. One health agent estimated that it would take more than nine hours to conduct a perc test under conditions set forth by the new Title V regulations.

New septic systems would be required to sta[illegible] feet above the water table, an impossible feat i[illegible] coastal area. Even in areas where mounded sy[illegible] would be allowed, the cost is often prohibitive.

Elderly residents, who have spent years building equity, could see their savings jeopardized if they are forced to rebuild a septic system as a condition to the sale of their home, Crary noted.

Not only that, but portions of the proposed regulations conflict with language written in the National Flood Insurance Plan and state building codes.

"I think the DEP tried to pull a fast one, and they got caught," said Scituate building inspector Ralph Crossen, who has followed the Title V proposal since it was introduced after Hurricane Bob and the 1991 No Name Storm. "This could backfire on them. I think they're going to have to go back to the drawing board for an extended period of time on this one."

"This is no minor revision," said Crary. "They need to present an affordable and realistic program for septic systems and upgrades."

Donahoe agreed and said the DEP will include a broader range of groups in its continued analysis of Title V.

"We're going to take a little more time to respond to the comments we received," he said. "We're going to take another look at the target area for cesspools and see if we can reduce the cost. We're going to have to do some hard thinking to make sure we really get what we want out of these regulations and see what parts we can postpone until the future.

"The general public agrees that we are doing the right thing, but it's just going too fast. We've done an adequate job identifying what the problem is and that one exists, but the real issue right now is money. If we can solve that, then we'll be able to move forward much quicker."

The deadline for public input regarding the proposed title V changes has been extended until Nov. 30, Donahoe said.

Common is no safe harbor for ducks in winter

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The popular pastime of feeding ducks is becoming a health hazard for the town's feathered friends.

Time is running out for the ducks, who inhabit the Town Common, to safely migrate south for the winter, warns local environmentalist Jack Hubbard.

"The window closes soon as far as the ducks being able to make the trip properly," he says.

But as long as the Mallards find easy pickings — they'll stay.

The abundance of food provided by people, who visit the common, gives the ducks a false sense of security, Hubbard explains.

Ducks' natural diet consists of minnows, marsh grass, and acorns. Bread and other "people food" can wreak havoc with their digestive system, he says.

Because of the overpopulation and pollution problems caused by the ducks' droppings, last month selectmen considered installing signs asking the public not to feed the ducks.

But due to governmental red tape — the signs will be

(See page 6)

Liquor stores open Sundays

Selectmen exercised the town's option this week by giving the go ahead to local Sunday package store openings from Nov.21 through Dec. 26 as allowed under state law.

The state expanded the law last year to include the Sunday before thanksgiving through the Sunday before New Year's.

Stores may not open before noon and must close not later than 11 p.m.

Andy Hailer, manager of Curtis Liquors, asked selectmen to approve the Sunday openings.

Hailer said if neighboring towns allow liquor stores to stay open and Cohasset didn't — then Cohasset stores would lose business.

"It's only fair that we be able to compete," he told the board. "The holiday season is the bread and butter of our business."

Hailer said however he isn't an advocate of local option law.

"If liquor stores weren't allowed to open anywhere (on

Ropes course is more than a climb

By Joe Reardon

Donned in a protective helmet and rope tied around his waist, Cyrus Dolph struggled to climb the rope ladder that led to the solid wooden platform, 30 feet above the ground.

For Dolph, a 10th-grader in Cohasset High's alternative program, his goal at Saturday afternoon's outing on the school's rope course was to make it up the wobbly ladder and onto the platform. Although he had watched others on the course on two different occasions, it was Dolph's first time taking part.

"It's a new experience and hopefully it should be fun," said Dolph, who had a pair of scraped knees to show for his first few attempts at making it up to the platform. "I've seen people use the zip line and it looks

Cohasset's week

Armistice Day noted

Nov. 11, 1993 commemorates the 75th anniversary of the Armistice of World War I.

Selectmen signed a proclamation at their meeting this week making special note the anniversary. By signing the board supports observation of this event on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month by a moment in silence in all schools, workplaces and homes followed by the ringing of bells in churches and public buildings as a patriotic and heartfelt remembrance of all those who served and died for their country.

On Nov. 11, 1918, in accordance with the terms of the cease-fire agreement signed that morning in the Compiegne forest, hostilities between the Allies — the United States, Great Britain, and France — and an adversarial, Germany, officially ceased on the 11th hour of that day.

The proclamation also recognizes the citizens of the United States who were called on to make extraordinary contributions to support the efforts of their men and women. The international war claimed more than 8-1/2 million soldiers, including 126,000 Americans.

Volunteer organizations such as the national society Daughters of the American Revolution in organizing relief efforts for European war refugees, buying war bonds, donating millions of dollars to war-related service organizations, providing time, money and materials for the provision of gifts to American personnel, and sending volunteers overseas to support relief activities, served as an example of patriotic, national service, the proclamation said.

Flag issue unresolved

The state has asked Cohasset to provide a town flag to fly in the Hall of City Flags in the Great Hall of the State House.

The state hopes to have all 351 flags from cities and towns across the Commonwealth up in time for a grand dedication on Flag Day, June 14.

A town flag was created for Cohasset for the 1976 bicentennial celebration. That flag is in the selectmen's office.

Selectmen tabled action on the state's request until Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon can obtain flag prices. It's not clear if the town would create a duplicate of the bicentennial flag or design a new flag.

In a letter to the town, David B. Balfour, director of special projects for the state, said the town flag should be cotton and measure 4 x 6 feet. Arrangements have been made with Massachusetts Correctional Industries (MCI) to make the flags to specification for a reasonable price from town supplied artwork. Local flag companies are also offering special rates, Balfour said.

Buildings declared surplus

The old shipping and receiving buildings at the Hagerty site can now be sold, dismantled, or moved.

Selectmen declared the buildings surplus this week to set the stage for the possibility of a park or recreation area at the Parker Avenue location. Anyone is interested in buying all or part of the old structures should contact the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

The conservation commission will hold a public hearing on demolishing the buildings and removing debris from the site, Nov. 16.

Single tree to be lighted

A single, 30-foot cut tree will be lighted on the Town Common this year.

Robert V. Davenport is donating the tree. Selectmen have received donations totalling $625 to go toward installing electrical service. The donations include: $50 from Merle S. Brown; $75 from Carousel Antiques; $50 from R.M. Driscoll; $250 from the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce; and $200 from Charles DiPesa.

The tree will be erected near the duck pond, between the pond and the First Parish Church.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said several citizens had spoken with her about lighting a single tree. The board had considered lighting all nine trees around the duck pond or lighting every other tree.

Goedecke said lighting one tree would not "fight" with the tradition of lighted candles in the windows of homes around the common.

The board hopes to have the tree installed in time for the village fair Dec. 4.

Poles need attention

Supt. Harold Litchfield has asked selectmen to remind telephone and electric companies that it is time to do something about the various double poles in town.

"With the winter months approaching the snow plows will inevitably hit these poles, possibly causing needless damage and delays in plowing," Litchfield said. "Any assistance in this matter would be appreciated."

Hingham holds all the Greenbush cards

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The MBTA project manager came equipped with a lot of Cohasset answers Tuesday night — but he didn't get a lot of Cohasset questions.

Hingham and the tunnel alternatives attracted the most interest during a special informational meeting on Greenbush commuter service at the South Shore Arts Center.

The meeting, which featured lots of charts, is the first of several planned in different towns to provide citizens with the opportunity to learn more about proposed transportation improvements in the Greenbush corridor which consists of northeast Braintree, north Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield and east Duxbury.

The MBTA is considering six transportation improvement alternatives ranging from surface rail to more buses and boats. One of the alternatives is surface rail with a tunnel under Hingham Square and that alternative consists of four tunnel options.

The tunnel is being pushed by Hingham historical preservationists who say at-grade train service will be detrimental to the fragile historic districts along the right of way.

The MBTA study should be completed in January. A review by the Citizens Advisory Committee, made up of members from each town in the corridor, follows and then there will be a period for public comment. So the MBTA could make a decision on a transportation alternative within about 18 months, Connor explained.

Three of the tunnel options are cut-and-cover tunnels of varying lengths. While all eliminate expensive grade crossings, they still add tens of millions of dollars to the railroad project.

The most expensive tunnel is the deep bore tunnel under Hingham which would cost about $165 million.

Connor said the MBTA, whose chairman is the secretary of transportation, will make the final decision on which alternative and if a tunnel alternative is selected, which one.

He said that no blasting would be required for any of the tunnel alternatives. The cut-and-cover tunnel along the right-of-way would be dug by excavation. And in the deep bore alternative a diamond tipped drill is used.

There is a by-product to building a tunnel — top soil — and lots of it, Connor said.

He said perhaps Hingham could use it to cover its landfill.

Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby, who is one of Cohasset's representatives on the Citizens Advisory Committee which is reviewing the study on the project, said Cohasset's roadblock to restored rail service can be summed up in one word: Hingham.

She pointed out that some Hingham citizens may be opposed to restoration of the railroad because they already have transportation such as boats and buses.

The next informational meeting is set for 7 p.m., Monday at the Hingham Town Offices, 7 East St.

Auditors paint water budget picture rosy

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

With new billing procedures, more conservative revenue estimates, and a comprehensive metering program — fiscal year 94, which began July 1, should be a better year for the water department, town auditors say.

In its report, auditors Tucci & Roselli also said water usage during the dry summer should exceed the conservative estimates the water department derived during budgeting time.

"Additionally, the metering program, if successful, should result in an increase in revenues due to a 'catching up' of all broken or absent meters," the report said.

Cumulative deficits of $400,000 caused the activities of the water department to become an area of serious concern in the previous fiscal year, according to the report.

"Our analysis in the previous year indicated that poor budgeting and questionable billing and collection procedures were the major reasons of blame relative to the above problem," the auditors said.

Water department budgeting is now done with the assistance of the accounting department. And revenue estimates are now calculated in a much more accurate and conservative manner, which has alleviated the potential of material revenue shortfalls, auditors said.

Billing and collection are now being performed by the collector's office. The collector, now being in control of this whole function, can best utilize the fullest collection procedures allow by law.

Controls are being strengthened in the area of determining which homes have broken meters or have no meters. Meters will be replaced, fixed, or installed as needed.

Domestic violence workshop

Cohasset Police Officer Lisa Matos attended a recent conference on domestic violence which focused on new amendments to the abuse law; treatment programs for abuse victims and batterers; long-term strategies for effective police/judicial response; and ways to create more public awareness about the the problem.

She said the state is currently conducting a pilot program in which batterers with a history of abuse wear a tracking-device ankle bracelet. These bracelets allow the defendant free mobility except within a predetermined range of the victim's home (usually the length of a football field). If the defendant comes within the set range an alarm of warning sounds in the victim's home, Matos explained.

This alerts the victim that the defendant is nearby and the signal is transmitted to a monitoring station. The call is then dispatched to the local police. The alarm in the victim's home also works as a recording device allowing the monitoring agency to hear everything that goes on like fights, screams, and gunshots.

Matos, who is Cohasset's domestic violence officer, said potential candidates for the ankle bracelets are being screened by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Dept.

Common is no safe harbor for ducks in winter

too late to help the ducks this year.

Selectmen said the sign(s) would need the approval of the Common Historic District Commission and turned the matter over to Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon.

Doyon submitted a sign application to the historic district commission. The status of that application is unclear. Citing the need for more input, the commission cancelled its meeting this week and Doyon is away on vacation.

Member Marion Atkinson explained the commission doesn't have the power to stop the signs and can only provide input on how a sign affects the aesthetics of the Town Common and whether things placed there would be difficult to maintain.

Hubbard said once winter comes, fewer people feed the ducks and they start travelling south. But by that time, the rivers start to freeze up and the ducks seek shelter in the ocean which is risky for them.

He said this fall there have been a few black ducks at the pond.

"Black ducks are very wild and are almost an endangered species in this part of the country. To see one in there is very worrisome," he explains.

When ducks flying over see a group of ducks, they join them.

"All wild ducks are attracted to others, they want to see what's happening," he says. "And when they see a safe food source, they go for it."

Hubbard favors educational signs — perhaps placed on the back of the benches at the duck pond — explaining to people the unhealthy consequences, which feeding has for the ducks.

Although the local duck population has increased on the common, Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said the ducks haven't become a public health issue for that board. He added that all the town ducks do seem to be congregating there.

"You don't see any ducks at Little Harbor anymore — they're all on the common."

Hubbard said there's "no free lunch in the animal world."

"It has a hitch to it," he said. "The wild animal gets used to not working for food in a sensible way.

Hubbard said Cohasset ducks are walking right up to people like animals in a zoo.

"This is not a zoo," he says. "And we shouldn't treat animals as though it is.

"If people want to take pleasure in the ducks. What's wrong with taking the children down to the common and watching them? The ducks are perfectly capable of supporting themselves and don't need to be fed."

A duck enjoys the fountain in the duck pond on the Town Common. Too much feeding, however, has lulled the ducks into a false sense of security, local environmentalists say.

Billing update

In October the fire department billed for 29 ambulance transports for a total commitment of $8,981.98. The fire department had receivables of $7,320.25 in October. In FY'94, which started July 1, the town has collected $29,860.49 out of a possible $40,404.60 — a collection rate of about 73 percent.

Appointments made

Selectmen appointed residents Donald Williams and Peter Dewey to the Cable-TV committee, Monday. There is still one vacant seat on the Cable-TV committee.

Other committee vacancies are: Government Island Study Committee (1), Handicapped Commission (1), and Water Resources Protection Committee (1). Anyone interested in serving should contact the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Contract awarded

The police/fire station will be equipped with a Panasonic-type electronic hybrid key telephone system.

Selectmen awarded the contract for $13,272.65 for the telephone system at their board meeting Monday. The system will be paid for with left-over monies in the police/fire station renovation account, which has a balance of $19,000, selectmen said.

Engineers are paid

Selectmen approved payment of $600 to Civil Designs Inc. of Boston for professional services relating to beach and highway repairs for the month of October.

Treanor reports for duty

Cohasset's newest police officer, Jeffrey Treanor reported for duty Nov. 1. Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said after a short in-house training period, Officer Treanor will be on the street.

Richard G. Abbadessa, another new recruit, is in his sixth week at the police academy and will be on the streets in February.

Leaflets circulated

Police circulated more than 100 blue leaflets with stickers for the car window to parents dropping off their children at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools to remind the them to use safety belts, Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said.

Children aged 12-and-under are required to be properly restrained by state law. Failure to do so can result of a fine of up to $35 for the first offense, police said.

Safety belts reduce the chance of serious injury or death by up to 75 percent in a crash, Noonan said.

Re-routing okay'ed

Nichols Road will be one-way for the Community Garden Club of Cohasset holiday house tour Dec. 8.

Those attending can park along one side of Nichols Road or use the Sandy Beach Parking lot.

Vans will also be available from the parking lot to shuttle house-tour ticket holders the various homes on the tour.

Selectmen approved use of the parking lot, parking on one side of Nichols Road, and making Nichols Road one way at their board meeting this week.

Cafeteria plan okayed

Members of the Cohasset Library Association may participate in the "Cafeteria Health Plan", selectmen said.

Members of the library union C.L.A.S.S. wrote selectmen requesting they be allowed to participate in the medical-insurance plan by the end of the year.

The teachers' union and non-union employees are enrolled in the plan.

❑ "Oh, what a night....for Gino DiGirolamo that is!! Last Saturday Gino(they used to call his "DIGI," can you imagine?) was inducted into Malden Catholic High School's Hall of Fame.

Gino earned 10 letters in four sports, an impressive achievement indeed: he was a pitcher and outfielder in baseball, defenseman in hockey, and quarterback in football, and was named to the All-League Team in both football and hockey.

He began teaching in Cohasset in 1960, at the high school, where he was chair of mathematics, assistant principal, and principal.

All will tell you that Gino was truly one of the great guys to teach at CHS, and many of his former colleagues were at the event to honor him. Former teachers Pat Plante, Whity Dunn, Tom Hughes and Curt Collins (now principal at Dennis-Yarmouth); Dennis Walsh, Jack Leary, Paul Hogan, Tom O'Neil, Jim Franey and Clark Chatterton, all part of the present staff at CHS, were there too.

A wonderful evening for a wonderful man, we applaud you Gino, and miss you and Josie! Be sure to make your way down from Manchester, NH, often!

❑ Cohasset Common will certainly be a busy site this Saturday night, something for everyone! The Chamber of Commerce is holding its 6th annual auction at the Community Center, beginning at 6:30 p.m. with free beans and franks, and the bargains beginning at 7:30. Its always a great time, and it sure helps the Chamber with their fund-raising!

❑ If square dancing is your thing, you are in luck, the Second Congregational Church is holding a square dance at the Town Hall from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the price of $3 per person or $10 per family.

Starch those petticoats, warm up those dancing shoes, and be there for lots of fun!

❑ Everyone is so proud of Alix Ash, especially her family and friends! Alix, a 1989 CHS grad, graduated from Mansfield Beauty Academy and is now licensed by the State Board of Cosmeticology as a nail technician.

We certainly wish you well in your career, Alix, and praise you for your efforts.

❑ Marjorie and Fred Howe called with wonderful news last week, their third great-grandchild arrived on Nov. 1! Kelsie Kathryn Palmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Elliott Palmer of Cotuit, will thrill everyone, just as they were beside themselves when Paul Fredrick Burton was born August 20 (he lives in Andover).

What a crowd of babies will be at their Thanksgiving table, and what fun!

❑ Speaking of babies, Tommy Coburn has an announcement to make! He is a big brother!! Tommy's sister, Emily Bott Coburn, was born Nov. 6 at Framingham Union Hospital, weighing in at 9-1/2 lbs! Mom, Jeannine, and Dad, Tom, are just thrilled, to say nothing of Ann and Roger Pompeo and Tom and Mary Jane Coburn. Of course Mimi, Emily's great-grandmother, cannot wait to get her in the carriage for a long fall walk!

Congratulations to you all, especially Emily, who will get tons of love from that bunch!!

❑ Great news for the downtown area, there is a new shop! Located at the old Art Center, it is called Woman's Surroundings, and what a neat place! Sixteen women and one man are there with handcrafts and treasures. There is a tea room. They will be offering workshops and classes and are planning bus trips

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Willette, Jr.

Young/Willette

Susan Elizabeth Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark N. Young Jr. of Cohasset married Frederick A. Willette Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Willette of Paxton on May 2 at the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset. Mr. Gary Pitts officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Maid of honor was Sarah Roebuck of Cohasset.

Bridesmaids were Katie Gibson of Weymouth, Pam Willette of Framingham and Debbie Willette of Newton.

Steve Willette of Brookfield served as best man. Ushers were Clark N. Young III of Cupertino, Calif., David J. Young of Cohasset and Roger Reed of Whitman.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School, Massasoit College and is a student at Northeastern University. She works at Roebuck catering in Hingham.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Weymouth High School and Lowell University. He works at Kimball's By The Sea in Cohasset as executive chef.

After a reception at Kimball's By The Sea, the couple took a wedding trip to St. Martin and are now living in Whitman.

and excursions for ladies.

This Saturday and Sunday (Nov. 13 and 14) they will be holding an open house. Go the the Log and visit Peter and Judy for a cup of coffee, then to Woman's Surroundings for treats galore. We hear you'll be able to do tons of Christmas shopping there!

❑ Larry Schultz wants to remind you that spring soccer registration takes place this Saturday at the Deer Hill School cafeteria from 10 a.m. to noon. Kiddos five years or older as of Aug. 1 to 18 years old as of July 31, 1993 are eligible. Cost is $35 for first player, $30 for second player in family, $25 for third player, 0 for each additional.

It is a great program that Larry and his crew run, be sure to get your player involved.

❑ We hope that Eileen Bojarski is feeling much better as she reads this!!

❑ JoAnn Kilgore will have a busy weekend, she is part of the nun's choir in "The Sound of Music," a production put on by the Bay Players of Duxbury, to be held at the Duxbury High School on the 12 and 13, and the 21, 22 and 23. As they say, "Break a leg, JoAnn."

❑ Finally, Kathy Pratt called to ask that you donate items to the kitchen at the Cohasset Community Center. They are in need of many items. Call the center at 383-0088 to see what you can do for them!

Thats the news from here for this week. Please call me with your latest tidbit! There is tons of news around town. Share it with all of us!

Bernard L. Mulcahy

Bernard Lawrence Mulcahy, 51, of Cohasset, an engineer for General Electric in Lynn for many years, and a member of the Hatherly Country Club in North Scituate, died of cancer Nov. 8 in Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

Mr. Mulcahy retired from GE in 1987.

He was born and lived all his life in Cohasset. He graduated from Maine Maritime Academy in 1965.

He leaves three sons, Brendan Mulcahy, Craig Mulcahy, and Kevin Mulcahy, all of Cohasset; his mother Catherine (Walsh) Mulcahy of Cohasset; two brothers, Richard Mulcahy of Oakton, Va., and Lawrence Mulcahy of West Springfield; two sisters, Maureen O'Meara of Glencoe, Ill., and Kathleen Pratt of Cohasset; a friend, Angela Pappastratis of Marshfield; several nieces and nephews. He was the son of the late Bernard H. Mulcahy.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 10 a.m., Nov. 11, in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Don't feed the ducks

- "Ducks don't need people to feed them because they can find their own food. They will migrate somewhere else if they can't find food here."
- "I think that we should feed the ducks one time a month so they won't stay at the Common and freeze. I picked this answer because I don't want the ducks to freeze. I want them to fly to a warm place."
- "We could make a sign that says don't feed the ducks or you will be in jail for a month. We could make an alarm that goes to the police. We could make a whistle that scares the ducks away."

These are just three creative ideas from many generated by Mrs. Atkinson's third graders at the Osgood School. The students were asked to talk to their families and decide if putting up a sign is a good solution or if they could think of another way to keep the ducks safe and the common clean.

Judging from the enthusiastic response from the third graders, we don't think educating the public about the detrimental affects of feeding the ducks will be difficult.

Most people want to help. And the realization that feeding the ducks is harmful to the ducks will be a strong deterrent.

Surely town officials can put their heads together with local environmentalists and decide on signs that are not only aesthetically acceptable but educational as well.

Mrs. Atkinson suggested having a speaker from the Audubon Society come to the schools to address migration and feeding of ducks. Although this project might require some funding — it would be worthwhile. Children love wildlife and involving them in this issue also gives them a sense of civic responsibility.

Cohasset's town common is a Norman Rockwell-like setting and the ducks add to that nostalgic picture. But we should refrain from feeding the ducks — enjoying watching them should be enough.

And then if the ducks are gone by November — we'll all know they're off to find a safe, warm place — farther south.

Liquor license for Music Circus supported

(Ed's note: The following letter was sent to selectmen).

Dear Board Members:

I am writing this letter in support of the South Shore Music Circus' request for a wine and beer license.

The South Shore Music Circus has proven itself to be a very valuable and integral part of our community. Its contribution to the cultural and entertainment vitality of the South Shore is an important aspect in maintaining a quality of life which we can all enjoy and take pride in.

The Music Circus has always been a good neighbor, and has exhibited a responsibility to the needs and desires of the community which I am confident will continue in its management of the license if granted.

In addition to the entertainment that it has provided for so many, the Music Circus has been a generous friend to cultural and social programs like TIC who would have a difficult time continuing to serve without the Music Circus' help.

In these difficult financial times when so many businesses and organizations are struggling to continue, I hope that you will look favorably on the Music Circus' request for a beer and wine license so that it can compete successfully.

License will add 'ambience' to evening

To the Editor:

I would like to share my views and hopefully we and the village of Cohasset will not miss out on an opportunity to improve one of the assets of the village—the South Shore Music Circus.

The Music Circus is in the process of applying for a liquor license. While the availability of cocktails, beer or wine is not, by itself, a necessary condition for an enjoyable evening, it does add to the ambience. Many performances that I have attended and enjoyed allow these beverages. These would include those at Symphony Hall, Boston; Tanglewood; Lincoln Center, New York City; and Ravinia, Highland Park, IL; to name a few.

I urge the residents of Cohasset and the Selectmen to support this request.

Cohasset is perfect place to write from, author says me an enclave of safety. It's nice here. A lot of things I write about are hard. It gives me that safe place to work from. All these issues I deal with are here — they're camouflaged," she noted.

Corey's novel, her first, is a story of healing told through a nine-year-old's eyes. "I was able to do it because I still am nine," she said laughing.

"Children don't have a voice and an adult has to give them a voice," she continued. "I feel very burdened with children. I think that children are incredibly perceptive and intuitive. They're angels and we really need to protect them."

Despite this first major publication, Corey has written short stories and other work on her own for years.

"I need to write. I love it. It's write, or spend a lot of money on therapy — it's cheaper," she said, laughing again.

Corey calls her relationship with her publisher, Algonquin Books of North Carolina, "nurturing."

"It's a misconception that everyone has to have an agent," she said. She would encourage aspiring authors to find a book similar to their style and send their manuscript to that publisher. If that doesn't work, she said to try again and again. "Keep your book in the mail."

Algonquin was the only publishing house Corey pursued. She wrote editor Shannon Ravenal and convinced her to work with her on a novel, developed from several short stories.

Using letters to communicate, the two women worked four years to complete Losing Eddie. Corey said Ravenal helped her maintain the voice of a nine-year-old throughout the text.

"You have to be particularly careful to keep it very true. She helped me keep the voice true," she said.

"It was very gentle," she continued. "I think this relationship is really unusual. There's a real ebb and flow to it," she said.

"It's almost like that with writing, too. You write a while and you do some laundry," she said. Corey works at home and writes around her two-and-a-half year old's schedule.

Four years in the making was evidently worth the wait as reviews from The Washington Post and other papers come raving in. Two film companies are discussing the rights while Algonquin is considering a second printing to fill shelves in Midwestern bookstores where the book has already sold out.

Corey is filling her calendar with promotional appearances, readings and book signings as they arise. Already, she has participated in The Great Lakes Book Convention, where she shared a podium with former hostage Terry Anderson while he was promoting his autobiographical Den of Lions.

One of the greatest pleasures of being recognized is that now, people tell her their stories. "You become a keeper of tales," she said.

But she always knew she was a writer, even without the recognition. "We need too much confirmation in life.

"A famous writer told me before you get published it's the best time of your life," she said. The anonymity allows the author the most creative freedom ever, before outsiders develop expectations or demands, she explained.

Although the plot of the book is not autobiographical, the setting is in the house where Corey grew up. The sixth of seven children, Corey grew up in rural Temperance Vale, New Brunswick, Canada. Storytelling with neighbors and friends was important to her — she got some of her material when she did old ladies' hair in the neighborhood.

"Using that setting it was very easy to jump (into the book's plot)," she said. She said she wanted to depict some difficult issues, particularly poverty, and show how her narrator gradually deals with them and "becomes whole."

Currently, she is working on a sequel to Losing Eddie, which looks at the family five years later, a new book project and a play.

"I just want to do everything. I feel if I get to be 200 there would never be enough time."

Cohasset author, Deborah Joy Corey

DO YOU NEED A WILL?

To answer the question "Who NEEDS a WILL?", it is simpler to respond in the negative; YOU DO NOT NEED A WILL IF YOU INTEND TO DIE WITH NO FAMILY, NO FRIENDS AND NO ASSETS TO BE CONCERNED ABOUT... Obviously, for most of us, this is not the case!

Ensure that your wishes are carried out in the event of a catastrophic illness or even death... Protect yourself as well as those you love!

WHAT YOU WILL NEED:

- Will: Allows you to determine those individuals who receive your property at death. It also allows you to name a personal representative for your estate affairs, appoint a guardian for minor children and set up trusts for your children.
- Health Care Proxy: The appointment of a person you trust to make medical decisions in the event that you are unable to.
- Living Will: A declaration that in the event of a catastrophic illness, you do not want to be kept alive by artificial means.
- Power of Attorney: Naming another person you trust as your "agent" to handle your general financial affairs if you are unable to.

At the Law Office of Alan H. Segal we believe that in today's world every individual should have these basic and necessary documents. Therefore, we offer basic "Will" packages at an affordable price. More importantly, we understand your busy schedule and can produce your Will package within a half hour. All this without sacrificing service and quality!

Our basic Will package includes the four necessary documents mentioned above.

$125 Individual $150 per couple

business notes

Cohasset Savings Bank (NASDAQ:CHTB) reported net income of $208,000 or $.21 per share for the second quarter ended June 30, 1993, compared with $44,000 or $.04 per share for the second quarter of 1992, and recording the eighth successively improving profitable quarter performance.

The results for the second quarter brought 1993 year-to-date earnings to $392,000 or $.39 per share, compared with $356,000 or $.35 per share for the first six months of 1992 when earnings included $300,000 from the cumulative effect of a change in accounting principle.

"All elements in the Bank's operations were strongly positive in the second quarter," Donald E. Bates, president and CEO said. "Interest and dividend income was maintained close to previous levels, and with continued low interest rates, net interest income rose significantly. For the first time in several years, we did not need to add our loan loss reserves with the result that net income, after provisions for loan losses, increased from $495,000 in the first six months of 1992 to $803,000 in the first six months of this year, all of it from operations.

"At the same time, we were able to reduce operating expenses and to reduce the amount of foreclosed real estate."

With most other banks, Cohasset Savings has experienced some loss in term deposits to other investments and is emphasizing the security of bank deposits as against the market fluctuations of mutual funds. Loan demand remains sluggish as the public hesitates to commit to further debt in these still uncertain economic times.

Total assets at June 30, 1993 were $74,719,000 compared with $74,309,000 at December 31, 1992, and stockholders' equity rose from $12,470,000 to $12,781,000 in the same period, maintaining a capital ratio of 17 percent, still the highest among all Massachusetts savings banks.

Cohasset Savings is a 147-year-old community thrift institution serving a popular residential area of Massachusetts' South Shore.

Dwyer and Mullin Real Estate, located on Route 3A, Cohasset, is now affiliated with HomeView, a revolutionary, broker-sponsored computer home search service. HomeView, which is free to buyers, is the first major technology breakthrough in real estate since dial-up multiple listing services (MLS) were introduced 25 years ago. According to Bob Mullin, his company joined HomeView to increase the exposure of its real estate listings. Dwyer and Mullin's Cohasset office serves Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Hingham and Norwell.

After buyers select homes that match their criteria, HomeView arranges appointments with the listing broker for on-site home visits.

UNDERSTANDING WHAT YOU NEED.

"I won't settle for anything less than the best home equity rate."

HELPING YOU MAKE IT HAPPEN.

GREAT RATES ON HOME EQUITY LINES AND LOANS.

If you've been searching for a great deal on home equity credit, look no further than Shawmut Bank. Right now, we're offering home equity rates that are the lowest they've been in years.

Equity Credit Line Prime + 0%
INTRODUCTORY RATE*	CURRENT NON-DISCOUNTED RATE
6.0% APR	7.5% APR

More than just great rates.

You also pay no points, application fees or prepayment penalties with Shawmut Home Equity. And the interest you pay on Shawmut Home Equity may be tax deductible.†

Loan or Line?

If you prefer a fixed monthly payment, a home equity loan may be right for you. Not only will you have the security of always knowing what your payments will be, but with a fixed rate loan, the interest rate will stay the same for the life of the loan.

Five Year Term Fixed Rate Loan
RATE FOR PARTNERSHIP* CUSTOMERS	CURRENT NON-DISCOUNTED RATE
6.5% APR	7.0% APR

At Shawmut, you'll find a variety of credit lines and loans available with a range of terms. Our specialists can help you choose the one that's right for you. For more information stop by your local Shawmut office or call 1-800-SHAWMUT.

Shawmut Bank
KNOW HOW THAT PAYS OFF.

*The Equity CreditLine APR is variable monthly, based on the Wall Street Journal Prime Rate plus 1.5%. The introductory rate will change to Prime Rate plus 1.5% after the first year. The non-discounted APR as of 9/15/93 was 7.5%. The maximum APR over the term of the loan is 18% in CT and MA, 21% in RI. Rates are subject to change. $35 annual membership fee. Property insurance is required. Offer may be withdrawn at any time. New accounts only.
For example, with an APR of 6.5%, a five year Shawmut Equity loan of $10,000 would be repayable in 60 monthly installments of $195.66.

Winter house tour

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset plans a Winter House Tour "reflecting the joys of the holidays" on Wednesday, Dec. 8, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Seven houses will be decorated for the tour and refreshments will be served. Tickets are $15 and are available at the Cohasset Community Center or from Peg Smart, 383-6438.

Funds raised from the tour will be used for high school scholarships and community landscape projects.

Order X-mas wreaths

Place your order for Christmas wreaths and boxwood trees to be made by ladies of the Greek Orthodox Church, Panagia.

Wreaths will also be sold at Cohasset Village Fair on Dec. 4.

Call Jean Syrmopoulos at 383-9071 to order.

Candlelight at Old Ship

The American Reed Trio, made up of Richard Hillmer, oboe; John Miller, bassoon; and Frank Ell, clarinet, will open the 21st annual Candlelight Concert series at Old Ship Meeting House, 90 Main Street in downtown Hingham, Sunday, Nov. 21. This event is free of charge and begins at 4 p.m.

Significant literature exists for reed trios and this one was formed in order to give voice to this music. Compositions included for presentation in the diverse program span several centuries. Included are works by J.S. Bach, Jacques Ibert, Darious Milhaud, Rudolf Maros, and Trygve Madsen. Intimate and exciting, the reed trio permits individual brilliance within an ensemble of sonorous richness which is certain to please any audience.

The trio's featured performers are multi-talented artists sharing extensive academic backgrounds. Currently all three are teaching. Richard Killmer, included among the ranks of America's foremost oboe soloists, and Principal Oboe of the Aspen Festival Orchestra, is Professor of Oboe at the Eastman School of Music. John Miller, Principal Bassoon of the Minnesota Orchestra, is an instructor at the University of Minnesota. Frank Ell, former Principal Clarinet in the Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra, is Music Director of the Swannanoa Chamber Festival in Asheville, N.C., and Professor of Clarinet at Michigan State University.

Great music has been celebrated at Old Ship Candlelight Concerts for 21 years. These concerts are made possible, in part, through generous free will donations from Friends of the Candlelight Concerts. All are welcome.

New art exhibit

JoAnne Chittick's watercolor exhibit, "SALTWATER and COBBLESTONES," is currently on display at the library. This unique collection features spirited interpretations of Cohasset water scenes and Boston's historical landmarks, including individual homes and gardens. Cohasset residents will recognize many harbor scenes and local landmarks which comprise the core of the collection.

Ms. Chittick has been working in watercolor for 12 years. In her animated paintings, she "tries to express the essence of a place—or an association of objects—at a moment in time: the effect of the sky on the ocean, the colors and shapes of flowers and trees, the distinct character of a building, as it involves the interplay of architecture and nature."

On Sunday, Nov. 14 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. there will be an opening reception for the exhibit which will be on display at the library thru January.

This is one of JoAnne Chittick's watercolors which is on display through January at the Paul Pratt Library.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

PRICING YOUR HOUSE RIGHT

QUESTION: What is the best way to put the proper selling price on a home?

ANSWER: The value of your house is not what you think it is – or what the buyer thinks. It is determined chiefly by the location, the neighborhood, and the current market. An overpriced housing sitting on the market for months becomes almost impossible to sell. So first, you must get in line with the realistic market price. Nobody – but nobody – is more acutely aware of the current housing market than your local Realtor. You may be pleasantly surprised to find that you were intending to price your house for less than its fair market value.

Parish visitors' day

Sunday, Nov. 14 is visitor's day at First parish in Cohasset. The membership committee is extending a special invitation to those interested in learning more about Unitarian Universalism to attend the service of worship beginning at 10:30 a.m. in the meeting house on Cohasset Town Common.

The sermon subject for the day will be "A Religion Which Puts Its Fair in You!!" Child care and religious education classes are available in the parish house at 23 North Main St.

The service will be followed by a coffee hour and an opportunity to become acquainted with members of the congregation.

Quincy chief on Pierson

Quincy Police Chief Francis Mullen will be Wigmore Pierson's guest at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 11 on "Pierson to Person" on Channel 3 and 53.

The second segment guest is Robert Bowman, telecommunications consultant, reviewing what's ahead for us as the result of the merger of Telecommunications Cable and Media Technologies.

The public is invited to the studio to view the show each Thursday evening.

For information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Bookstore to host fund-raiser

The Little Harbor Bookstore will host a fund-raiser for the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 17.

On sale will be children's, young adult and adult books, educational toys and games. Refreshments will be served.

A percentage of sales will go to benefit the nursery school enrichment fund. This fund is used to buy special school and playground equipment and toys as well as for school scholarships.

Order T-day pies

Once again, it's time to order your Thanksgiving pies from the Appalachia Service Project volunteers. Your support is needed to help the local teenagers and advisors raise the needed funding for the June of '94 A.S.P. trip. Pumpkin ($7), apple ($7) and pecan ($9) pies will be available.

The Appalachia Service Project is a home repair project in the central Appalachian Mountains. We have enjoyed such strong support from the churches and members of this community and we appreciate this emotional and financial backing. It helps us continue this vital program which not only benefits so many families in Appalachia, but is a wonderful program for the high school students and advisors who volunteer from this south shore community.

Order forms are available at local churches or call 383-0345 or 383-9325 to order by phone. Pies are available on Sunday afternoon Nov. 21 for pick-up at the 2nd Congregational Church or for delivery.

Village fair, Dec. 4

Throughout Cohasset preparations are underway for the Village Fair on Cohasset Common, Saturday, Dec. 4, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. All the churches on the common, in addition to Panagia Greek Orthodox Church and Beechwood Congregational, are working to make this annual event a fun kickoff to the Cohasset holiday season.

At Second Congregational Church the elves are producing an eclectic assortment of items. Handcrafts include everything from tutus and bridal veils to pine cone wreathes, Christmas tree skirts, wooden snowmen and Santas. Plans are underway for an old-fashioned New England Clam Chowder Bar, a food and candy table and special activities for the children.

St. Stephen's Church will again offer its very successful book sale. The committee is now accepting book donations which can be left at the church on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 8 to 11 a.m. and from 2 to 4 p.m. Tapes and CDs as well as books for all

Greenberg to speak

Dr. Steven M. Greenberg, associate physician in neurology in the memory disorders clinic at Brigham and Women's Hospital, will speak on "Alzheimer's Disease: The Current Research," at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 17 at Thaxter Park Community Hall, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham.

Dr. Greenberg, who is also an instructor in neurology at Harvard Medical School, will discuss new developments in AD research, including findings from investigations into potential biological markers. There will be a question and answer period.

The meeting is free and open to the public. Call 749-5417 for information

AARP fair set

The South Shore Chapter #1139 of the American Association of Retired Persons will have its annual fair from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13 at the Sons of Italy Hall, Rte 3A, Hingham.

Items for sale will include crafts, baked goods, jewelry and white elephant. There will also be raffles and door prizes.

Volunteers and donations of goods are needed. Call Kilby Kline at 331-0206 if you can help in some way.

Recital is Sunday, Nov. 14

Don't miss the Organ Recital & Choral Evensong starting at 5 p.m., Sunday Nov. 14, at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

James Busby, organist, and the choir of St. Stephen's, featuring Robert Barney, organist and choirmaster, will perform.

For information, please call the parish office at 383-1083.

Chamber auction set

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is holding an auction beginning with a free franks and beans dinner at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13 at the community center, 3 South Main St.

Money raised through this effort will not only benefit the chamber's activities but also the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corp and the new teen center.

Bridal review planned

The South Shore Country Club will present a bridal preview reception from noon to 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 21.

The reception provides table top displays of all services to enhance a wedding reception. Businesses will be present to display their products and answer questions.

Future brides and members of the wedding party are welcome. Admission is free but reservations must be made by calling 749-1720.

"Advise Me, Mr. Grillo, How Often Should My Orientals Be Cleaned?"

The simple answer is, you need to vacuum your rugs at least once a week and have them professionally cleaned every three to five years.
Cleaning not only brightens your rugs' colors but removes abrasive grit and the spilled foods that attract textile insects!
So it really protects the investment you've made in your rugs.
You'll find all this and more in my booklet on the care of Oriental rugs.
It's filled with important information you can use and it's yours for the asking.
We also offer pick-up and delivery service, or you can use our cash-and-carry service and save 25%.
I'm George Grillo, and we're at 100 Messina Drive, Braintree, 1-800-649-7707.

New hoops at Deer Hill

Thanks to fund-raising and enthusiasm of the Parent School Organization (PSO) and volunteer labor — the Deer Hill School playground has two new sturdy basketball hoops.

The teachers at Deer Hill were in agreement that this addition to the playground would pay dividends in the classroom.

Deer Hill PSO member Donna O'Donnell said the teachers, who requested the new hoops, felt they would help all classes because the children would play better which affects their ability to work better after recess.

The new basketball hoops cost $1,000. Fire-fighter Hap Pompeo installed the posts, and Athletic Director Clark Chatterton, Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg and several fathers helped put up the hoops.

In-service activities

The teachers at the Joseph Osgood School conducted parent conferences Thursday, Nov. 4. These conferences are held twice yearly in order to discuss a child's progress with his/her parent. The times for these meetings are scheduled in advance by the homeroom teacher. If you have not received notice of a conference, please contact your child's teacher.

The Deer Hill and jr./sr. high school faculties used this release day to work on their professional development goals. This process will be ongoing throughout the year, culminating in individual research projects presented to the whole faculty in May. This innovative approach to In-Service time has teachers pursuing a wide variety of topics on early release days.

At Deer Hill, the Adjustment Counselors, Frank Fitzgerald and Ed Leonard, are developing a conflict resolution curriculum for the students. In their designs, students will be taught specific problem solving techniques in order to solve conflicts peacefully. Another area that is being explored is technology. Marge Murphy, the librarian, is training teachers in the use of laser disks, C.D. Roms and the new video editing machine. One such project involves Ray Levine, Frank Deakin, Katherine Whitley, Joann Magoun and Larry Shultz. These fifth grade teachers are learning to use laser disks for whole class teaching. The science unit they are developing is entitled "Solar System Rescue."

The jr./sr. high school faculty used this day to pursue their professional development goals. There is a variety of important projects being conducted by teachers during this valuable time. For example, Ted McDermott, a social studies teacher, is reorganizing the American Studies curriculum. Using his revised format, students will have a greater emphasis on selected critical issues in the history of the United States. Also, Joseph Federico, a foreign language teacher, visited area schools to observe Spanish classes. He is researching the teaching methods, materials and resources used by other school systems to share with his Cohasset colleagues.

Skippers look to .500 season

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

With two games remaining and after a crop of losses against a host of South Shore League teams, Cohasset High has a strong chance at finishing the season with a .500 record.

Judging by their 23-6 drubbing of Charlestown High last Friday afternoon, the Skippers (2-4-1) should provide stiff competition in this Friday night's game against Marian and on Thanksgiving Day against a struggling Hull High club.

Cohasset moved the ball as well as it did in its opening-game win over West Bridgewater as four different players scored for the Skippers.

Leading 7-6 at the half, thanks to a 10-yard touchdown run by Tom Allen and extra-point kick from Scott Theriault, Cohasset exploded in the second half of the game to outscore Charlestown, 16-0.

Quarterback Jeff Littlehale scored on a 15-yard keeper and Theriault followed with the point after in the third. Theriault then booted a 27-yard field goal to give the Skippers a comfortable 17-6 lead.

The defense was able to shut down both Charlestown's running and passing attack. Their only score came when Sean

by Joe & Dave

It was like a bad Alfred Hitchcock movie Friday afternoon at the Division 2 boys state tourney game between Hingham and Franklin at Hingham High School.

First of all it was raining off and on throughout the entire game and the field was covered in mud. The players were falling, their uniforms were covered with dirt and the ink in my notebook was running down every page.

If that wasn't bad enough about 200 seagulls hovered over the field throughout the second half. I kept waiting for the ball to bounce off one of the gulls and bounce into the net. I wonder if the gull would get credit for the goal?

And worst of all, as I went to get some coffee at half-time, I stepped in a nice pile of, um, dog stuff. I slid about a foot and if it wasn't for my new black high top Cons with "React Juice" I would have landed right on my can in front of 100 laughing soccer fans.

Needless to say, Hingham won the game on an ugly goal with 16 seconds left, I went home and expertly cleaned my black high top Cons with "React Juice" and took a long, hot shower.

As the water hit me, I began to mumble, "The horror. The horror."

Once again a high school sports program has become a casualty in a town's budget woes.

Holbrook will not have winter or spring sports unless more money can be found.

It used to be the only thing a high school player had to worry about was their performance on the field.

Now these athletes have to fork over a user fee, which runs near $100 in some towns, and also go before town officials and residents with their hats in their hand at budget hearings and town meetings looking for money to pay for uniforms and bus rides.

Town officials and school officials are the bad guys in this instance. These so-called leaders should plan ahead and prioritize what is important to the residents. If they don't, they will end up slitting their own throats.

If I were considering a move to Holbrook to raise a family and learned the high school sports program was being gutted like a blue fish, I would move to another town that had sports. Not that playing sports is everything, but I think students should have the option of playing or not. What's next textbooks?

In the end, the people of Holbrook will be voting with their feet. And they will be walking, right out of town.

Apologies go out in a MAJOR way to the Cohasset boys' soccer team and the headline on the front page of last week's edition, which incorrectly identified the tournament squad as the "Lady Skippers." The first thing I could think of after I was revived with an ammonia tablet was to hang low, dye my hair blond and assume another identity somewhere in Guam. Realizing that would be the next challenge.

Ropes course is more than a climb

The underlying idea behind the various physical challenges the course has to offer is for the members of the group to work together to achieve their goals through communication, team work and trust among one another.

Various classes in the school have utilized the course, as well as several organizations including youth groups from Boston, church groups and teachers of an array of disciplines.

"The purpose is to help groups achieve whatever goals they have," said Jack Buckley, director of the alternative program. "The individuals realize they are being supported by other people and are safe.

"We provide people with a vehicle to challenge themselves."

As the elements progress, Buckley also hopes "an encouraging atmosphere" is created, which allows individuals to talk about their fears and what goals they have on the course, whether it is to make it halfway up the rope ladder or an exhilarating ride across the zip line.

Buckley said many people have misconceptions about rope courses and the ideas behind them. Many believe if they show up they'll be obligated to participate in an element they simply do not want to do.

"It's challenge by choice," said Buckley. "Individuals can choose their own level of challenge."

Another misconception, which goes hand-in-hand with the first, is the belief by several individuals that they're the only ones afraid of certain elements and fear embarrassing themselves. To alleviate their fears, Buckley starts them off with games, loosening up the group before to moving to the physical challenges. An individual can sit out of any activity he or she wishes with no ridicule at all.

Renee Prisble, was working the bolea for one group member as he climbed. The bolea is a protective rope that is tied around the person's waist. If the individual slips while climbing and falls, the bolea is there to stop them from hitting the ground. Little slack is given so the person falls just a few feet before the line becomes taut.

Prisble has worked in the ropes project for the past year. She remembers completing the Postman's Walk the first time on the course. The element entails the individual walking on a cable with another cable above to hold on to.

"I remember how happy I was to be boleaed down," Prisble said as she tied a secure knot in a rope. "I was very nervous at first, but it's something you get the hang of."

Dolph, meanwhile, was preparing for another attempt at the rope ladder leading to the platform. Although he's not especially afraid of heights, he admitted he was a little anxious about climbing the ladder.

"There's still a little nervousness," Dolph said.

Still, he wasn't going to give in to the ladder and his goal.

"I'll try to get up there."

A couple of scraped legs were hardly enough to stand between Dolph and his goal. After all, he is an adventurer a little too severe, I calmed down and gathered myself before ripping my phone cord out of the office wall. Funny, but I haven't received any complaints thus far over the phone.

Again, I apologize to the players and head coach Keith Clark. There was no harm intended.

Jemilah Afshar, Chloe Chittick and Nikki Petersen were named tri-captains for the '94 Cohasset girls' field hockey team during last Tuesday night's end of the season party at Friday's in Norwell. Head coach Debby Bostwick presented a number of awards to the varsity and JV players for their performances on and off the field this season.

The awards included; Most Consistent Player: Faye Menis, Coach's Award: Chloe Chittick, Most Goals: Cilla Goff with six, Sportsmanship: Nikki Petersen, Most Improved Player: Jo Hurley, Most Effective Drive: Katie Norris and Julie Goode.

A special award was presented to Lauren Almedia for completing her first full season after being forced to miss parts of three others due to injury and sickness.

For the JV squad, Liz Good and Lauren Dooley won the Most Offensive Player award, while Katie Meninger copped Most Defensive Player honors.

Other award winners included: Most Improved Player: Elizabeth Hill, Most Consistent: Emily Collins, Coach's Award: Lauren Rosano and the Sportsmanship Award went to Courtney Goff.

Kate Ridge and Bostwick wanted to thank the parents for the bouquet of flowers for the team and a special thanks to Mrs. Hill for preparing the Pep Rally dinner. Bostwick also wanted to thank those parents, students and fans who attended the Skippers' games and supported the team through the season.

Entertainment Update: Sportscaster/Actor/Singer, Scott Wahle of Hingham was at center stage again — make that center ice — when he belted out the national anthem prior to a Boston Bruins game last week.

Wahle, who won positive reviews for his performance in the musical "Oklahoma", won't make hockey fans forget Rene Rancourt, but his rendition was far better than Rosanne Arnold's mockery of the anthem during a San Diego Padres game, two years ago.

Thinking ahead to the high school season hockey season, it would be a nice gesture on Wahle's part if he were to perform Francis Scott Key's piece at the start of a Hingham High game, or for that matter any one of the high school sporting events. You can bet the Hingham sports community would appreciate seeing its hometown celebrity at a local game. An invite for Wahle to perform should be drafted immediately.

Gold — it's the world's most treasured metal today, as it has been through the centuries. Why? Well, consider that gold alone combines the qualities of lustrous beauty, extreme rarity and ease of workability. Gold can also be remelted and used over & over. Imagine the gold you own may once have adorned Cleopatra!

Bring us your broken chains, your 1/2 pairs of earrings or whatever you're just tired of wearing and let us show you how we can melt it and create a new piece of jewelry designed by you or by us with your guidance.

Sharks split two in Metropolitan League battle

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

The Bay State Sharks' Squirt-Minor team played two very important games recently and split the decisions in a battle for sole possession of first place in the Metropolitan Boston Hockey League.

The Sharks' first opponent was last year's league champion, the Minuteman Flames. Fans on both sides were treated to one of the best hockey games they'd ever seen. This was Metro hockey at its best; hard nosed, hardhitting and fast paced. The offense looked great with a lot of sharp passing and skating, but this game was won with defense and goaltending. Both were awesome.

Stoughton's Gabe Winer was in net for this one and faced 26 shots. Gabrial came up with big saves when he had to and a couple were of the spectacular variety.

The big thing was that Gabe gave up very few second shots. The few rebounds he didn't control were handled by the Sharks' defense. Matt Bourassa (New Bedford), Kenny Roche (So. Boston), Ryan Hatch (Hanover) and Scott Sparks (Norwood), all did a great job in front of their own net.

The defense also got involved at the other end of the rink. Hatch broke up the Flames' breakout play and Scotty Sparks put the loose puck in front of the Minuteman net. Scott McGinn of Hingham popped it in for a 1-0 Sharks' lead. A few minutes later the Sharks made it 2-0 when Bourassa made a nice play at the right point to keep the puck in the Flames' zone and dumped it in the corner.

Greg Osborne of Stoughton stickhandled behind the Flames' net and passed out front to Cohasset's Brian Lewis for the score.

The next goal came with the Sharks on the power play. Nick Dunn of Marstons Mills drew the puck back to Kenny Roche. Kenny passed to Greg Osborne who one-timed a shot on goal. Nice save, but Nick Dunn slapped home the rebound for a 3-0 lead.

The Minutemen climbed back into the game with two unanswered goals in the second period. The score remained 3-2 through most of the tight-checking third period.

There were a number of solid body-checks during the game, but none were better than those thrown by Nick Dunn, Hatch and Hanover's Chris Coady. Chris turned in another solid game as did Garret Daigler of Hingham. Both played on the Sharks' checking line.

With everyone on the edge of their seats and time running out, Dave Sagesse of Hingham and Greg Osborne combined to get the puck out front to Hingham's Pat Devine for a very big goal with only 59 seconds left. Scotty McGinn got his second goal of the game 22 seconds later when he popped in Brian Lewis' rebound. Osborne also assisted on this one as well for his fourth assist of the game. Final: Sharks 5, Minutemen Flames, 2.

The Sharks next faced the South Shore Kings. What a difference a day makes. One thing you never do is spot a good team like the Kings a three-goal lead, which is exactly what the Sharks did. The Sharks got beat in every facet of the game in the first period. It was starting to look like a blowout. Then the character of this Sharks' team began to show, as the boys started working harder.

With the Sharks storming the Kings' net, Osborne tucked one in after a lot of hard work by McGinn and Lewis and a nice play at the point to keep the play alive by Hatch. Then Roche (So. Boston) took a pass from Bourassa and made a pretty end-to-end rush and finished with a wrist shot to the five-hole.

Even when the Kings answered with two goals of their own to run the score to 5-2, the Sharks didn't quit. Roche and Brian Boyle of Hingham assisted on a goal by Devine. McGinn passed in front to Osborne. "Thumper" took the shot and South Boston's Bobby Noonan popped in the rebound.

The Kings struck back to make it 6-4 late in the third period, but still the determined Sharks did not give up. The strong defensive work of Sparks and Hingham's Garret Daigler, as well as the backchecking by Coady and the goaltending by Hingham's Johnny Lynch, stopped any further damage.

The Sharks pulled their goalie for the extra skater and scored again. When Boyle scored off Dunn's rebound and a nice pass from David Sagesse, it was a squirm time for the Kings.

Unfortunately, time ran out before the Sharks could do it again. No matter, the Sharks did something more important than win a hockey game. They demonstrated the qualities that make a good team a great team: pride, discipline, teamwork and determination. The boys learned there's no shame in losing when you've done your best. Final score: Kings 6, Sharks 5. The Sharks are currently 7-1-1.

Skippers look to .500 season

Brown weaved his way through the kickoff unit on a 90-yard scamper. Cohasset stopped the two-point conversion, though, and that was all the scoring the Skippers saw against them.

Chris Rolandelli added an insurance touchdown in the fourth when he plunged through the Charlestown line from the 1.

The win is Cohasset's first since opening day. The Skippers lost four in a row before tying Sharon two weeks ago, 7-7.

The Skippers play Friday night at home (7 p.m.) against Marian, then travel to Hull for a 10 a.m. start on Thanksgiving Day. They are idle the weekend of Nov. 20-21.

Ski lessons offered at the Rec

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct Blue Hill ski lesson registration Thursday, Nov. 18, at the recreation office, Cohasset Town Hall, between 3 and 4 p.m. and again from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Registration forms must be signed by a parent or guardian for participation in this five-week program. Beginner through advanced level instruction is available for children and youth ages seven and older. Lessons are scheduled to begin Thursday, Jan. 6, 1994 and meet for five consecutive weeks through Thursday, Feb. 3. The bus will leave each week from town hall parking lot at 3:30 p.m. and return from Blue Hills at about 6:45 p.m.

The fee for the ski lesson and transportation for the five weeks is $95 and checks should be made payable to Town of Cohasset. Those participants who require equipment rentals may rent at Blue Hills. The cost for the rental package is $40 per person. The rental fee can be included in the check for program fee. This is the 17th year that ski lessons at Blue Hills have been offered through the Cohasset Recreation Department and over the years hundreds of youngsters have had the opportunity to learn how to ski or improve their technique.

The Grand Tour

with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Vivien Bobo so enjoys her view of David and Kelly Calhoun's home at 2 Sheldon Rd., she wanted to share it with the rest of the Cohasset Mariner readers. The home is painted tan with black shutters and white trim with a pristine white fence bordering the front yard. Not long ago, White Impatiens stood in pots near the front door while yellow and russet mums brightened the sweeping corner near the gravel drive that is home to a lovely black, cast-iron mailbox. A tall white fence with cascading English Ivy borders the driveway. While photographing the home, I was invited inside for a tour and discovered behind the tall fence is a concealed brick patio. Passing through the gate, and entering is this beautifully enclosed area with tall evergreens and English Ivy, you experience the feeling of entering a "Secret Garden." The interior of the home was equally as enchanting — just a lovely, beautifully and tastefully done restoration that was obviously a labor of love by the new owners.

Future of the antique boat house floated

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Once the metal factory buildings are dismantled and taken away from the Hagerty Property on Parker Avenue — Cohasseters will get a better look at what they've bought.

The antique house that was used for the showroom and offices of Cohasset Colonials and a boat house will stay behind on the two-plus acres voters authorized the town to purchase at the March annual town meeting.

The Government Island Study Committee met Monday to grapple with the fate of the boat house which was moved from the Government Island pier to the Hagerty property probably in the 1930s, members said.

The final decision whether or not to move the structure will be left up to town meeting voters, who could be asked to appropriate up to $5,000 to pay for

River protection efforts are noted

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

After Mark Trask saw the remains of an old bicycle at the bottom of the Bound Brook, he was moved to take action to protect the stream's wildlife from the carelessness of mankind. Pollution in the river is threatening to decimate the fish population, said the owner of Trask Tackle in Scituate.

"When we first opened our shop, it was on the brook on 3A in Cohasset. We used to watch the herring jump the falls (at the fish ladder between the Bound Brook and the Aaron River)," Trask said.

"After eight years (it went) from a thick bountiful herring run to no fish this year."

This fall, the Alewife Herring population was stranded in the reservoir when low rainfall cut off their access to the fish ladder. Because the Alewife is crucial to the survival of other fish in the area, Hingham resident Mike Daly began to single-handedly portage the fish with a bucket.

Liquor license sought

Music Circus turns up the volume on lobbying effort

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

South Shore Music Circus officials came forward with information about 1993 earnings and grant recipients as it vies for local support of a liquor license application. Music Circus Manager Vince Longo said that the license would increase sales and make the arena more competitive with metropolitan-Boston's other theaters.

With net earnings in excess of $3 million, the not-for-profit organization gave about $150,000 to area charities this year. It sold 83,000 tickets compared to last year's 82,000.

"It's a hard number, but it's so irrelevant because the acts cost more," Longo said. "The end result of those sales was about the same as last year's gross revenue."

SSMC is managed together with the Cape Cod Melody Tent by the South Shore Playhouse Associates. According to Playhouse Associates Chairman Bruce Tuthill, the Cape Cod Melody Tent turned a profit for the first time since the organization bought the business about four years ago.

"We were profitable on both locations," Tuthill said. "Cohasset made more money," he added.

Longo said the profit was attributable to budget cuts, not increased sales. The two performance houses

New playground director is named

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Paulina A. McDonald has officially taken over the reins as the the new "Summer Playground" director.

The recreation commission appointed the Hingham resident to the position Tuesday. McDonald replaces Ted Carroll who recently stepped down after serving 7 years in the post.

Commissioners also appointed Rebecca Bates-McArthur as age-group director for the five-to-seven year olds in the popular day-camp program.

Both women are graduates of Bridgewater State College and hold teaching degrees.

McDonald, who has completed four years with the Eviction hearing slated

Frank Carey, owner of Mill River Marine Railway on Border Street, faces another eviction hearing Dec. 2 in Quincy District Court.

The 16,000 square-foot parcel, which houses Carey's business, was sold recently for $350,000 to the president of Entertainment Cinemas of Stoughton who reportedly wants to build a residence at the site.

At a prior eviction hearing, the judge found in favor of Carey.

When asked about the possible outcome of a second eviction hearing, Carey's lawyer, Peter Eleey of Quincy, would only say "we have a good case to present to the court."

Recently local residents and fishermen appealed to selectmen to help save the historic site which also provides a practical service.

Right on the money

The recreation department is moving closer to being 100 percent self-sufficient, officials say.

With a total budget of about $66,000, the department will return more than $63,000 to the town's general fund through program receipts and sticker fees this year.

With increased revenue production through more programs next year, the recreation department should be 100 percent financially self-sustaining, Director Jack Worley said.

Worley explained that all programs run through a self-supporting system of collecting enough in fees to offset the cost of the program and to also contribute money back to the general fund to cover the department's administrative costs and maintenance and lighting of facilities.

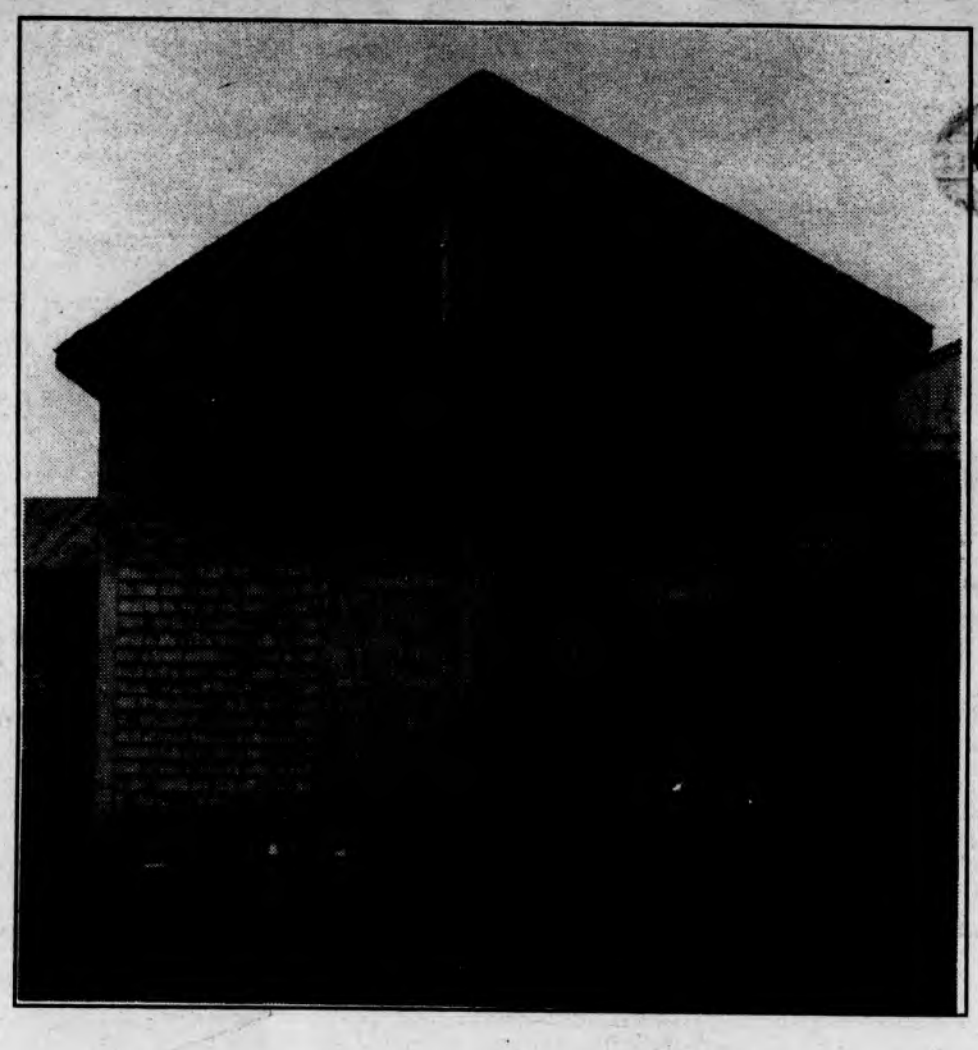
The recreation commission opposes increasing the administrative service fees more than the current 10 percent charged to sports camps and programs because it would result in higher program fee charges.

"This is a concept we do not feel represents the best interests of the taxpayers," Worley said.

Speeding tickets up

With additional manpower provided by newly sworn-in Patrolman Jeff Treanor, the Cohasset Police Department has been able to use more radar to spot vehicles exceeding the speed limit on town streets.

Over the past two weeks, police have written 30 speeding tickets on S. Main, N. Main, Sohier and Forest Streets, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.



Here is the antique post-and-beam constructed boat house on the old Hagerty property off Parker Avenue. Town officials are trying to decide whether or not to move the structure to Government Island or secure it and leave it where it is until a suitable site is found.

Traffic survey planned

Norfolk County engineers will survey traffic characteristics on various locations on Atlantic Ave., Beechwood St., Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Hull St., N. Main St., Ripley Rd., S. Main St., Summer St., and Nichols Rd. Work will start in the next few weeks, engineers said.

There will be no inconvenience to the motoring public as data is accumulated from pneumatic impulses in small rubber hoses across the roadway which is then transformed by computer into usable tabulated printouts of the results.

Plans to demolish Hagerty buildings put on hold

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

At the request of Selectman Michael H. Sullivan, the conservation commission voted Tuesday to continue its public hearing about the demolition and removal of certain structures at 38 Parker Ave. until the first week of December.

The Parker Ave. site, known as the Hagerty property, was the site of Cohasset Colonials, a furniture kit manufacturing company. Prior to beginning the production of furniture, Hagerty manufactured rowing shells and skiffs.

The waterfront property's close proximity to the salt marsh is the why the conservation commission is involved in the demolition and removal process.

The site contains about seven buildings which are an odd mixture of modern sheet metal structures and wooden buildings of historical significance.

The town plans to level the metal structures at the site within the next four months in order to insure that the work is completed during a time when the saltmarsh is dormant. Although town officials had planned to utilize volunteer labor, the job will now be put out to bid.

Sullivan was concerned about starting the bidding process without first developing specifications consistent with conservation concerns.

Commission members were reluctant, however, to issue any specific orders of conditions for the project until it is determined what type of equipment will be used.

The salt marsh must be protected and no debris will be allowed in the marsh, commissioners said. No heavy equipment will be allowed in the marsh and the site must be cleaned up on a daily basis. The commission may also require that the contractor utilize a rubberized or fiber matting to cover the marsh during the work. One of the metal structures presents particular problems because it is standing directly over the marsh.

Abutter Russell Bonetti, who sits on the Hagerty and Government Island Study Committees, said some citizens have expressed an interest in acquiring some of the metal structures. With this in mind, the successful bidder may be someone interested in removing some of the structures for use at another location.

Plans for the use of the property after the demolition and removal of the metal structures is uncertain at this time. Whether or not the Hagerty showroom and office building will be used by town organizations is unclear. It is expected that the town will plant a grassy area directly on the waterfront and may also create some limited parking space for the nearby boat launch and possible picnic area. This is a multi-phase project with the first phase being the demolition and removal of the metal buildings. Once this has been accomplished, the town will then be able to determine its next course of action.

The Hagerty committee meets at 7:30 p.m., tonight (Nov. 18) at Town Hall. The meeting is open to the public.

Future of the antique boat house floated

the cost of moving the boat house and building a foundation for it at a new site. The Government Island Study Committee will recommend to selectmen that the building be saved and either left where it is and temporarily boarded up or moved to Government Island to the right of the circular turnaround at the sailing club.

Returning the boat house to the Government Island pier, where it originally stood, was ruled out in deference to local fishermen who use the pier for lobster pots and to tie their boats up against. The boat house would also be too exposed to the weather if relocated to the pier, committee member Noel Ripley said.

A local rowing group has expressed interest in using the building. If left where it is, committee members said it would be possible to build a ramp from the boat house to the water.

The post-and-beam structure is in excellent shape, Ripley said.

But Ripley stressed that no one group should be "married" to the building and be allowed to renovate it and harm its historical features.

Town meeting voters gave the okay last March for the town to purchase the Hagerty property for $450,000. A resident, who requests anonymity, donated $50,000 toward the purchase and the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a private non-profit group, has also donated $50,000. Cohasset Colonials, a furniture kit company which had been at the site for half a century, recently relocated to Hingham.

Area river protection efforts are noted

"Alewife Herring is one of the least glamorous fish in the ocean, but one of the most important fish because of it's place on the food chain," Trask said.

Salt-water cod, bluefish, striped bass and others feed on the herring population as it migrates from salt to fresh water and back again.

However, Daly stopped the assisted migration effort when a state biologist Ken Reebok told him the fish would survive in the reservoir as long as the winter freeze doesn't last too long, according to Trask.

Instead, Trask and Daly joined a handful of other South Shore residents to form the fledgling Bound Brook Association and officially adopt the brook. At the same time, the Gulf River Association, in existence for several years, officially adopted the adjoining Gulf River through the state-sponsored Adopt-a-Stream program last week.

Marie Van Dusen, Riverways Coordinator of the Massachusetts Waterways Program, commended the efforts of both associations when she awarded the two Adopt-a-Stream certificates at a Gulf River Association meeting Nov. 10.

The Bound Brook Association plans to use the Adopt-a-Stream educational programs to promote environmental protection on the stream. Official participation in Adopt-a-Stream also makes the brook eligible for state funding for small boat launches, according to Van Dusen.

GULF RIVER PLANS IMPROVEMENTS

The Gulf River Association may take advantage of state funding to build a small boat launch for kayaks, canoes and small sailboats next year. If any of the land along the Gulf River is public, the state can fund the entire project, Van Dusen said.

"We think as an association we have an obligation to make the river accessible to the public," Hartshorne said.

Increased signage and buoys to help enforce the river's six-knot speed limit are on the agenda for next summer, Hartshorne added. This fall, the Association plans to use part of its $3,700 in accumulated dues to fund a high school research project to look for metal-based contaminants in the river.

Although there could be industrial pollution in the Gulf River, Hartshorne said that its general condition was suitable for swimming, boating and fishing.

"The Gulf River is in very good shape," Hartshorne said.

Additional river protection could be granted through the River Protection Act, now in the Massachusetts legislature, Van Dusen said. The seven-year-old draft bill is currently in the House Ways and Means Committee and will likely come up for vote by the end of the year.

If passed, the law would require new construction to be set back 150-feet from any creek, with a business-district exemption to allow a 25-foot setback. Cranberry growers would still be allowed to cultivate in streams.

Van Dusen said that driveways and septic systems closer to the river allow contaminated runoff to enter the river.

Local conservation or planning boards would be authorized to enforce the code.

Van Dusen got involved with river protection seven years ago as a private citizen when she wanted to protect a creek running behind her home.

She found that without a lawyer or a surveyor, she could create a conservation restriction zone using the existing property lines. Although the conservation zone provides development protection, the River Protection Act requires a setback without establishing the zone.

Title-V is a mixed bag for local conservationists

Members of the local non-profit Gulf River Association found themselves on both sides of the Title V issue last week in Cohasset.

The state has been trying to implement new regulations restricting dangerous septic systems which are hazardous to the water supply. The resulting code changes would require many Cohasset residents to upgrade their cesspools and restrict new building near the coast or wetlands.

While Gulf River Association members by definition profess their support for the river's well-being, many of them are riverside residents, now faced with the possibility of costly home improvements. The Gulf River lies between Scituate and Cohasset and flows from the Bound Brook to the entrance to Cohasset Harbor.

"I'm obviously of two minds. I live by the river and I want to see the river protected as much as I can...but a lot of these homes have cesspools," said Jim Spelman.

Spelman is joined by several South Shore residents concerned about the expense of the upgrading septic systems.

Gulf River Association members attended a question-and-answer session with Riverways Coordinator Maria Van Dusen last week to learn how Title V affected them.

All cesspools in the state would have to be removed and replaced with septic systems. Those septic systems the state terms substandard would have to be replaced, and pumping and maintenance

DO YOU NEED A WILL?

To answer the question "Who NEEDS a WILL?", it is simpler to respond in the negative; YOU DO NOT NEED A WILL IF YOU INTEND TO DIE WITH NO FAMILY, NO FRIENDS AND NO ASSETS TO BE CONCERNED ABOUT... Obviously, for most of us, this is not the case!

Ensure that your wishes are carried out in the event of a catastrophic illness or even death... Protect yourself as well as those you love!

WHAT YOU WILL NEED:

- Will: Allows you to determine those individuals who receive your property at death. It also allows you to name a personal representative for your estate affairs, appoint a guardian for minor children and set up trusts for your children.
- Health Care Proxy: The appointment of a person you trust to make medical decisions in the event that you are unable to.
- Living Will: A declaration that in the event of a catastrophic illness, you do not want to be kept alive by artificial means.
- Power of Attorney: Naming another person you trust as your "agent" to handle your general financial affairs if you are unable to.

At the Law Office of Alan H. Segal we believe that in today's world every individual should have these basic and necessary documents. Therefore, we offer basic "Will" packages at an affordable price. More importantly, we understand your busy schedule and can produce your Will package within a half hour. All this without sacrificing service and quality!

Our basic Will package includes the four necessary documents mentioned above.

$125 Individual $150 per couple

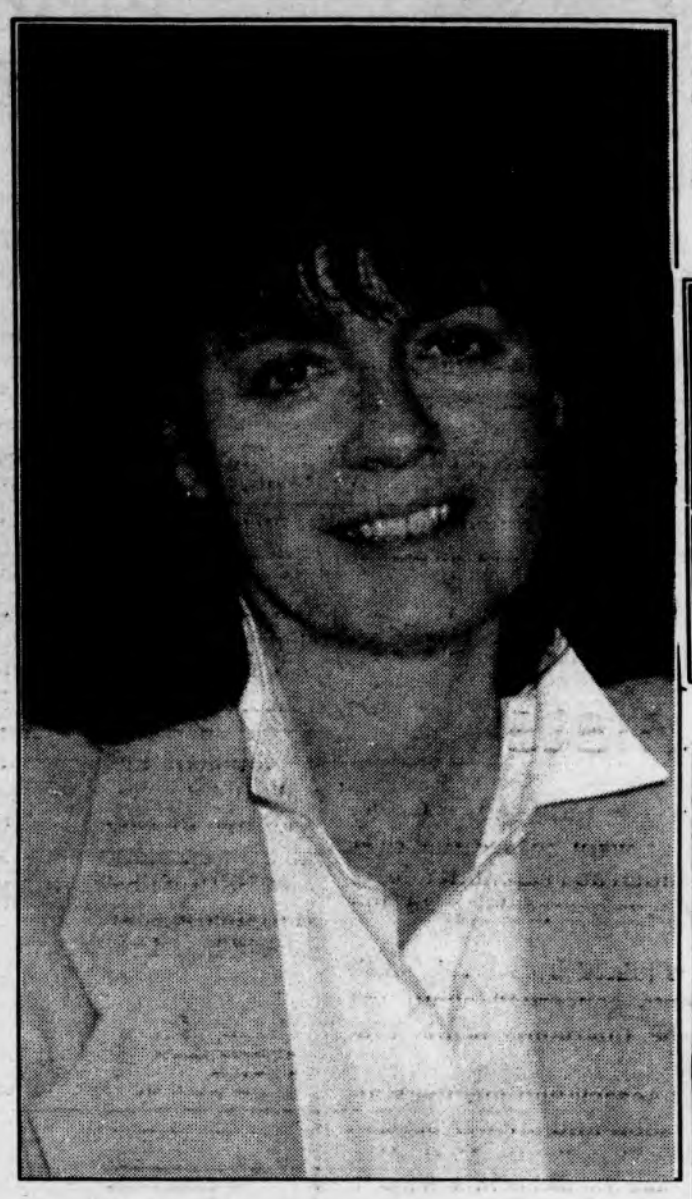
Maureen Jerz



Name: Maureen Jerz

Occupation: Mother, medical technologist, and PSO president.

Best day of your life: I have two best days: the day each of my children was born.

Most embarrassing moment: Falling over a fire hydrant on Charles Street on my way to work one morning. I was so busy chatting that I didn't see it!

Goal: To learn something new each day.

Favorite season: Fall. The cool, crisp weather makes you want to do things.

Best vacation: In 1979, our honeymoon in Lake Tahoe.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving. It has all the family tradition without all the hype of Christmas.

Pet peeve: Intolerance.

Favorite book: "To Kill a Mockingbird," by Harper Lee.

Favorite movie: "Gone With the Wind."

Biggest worry: That the world won't be a better place when our children are grown.

Favorite place: I'm a North Shore girl: Rockport, Massachusetts.

Favorite TV show: "Murphy Brown."

Favorite junk-food: Twinkies.

Person you'd most like to meet: My grandparents: they all passed away before I had the chance to know them.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Paula Dickinson recently asked that we feature the gardens at the home of Reza and Susan Tehranian at 288 Fair Oaks Lane. The warm temperatures this week were reminiscent of summer and so is this photograph! Just a few weeks ago, the border in front of the house swept into a magnificent planting alongside the driveway. Yellow and red Dahlias, Celosia cockscomb, red and blue Salvia, orange and yellow zinnias, white alyssum, artemisia, red and white begonias, blue ageratum, roses, and pink, red, white and orange impatiens created a riot or color. This was really a spectacular planting. Makes you hanker for spring! With the holiday season upon us, please call me today with those unique 'Cohasset' touches that catch your eye around town.

Holiday tea set

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its holiday tea at noon Tuesday, Nov. 23 at Walton Rogers Hall, St. Stephen's Church. Garden club presidents from the South Shore district will be special guests of the club.

Tish Grinnell, charter member and past president of the community garden club, will present decorations for a family Christmas.

Winter house tour

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset plans a Winter House Tour "reflecting the joys of the holidays" on Wednesday, Dec. 8, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Seven houses will be decorated for the tour and refreshments will be served. Tickets are $15 and are available at the Cohasset Community Center or from Peg Smart, 383-6438.

Funds raised from the tour will be used for high school scholarships and community landscape projects.

Order X-mas wreaths

Place your order for Christmas wreaths and boxwood trees to be made by ladies of the Greek Orthodox Church, Panagia.

Wreaths will also be sold at Cohasset Village Fair on Dec. 4.

Call Jean Syrmopoulos at 383-9071 to order.

Newcomers party planned

The Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club is holding its holiday party Saturday, Dec. 4. There will be a raffle of gifts donated by local merchants.

A holiday cookie exchange is planned for Tuesday, Dec. 7. Members will bring cookies to exchange and sample. Child care will be available.

In addition to monthly meetings and special parties the club offers a variety of activities including a book group, bridge, gourmet dinner, needlepoint, lunch bunch and tot's play groups.

All new residents of Scituate and Cohasset or residents experiencing a change in life style are invited to join.

For information call Bonnie at 383-0643.

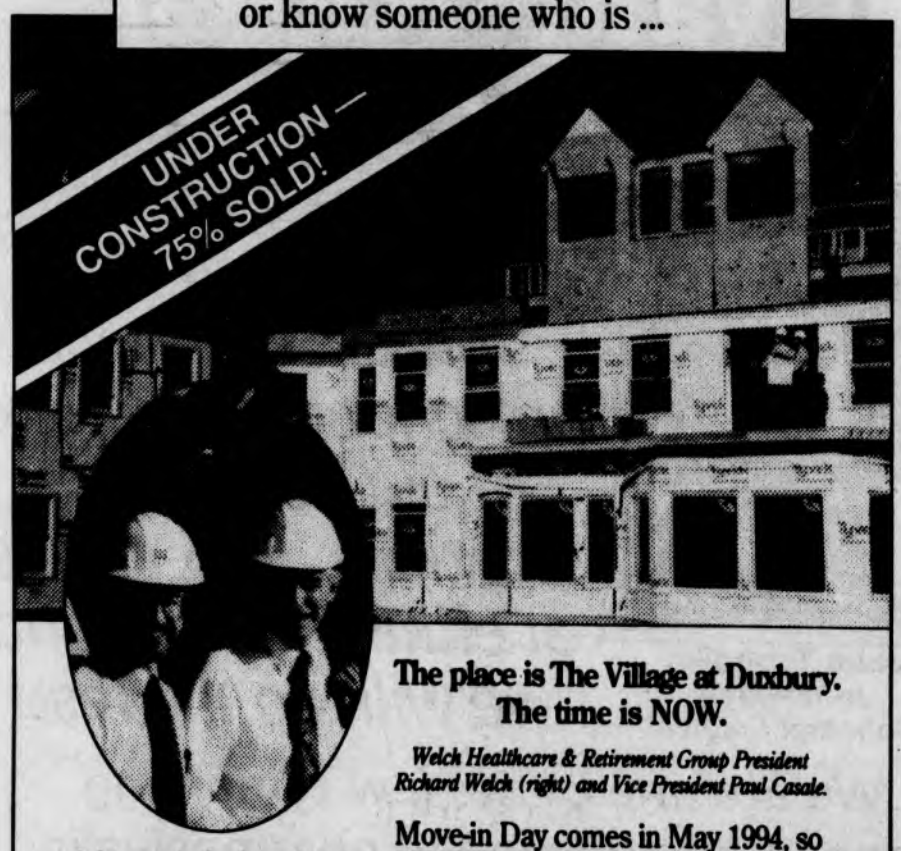
If you are 65 or better, or know someone who is ...



The place is The Village at Duxbury. The time is NOW.

Move-in Day comes in May 1994, so right now is the best time to reserve a home at The Village, a cooperative senior living community on the South Shore.

A project of the locally based, family-owned Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, The Village benefits from our hands-on attention. That means meeting the highest quality standards — and translates to more value for your investment dollar.

Call today 617-934-9744 or 800-696-9744 to tour our information center and model. Don't delay—choice locations are limited!

records would be strictly enforced. All septic tanks constructed before 1978 would be subject to an inspection which could involve excavation.

Homeowners who live near wetlands or coastal zones, real estate agents and developers have openly opposed the regulations, saying that they are too restrictive and would rely too heavily on health agents.

But Van Dusen said that the Title V revision would benefit riverside residents. By regulating building near waterways, the law would help to prevent human waste from seeping into the streams.

"Cesspools pollute groundwater supplies and habitats. Title V hopes to change it all for the better," Van Dusen said.

Title V is still in a public comment period until the end of November. The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) will decide on the regulations by the end of the year and the new regulations will be enforced by local health agents.

"This is your chance to look at these proposals and say, 'how it is going to make my river a better river?' " Van Dusen told the group.

"Advise Me, Mr. Grillo, How Often Should My Orientals Be Cleaned?"

The simple answer is, you need to vacuum your rugs at least once a week and have them professionally cleaned every three to five years.
Cleaning not only brightens your rugs' colors but removes abrasive grit and the spilled foods that attract textile insects!
So it really protects the investment you've made in your rugs.
You'll find all this and more in my booklet on the care of Oriental rugs.
It's filled with important information you can use and it's yours for the asking.
We also offer pick-up and delivery service, or you can use our cash-and-carry service and save 25%.
I'm George Grillo, and we're at 100 Messina Drive, Braintree, 1-800-649-7707.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ Steven A. Nielsen, M.D., a new ophthalmologist with Lambert Eye Center of 100 Congress Street, Quincy, and 99 Derby St., Hingham, has joined the active medical staff of Quincy Hospital.

In addition to general eye care, Dr. Nielsen has some specialized skills. He deals with pediatric ophthalmology, eye trauma, plastic surgery, and does a surgical procedure known as Radial Keratotomy. He has written a number of articles that have been published in various scientific journals and magazines. Dr. Nielsen is accepting new patients and can be reached in Quincy at 4715665 and in Hingham at 749-5666.

Dr. Nielsen resides in our own Cohasset with his wife Diane and their four children Tyler, Stephanie, Jennifer and Julianne.

❑ There is another "new" professional in our midst, we send our hearty congratulations to Lynne Barry, who recently passed the Massachusetts Bar Exam!!

Everyone knows how difficult that is, and you can bet that Lynne's parents, Paul and Edna Barry, are mighty proud of her! As are all of us.

❑ You must have noticed how I often "plug" the Cohasset Food Pantry. I read a great idea in one of the magazines that will enable you to do your part easily. All of the large supermarkets are featuring "buy one, get one free", right? Well, put the free items in a bag, and at the end of the month you can deliver two or three bags of useful supplies to the Pantry without making a dent in your food budget!

❑ If you haven't seen Mary Grassie "around town" recently, it is because she is being rehabilitated at Colonial Rehab.

Mary took a nasty fall recently, we sure hope that she is on the mend as she reads this. Why not send her a card, she is in Room 249 and would love to hear from all of her Cohasset friends.

❑ Troop 28 and Pack 38 send their deepest sympathy to Cub master Jeff Forsdick for the recent death of his mother, Kay Forsdick.

Although Kay had been living on the Cape for some time, tons of us remember her fondly, she was quite a woman!

Teo Abruzzese enjoys the preschool story hour at the Paul Pratt Library. For more library news, please see page. 16.

Horizon Mental Health Services, Inc. manages the Quincy Heights Center for Emotional Health, and over 50 other programs throughout the United States. In June of 1993, Hannon was named Regional Clinician of the Year for Horizon's Eastern Region, which qualified her to be nominated for the national award. She was chosen over three other regional winners, from the California, Texas and Midwest regions.

As a social worker for three years at Quincy Heights, Hannon was honored for a diverse range of outstanding skills in working with geriatric patients and their families, including individual and group therapy. She was also honored for her interviewing, assessment and diagnostic skills.

Hannon's superb marketing and public relations work on behalf of the Center was also recognized. Best of all, she lives in Cohasset!!

❑ Speaking of how lucky we are to have all of these fine people living in Cohasset, add another wonderful gentleman to the list! Ron Rawson!! Ron was just elected president of the South Shore Arts Center, and you can bet that he will do a superb job!! Whatever Mr. Rawson does, it is done to perfection. Watch the master at work and see what wonderful things he will do for the Art Center.

❑ Cohasset lost three fine men last week, it is hard to believe that it will ever be the same. Bernie Mulcahy, a man that no one will ever forget. He had wit, charm and knew everyone, a legend in his own time with a great family. John Pattison, another lifelong resident of Cohasset, known by all! He was a fisherman, and one of his claims to fame was the outstanding chowder he used to make.. wow, did he know how to run a clambake! He could always make you smile. And, James "Rozo" Rosano, there wasn't a person who met him who didn't adore him. All three men will be sorely missed, and we extend our deep sympathies to their families.

❑ If you see lots of "skinny" football players hard at practice, your eyes are not deceiving you! They are the senior and junior girls hard at work practicing for the Powderpuff game, to be held the day before Thanksgiving. Make plans to attend, it is great fun!

❑ That's the news from here, please call me with yours!

Mr. Cohasset

Vibrant, caring, and compassionate are the words often used to describe, T. Gerard Keating.

Born in town, Gerard — who is a familiar figure to many Cohasseters — served as postmaster until his retirement in 1978.

But for Gerard retirement was merely a synonym for recycling himself for the days ahead.

Not only has he taken charge of his health by staying in top physical shape — he has spent plenty of time giving something back to the town.

On Nov. 4, South Shore Elder Services presented Gerard with the 1993 Edythe B. Donkin Memorial Award for his significant contribution to elders on the South Shore. Mrs. Donkin was one of the founders of the non-profit agency which addresses the needs and concerns of senior citizens.

For over 60 years, Gerard has served Cohasset in many ways — as Veteran's agent, school committee member and on the advisory and personnel boards.

And in addition to his duties with the Council on Aging, he works closely with the Friends of The Council on Aging and the Cohasset Community Center in organizing the Capital Fund-raising Campaign for the new addition for the Senior Center.

He is a strong supporter of SSES and Meals on Wheels program for seniors, and also volunteers as a driver for the COA's shuttle bus, transporting elders to local appointments.

He served on the Feasibility Committee in 1985 to investigate the need for a senior center in Cohasset — and from that has served on the COA's board of directors.

COA director, Kathy Bryanton says: "Gerard is clearly in great demand, yet he managed to share his time with his six children and 20 grandchildren. His familiar presence at all town meetings and other functions are greatly appreciated by all seniors who benefit from his many hours of dedicated service.

"His contributions to the community have brought him the love and admiration of all who know him."

It's no wonder that Mrs. Mary Ahearn, Cohasset board member on SSES, referred to Gerard as "Mr. Cohasset" during the award ceremony.

The award and new title are well deserved.

Sign proposed for Lightkeepers

(Ed's note: The following letter was sent to selectmen.)

Dear Board of Selectmen:

It was nice to see several of you at the Oct. 31 Open House and I am pleased to advise that one of the upstairs apartments is now occupied with all appropriate permits having been secured.

I'm sure that the other apartment will be rented soon. We are now directing our efforts to completion of the Bancroft Hall.

We believe it would be appropriate to site a sign to identify the Minot Ledge Lighthouse Keepers Residence as a community meeting hall and to note its historic significance.

We suggest the attached which would be financed by a donation from the Snowdale family. We have also identified a tentative location and propose a ground light to make the sign visible after dark (all at CLC's expense).

We welcome suggestions and Nancy Snowdale and/or Barbara Dillon could be called to meet those, on-site, who would be involved in the approval process.

Leaves

All you can see is their brightness as you wind and turn at every bend of the road.

past fields strewn with pumpkins, vines buckling from lush fruit, near raked bogs with cattails bursting as they reach toward the sky — and the air so full of the burnt scent of pine.

Oh, whatever you felt yesterday in your bones (or thought you felt) — now you want to cry out: This is joy!

Inevitably, the rains and restless, changing winds of this November will float down

what you know to be eternal:
reds, golds, burgundies, browns,

like cherished mementos — soon to be frozen in the snows of December.

"Stagecoach, Packet and Railway"

(Ed.'s note: Debate over the return of surface rail to Cohasset and the South Shore continues. The MBTA is hosting meetings in towns along the Greenbush corridor to inform residents about the six alternatives to improved transportation which include more boats and buses, surface rail and/or surface rail with a tunnel under Hingham Square, and maintaining the status quo. A feasibility study on the alternatives should be completed in January. Transportation is not a new issue in Cohasset, so we thought we'd take a look back to see where we've been. The editorial copy provided is from "A Narrative History of Cohasset" by E. Victor Bigelow and the photographs are courtesy of the Cohasset Historical Society).

— 'The people in 101 coves and inlets of our many-sided Boston Harbor are somewhat like frogs — the grant of a railroad for them caused any amount of clack. Should it be here or there? One would have said, with such pulling and hauling, it would be nowhere...We can testify it is there!

'Yesterday was one of the brightest possible winter days, and at 12 o'clock an immense, long train waited half an hour for the City Government, and then started, rolled on over the Calf Pasture by Dorchester, Neponset, Quincy, and Braintree, and gracefully curved off upon the new road, which the glorious amphibious people of North Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, and Cohasset have built for themselves.

'It passes through a populous and thriving country, where children are abundant, living off the produce of both land and sea...

'Passing through the ancient hive of Hingham, the folks made us promise to come back and take supper.

'Arrived at Cohasset about half-past two. Cohasset is of itself no small place, It has considerable ground to stand upon, besides the water beyond it. We saw two churches, many snug houses, multitudes of people..."

(From the Boston Daily Chronotype, Jan. 2, 1849 — the day the South Shore Railroad opened).

The first mail stage coach started service to Cohasset about 1815. Often carrying passengers, the Hingham stage traveled back and forth to Boston about three times a week. Seven years later, The "Scituate and Boston Accommodation Stage" was instituted and made three trips a week with the Scituate, Cohasset, and Marshfield mails. The stagecoach continued for about 20 years until the railroad was built and ran between Greenbush and the Hingham Steam Boat before the railroad went beyond Cohasset. This photograph, which pre-dates the Civil War, shows the intersection of S. Main & Elm Sts. in Cohasset Village. The store of Mr. C. H. Willard may be the same building where the Children's Exchange is now housed.

Here is the old roundhouse and turntable, for housing and turning the locomotives, southeast of Cohasset railroad station, about 1915. The terminus of the railroad was once in Cohasset. According to Bigelow, Hingham businessmen tried to make Hingham the terminus "shutting Cohasset off from the enterprise...but rather than be cut off Cohasset joined forces with the Weymouths to bend the road westward through their towns at a much increased expense on the condition that Cohasset be the terminus." Scituate and Marshfield citizens took the stage to Cohasset to catch the train. Twenty-two years after the train came to Cohasset, the terminus was moved to Scituate. Passenger train service continued along the Greenbush corridor until 1959.

This photograph taken in 1915 shows the railroad northerly crossing of Spring St. The Paul Pratt Library (note the cupola) is in the background. The Col. Thomas Lothrup House is at right center. The "South Shore Railroad" was incorporated in 1846. Before the railroad, many citizens took "packets" (one-masted sloops) to Boston. Bigelow says the packets were used for freight "but people got accommodated as boats might happen to be going." To get a Hingham packet, Cohasseters would walk to Hingham. Bigelow quotes a citizen recalling packet travel: "My grandmother used to knit sailors' stockings and mittens to sell in Boston, and she had to walk over to Hingham to take the packet there."

SHINE NEWS — KATHY GLENZEL

Recently the Patriot Ledger did a feature article on the SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders) program under their Senior Set column. The reporter and the SHINE Counselors did a great job in explaining the value of the program. Each counselor had an opportunity to explain what they enjoy most about their volunteer experience. The common theme among them (and all of the SHINE Counselors) is that they enjoy helping people with the complicated subject of health insurance.

SHINE has been in existence for over ten years and has been available in Cohasset (and other South Shore towns) since 1987. It continues to surprise us that many people are unaware of the program. If they haven't heard of the program, they are missing out on a good thing.

SHINE counselors are available to assist you or a family member with questions on Medicare, Medicare supplemental insurance (Medigap), Medicaid (Community and long term care). Supplemental Security Income, Health Maintenance Organizations (HMOS), long term care insurance and other elder related health benefits programs.

Counselors operate out of local Councils on Aging. They keep up to date on all of the changes in Medicare, etc. and can answer your questions confidentially. One of the advantages of using the SHINE program is that SHINE Counselors are objective and there to help! They have nothing to sell or gain, just a genuine interest in helping people better understand their insurance coverage. So, next time you or a family member have a question about health insurance, a bill you have received or any other health benefits/related matter, make an appointment with a SHINE counselor. A SHINE counselor is available at the Cohasset Council on Aging Mondays from 10 a.m. to noon. Counselors are also available by appointment. Please call 383-9112 for more information.

CHANGES IN MEDICARE

Effective Nov. 1, the durable medical equipment benefit under Medicare Part B will undergo some significant changes in the way claims are processed.

Beginning Nov. 1, the Travelers Insurance Company (based in Conn.) will administer all Durable Medical Equipment Claims for the Northeast region. Prior to November 1, Durable Medical Equipment Claims were administered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts for Mass. residents.

This change is part of an effort to reduce the incidence of fraudulent claims for Durable Medical Equipment. You may remember articles in the Boston Globe that made reference to the problems of fraud in this area. This is important information to you. These changes will effect anyone who uses Durable Medical Equipment. You must receive your equipment or covered supplies from a provider who has received a new provider number (area providers have participated in seminars and are aware of the changes). It is important to find out before you receive the supplies, whether the provider has received his/her new number.

In addition, there are new medical necessity forms that must be filled out on your behalf. This must be done by your doctor. The medical necessity forms must be completed prior to receiving the supplies and the provider must send this form in to Medicare (along with the claim for requesting payment). If you have any questions or problems with Durable Medical Equipment claims, please call the SHINE Program at 383-9116.

Groundbreaking begins new era for local Temple

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Congregation Sha'Aray Shalom started 20 years ago with a handful of members and a dream. Recently they commenced building for the future, drawing on old dreams and new visions.

Sha'Aray Shalom is Hebrew for "Gates of Peace." The 300 families who are members hope to be entering through a new set of doors by fall. On Saturday they broke ground for an addition that more than doubles the size of the current temple.

The Hingham-based synagogue draws members from all over the South Shore. Increasing the size of the temple is more than necessary. Religious school classrooms are bursting at the seams and scheduling is a true challenge.

For at least five years, the congregation has been forced to hold Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur services at the South Shore Country Club or Hingham High School to accommodate all the members and guest who want to participate in High Holy Day services.

When completed, the addition will allow the temple to grow to a maximum of 500-600 families before space becomes a problem again.

The expanded building will be handicap accessible throughout, even the raised platform from which services are conducted. That will allow members in wheelchairs to participate fully in the religious services.

"At long last we can grow even more, physically, intellectually and spiritually," Rabbi Stephen Karol said at the ground breaking. Karol drew his inspiration from a verse from the Book of Joel.

In the words of a song based on that passage, "The old shall dream dreams and the youth shall see visions./ And our hopes shall rise up to the sky./ We must live for today, we must build for tomorrow."

Karol's address was followed by speeches from building committee co-chairman David Carr and Hingham selectmen Chairman Edna English.

Carr remembered the early years of the congregation, started by primarily young families.

"Despite our vision, few of us dreamed of a congregation of 300 families," he said. And though Carr may have thought he would have retired to emeritus status in temple leadership by now, duty called. He recalled an old adage appropriate to his situation, "It is not your task to finish the work. Neither are you free to desist from it."

Then temple president Steven Lipman told the gathering, "Now we're going to do it."

The digging was done with the shovel used to break ground for the original temple building. The first spadeful belonged to Rabbi Karol, followed by a series of representatives.

Religious school director Joan Carr said so many children wanted to take part they chose their representative by lottery. Mortgagor Robert Gaughen of the Hingham Institute for Savings and selectman Katherine Reardon were also given an opportunity to wield a shovel.

When all the notables finished their ceremonial digging, Rabbi Karol told the gathered congregants their were shovels for everyone who wished to dig in.

"Dig deep, folks, so we can save some money on the foundation," he joked.

In his benediction, Karol told the group they were passing on a legacy and a blessing to their contemporaries and the future.

After the ground breaking, the congregation celebrated with music, singing and food. The youngest members of the congregation abandoned the entertainment for another chance at digging in the dirt, many wielding shovels larger than themselves. Even as the sky darkened and the first stars glimmered in the sky, children remained outdoors intent on their excavations.

The building committee fully expects the addition will be completed in time for High Holy Days services in September. The actual construction schedule is complicated by the fact the temple has Bar and Bat Mitzvah services scheduled every week beginning in March. Since the project calls for knocking out one of the walls in the sanctuary, that presents a challenge.

"We'll have to put up with a little pain in the short run," building committee co-chairman Ted Lemoff said in an interview. The sacrifice doesn't faze most members.

"We will build with confidence and gain faith," Karol said at the ground breaking. "Our future together is a bright one. It is a foundation where the old can dream dreams and youth see vision."

employed 225 people this summer, including full- and part-time staff. "We cut to the bare bone," Longo said.

By working with a smaller staff and making budget cuts wherever possible, Longo said the South Shore Playhouse Associates turned a profit.

"We're not writing home telling how great we're doing," he cautioned.

The SSMC makes it clear that it wants community support for its liquor license application, particularly because of the support the outdoor theater gives the community.

"The (Cohasset High School) drama club wouldn't exist without the Music Circus. We think that they have a right to exist. That's what we're about — giving to the arts in education.

"Now that we know that we're doing well, we want a level playing field to compete," Longo said.

When SSMC last applied for a liquor license, in 1983, it was rejected. Now, Longo says the SSMC needs the revenue from liquor sales to draw performers to the South Shore.

"I don't want to lose the act to go to another theater where they can make up that difference (in higher performer's fees).

"We're not a bar," Longo said. Alcohol would only be served 20 minutes before a show and during the 20 minute intermissions during performances.

The board of selectmen will hold a public hearing this winter and later vote to approve or disapprove of a license for SSMC.

South Shore Playhouse Associates donated to 36 grant recipients this year. In order to qualify for a grant, the organization writes to the Board of Directors with a request.

The Board meets annually to go over the requests each fall. Groups are free to lobby and make their case as much as possible for the funding.

"What it amounts to is making your efforts known," Longo said.

But the Playhouse Associates reject a portion of applicants each year. "There were probably five or ten that didn't get grants for various reasons," Tuthill said.

Fire detectors needed

Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln alerted selectmen there there is no fire detection or protection equipment in the "showroom" building at the Hagerty site. He recommends the town discontinue all utilities and drain the water from the heat and domestic water systems or install fire detection equipment such as smoke detectors connected to the fire alarm master box.

"I have been advised by an employee of the Hagerty Company of the need to maintain heat throughout the 'manufacturing' section of the building in order to keep the sprinkler system from freezing. Apparently, the sprinkler system has several low points which collect water and are prone to freeze even with regular monitoring," Lincoln said.

Lincoln said Selectmen Chairman Martha Gjesteby gave the authorization for him to hire a company to put the heating system in the manufacturing section back in service. The Chief also said a compressor for the building can be rented for $140 per week or purchased for $350.

Liquor license supported

Ronald J. Herzberg, president of RJH Associates and past president of the Hingham Civic Music Theatre, wrote to selectmen this week to state his support for awarding a wine and malt beverages license to the South Shore Music Circus.

He cited the support the Music Circus has given to non-profit groups in the area and expressed confidence that the staff of the Music Circus "realizing the responsibility of having such a license, will conduct themselves in a manner necessary to assure the safety of their patrons as well as the general public."

Music Circus turns up the volume

Some money is tied up in a five-year matching grant of $50,000 to the South Shore Music Conservatory for it's new Duxbury location.

Some requests were denied because they didn't fit the Playhouse Associates' mission, Tuthill added.

Lanci Valentine, director of the South Shore Arts Center (SSAC), said the center receives about eight percent of its total funding from South Shore Playhouse Associates.

"It's crucial. They're very generous," she said. "They're an important organization not only because of us, but because of all the other organizations they support."

But Valentine said she wasn't aware that the SSMC donated its profits to local organizations until she worked for one if its beneficiaries.

"I think they're very low key; maybe too low key," she said.

Because the SSMC is an arts association, it is appropriate that it supports other arts groups.

"The arts are crucial to our civilization. We're remembered by our arts," Valentine said. "I'm obviously interested in the visual arts, but it's music, literature and drama (too)."

This year's grant recipients are: The Bare Cove Museum, the Broad Cove Chorale, Cohasset's Arts Boosters, Community Center, Dramatic Club, Gridiron Club, Historical Society, Lightkeepers, Parent School Organization, Recreation Commission, Rotary Club Scholarship Fund, Sailing Club, Swim Center, and Little League; the Fine Arts Chorale, Friends of the Cohasset Council on Aging, Greater Boston Youth Symphony, Hingham Civic Orchestra, Hull Lifesaving Museum, Curtain Call Theater, New England Wildlife Center, Old Colony Council Boy Scouts of America, Sandy Beach Association, Social Service League of Cohasset, South Shore Art Center, South Shore Conservatory of Music, South Shore Men of Harmony, South Shore Natural Science Center, Summer Arts at Derby, Talking Information Center, Wellspring, Inc., Wild Again, Young People's Summer Theater, the Cape Cod Symphony Orchestra and the Chatham Chorale.

Cohasset native, Bates-McArthur, who lives on Beechwood St., worked for three years as a volunteer with the summer program as arts and crafts counselor.

As director, McDonald will be paid $9 an hour for a 40/hr. week this summer. Bates-McArthur will be paid between $7 and $8 an hour for a 30/hr. week, Recreation Dept. Director Jack Worley said.

Both women said they would like to see more staff development among the counselors and would develop a packet of rainy-day game ideas.

More than 300 children ages three-to-12 attended the popular program last summer.

Reception is well attended

The Friends of the Cohasset Library hosted a reception at the library Sunday evening, Nov. 14, to celebrate the opening of a new art exhibit. "Saltwater and Cobblestones," a watercolor collection by JoAnne Chittick features animated interpretations of Cohasset water scenes and Boston's historical landmarks. Minot's Light, Bassings Beach and Beacon Hill are some of the landmarks distinctly and wonderfully represented in Ms. Chittick's work.

More than one hundred guests attended the reception. Many were amazed and delighted with the transformation of the reading room which abounded with flowers, music of Bach and beautiful hors d'oeuvres prepared by Mary Lou Studds and Judy Bronstein. Trustee, Barbara Power created flower arrangements especially to complement Mrs. Chittick's collection. Both the flower arrangements and the art exhibit remain on display at the library this week.

"Saltwater and Cobblestones," features 30 watercolors and will remain at the library through January. All of the paintings are for sale with the exception of those that have already been purchased.

The Friends membership drive is still in progress. All donations are important to the library and greatly appreciated. Please mail your contribution. BE A FRIEND!!!

Fall library hours

Hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.

Artist JoAnne Chittick and Sue Killilea, president of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, chat during the opening reception for Chittick's watercolor exhibit "Saltwater and Cobblestones" Sunday.

Allen runs wild over Marian

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

With much of the school's attention focused on the boys' soccer team and its march through the Division 3 South Sectional tourney, Ted MacDermott's football club has quietly been making some rumblings of its own.

The Skippers, who were left for dead after a string of consecutive losses, have put together a three-game unbeaten streak. And they stand a good chance of making it four straight against Hull on Thanksgiving Day after running rampant past Marian, 27-22, last Friday night.

Thomas Allen and Chris Rolandelli accounted for the Skippers' (3-4-1) scoring and Scott Theriault added three extra points for the surging Cohasset team.

Allen amassed 171 yards on scoring runs alone, while Rolandelli blasted through the Marian defense for a 3-yard touchdown in the second quarter.

Cohasset, which tied Sharon and beat Charlestown before the win over Marian, first got in the end zone on a 54-yard run by Allen in the first quarter. Theriault added the extra point.

After Rolandelli's touchdown and the ensuing kick by Theriault, Allen returned a Marian fumble 65 yards for his second score of the game. He ended his damage against Marian for the evening with a 54-yard scamper in the fourth quarter to give Cohasset the win.

The 27 points is the most scored all season by the Skippers, one more than its 26-0 win over West Bridgewater in the opening game of the season.

Cohasset was defeated by Hull on Thanksgiving Day last year as the Pirates closed out its SSL schedule and began prepping for the Division 4B Super Bowl against Ipswich.

However, the Pirates have fallen on hard times this season having graduated several of their top players from the '92 team.

Cohasset's running attack of Allen, Rolandelli and Theriault could very well have a big day against the Pirates. Hulls main weapon this season has been the passing combination of Bill Presley and Bill Chisholm, which has accounted for the majority of the team's points. Keith Mathews has also been a strong runner in the backfield for the Pirates.

Skipper quarterback Jeff Littlehale (7) hands off to Cohasset back Thomas Allen (22) in a recent game. Allen had a monster day in the Skippers' 27-22 win over Marian, running for three touchdowns.

Imagine the NHL Stanley Cup finals going to overtime in the seventh game.

But instead of playing until one team scores a goal in sudden death, the two teams choose their three best shooters and square off for a session of mini one-on-one to decide it all.

Or how about having the NBA World championships going to overtime and instead of the teams battling it out to find a winner, they pick three players and have a free-throw shooting contest to decide the title.

This may sound bizarre, but this is how things are handled in state tournament soccer play.

If two teams are tied after regulation, they play two complete 10-minute overtime periods.

If there is no decision after those two periods, they play two five-minute sudden death periods.

If no goal is scored in either of the two five-minute overtimes, then a shootout is held.

In a shootout, each team chooses three players who were on the field when overtime ended.

The ball is then placed about 30 yards from the goal and the two teams alternate sending their three players on breakaways against the other teams' goalie. The shooters are allowed to cut in one direction. They cannot go backwards and they cannot score on rebounds.

The team with the most goals in the shootout wins.

But if there is no clear victor after three rounds, the teams have to choose another player who hasn't shot yet.

This goes on and on, until one team finally has an edge.

Understand yet?

Neither do we, but these shootouts helped bounce Hanover's number-one seeded boys Division 3 team from the state tourney against Cohasset in the quarterfinal round.

A shootout also eliminated the Marshfield girls' soccer team as they battled Newton North, the nation's number two ranked team, in the Division 1 South finals.

Shootouts have been in place for the past four years or so. Prior to that, the teams played until one team scored. And after each overtime, the number of players were reduced on each side.

Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski does not like shootouts. And that's not because his team lost. He'd feel the same even if the Lady Rams had topped Newton North.

"They put too much pressure on the goalie," he said. "And I don't think having them decide the winner is what soccer is all about."

The shootouts are supposed to prevent teams from playing never-ending soccer games in the tourney. And with some of the strong defense played by Pilgrim Conference teams, that is understandable.

Norwell girls' soccer coach Bruce Emerson was involved in a ten overtime game in '87 with his squad getting smaller each OT.

"I ended up with five players playing and they played the equivalent of two full games. At the end they were just dead," he said.

Podbelski suggested that the games

Medway drops Skippers 5-1 in finals

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

When his team finished running circles around Sacred Heart in its surprisingly easy win in the Division 3 South Sectional semifinals, Cohasset boys' soccer coach Keith Clark said he was less concerned with Medway's strategy than "doing the things we are capable" of in last Saturday's finals at Braintree High.

However, one thing became painfully clear just minutes into the game. The Tri-Valley League champions had the same idea. The second-seeded Mustangs fully intended to play their own end-to-end game.

In the end it was too much for Cohasset.

Medway relied on its overpowering speed and exceptional ball control to end the Skippers' hopes of a South Sectional championship with an easy 5-1 victory.

Only Ben Redfield's blast to the far left corner on an indirect kick in the 78th minute saved Cohasset from being shut out by Medway.

"They get out quick and steam roll you," said Clark, after the Skippers received the runner-up plaque. "All in all they're a very well-coached team and they don't pass up many chances."

The Mustangs' Chaka Jackson drilled home a pair of tallies past Cohasset All-Star Chris Goodman as the Skippers simply could not keep up with Medway's speed down the left and right sides of the field. Jackson worked the left of the field the entire evening. If he didn't unleash one of his blistering shots, he had the option of passing off to one of several teammates who also seemed to find a way to get open in front of the Cohasset net.

The Skippers found themselves defending their own end for the majority of the game as Goodman had 14 saves, at least half a dozen of which were gems.

"He came up with many key saves," said Clark of his lanky goaltender. "They could have scored more."

Medway built a 2-0 lead in the first 40 minutes of the game as Jackson and Steve Garry collected goals.

Jackson beat Goodman to the right side after taking a past from Tom Pallotta and raced clear of the Skippers' Tim Brister 13 minutes into the game.

Goodman made the best save of the game just a few minutes later, diving to his right and getting a hand on a point-blank shot from 15 yards out and knocking it wide. Back-up goaltender Chris McKenna came into the game temporarily when Goodman was shaken up denying another Mustang attacker, whose momentum slammed him into the netminder.

Goodman returned three minutes later and was beaten in the 16th minute as Mustang co-captain Andy Young punched a pass through the Cohasset defense to a wide-open Garry. The senior poked home goal No. 2 on a low drive.

The Skippers had two solid scoring chances of their own in the half, but were never unable to mount a sustained offensive attack during the contest. All-Star Charlie Endris, the hero in the 4-0 win over Sacred Heart, two days before with a pair of goals, was stopped cold on both his attempts to get Cohasset back into the game by the half.

Medway made it 3-0 during the 44th minute when Jackson got off a solid shot to the far left in the midst of a scramble in front of Goodman. Pallota was credited with the assist.

Cohasset suffered another blow seven minutes later when co-captain Chris Kondrat hurt his neck and head in a collision with a Mustang player. Kondrat was able to walk off the field on his own, but didn't return to the game.

The Skippers caught a semi-break as a Medway goal was disallowed because of an off-sides call. And just two minutes after Goodman robbed Jackson on a breakaway, Young took a pass from Brett MacKechnie and let loose a bullet from 30 yards to the left of Goodman.

The Mustangs tallied for one more before Redfield notched his first goal of the tourney.

Clark had nothing but praise for the Mustangs and his team alike, following Cohasset's final game of the season.

"They played quickly at midfield," he said. "They don't give up on the ball.

"I'm proud of our guys. We beat the first, fifth and seventh seed of the tournament, but we couldn't beat the second."

In getting to the finals, Cohasset defeated South Shore League foes Norwell and Hanover, as well as Sacred Heart.

And while the opening round and quarterfinals were riveting games, Cohasset looked as though they could have scored at will against the slow moving Sacred Heart team.

The Skippers beat the fifth-seeded Fighting Saints in every aspect of the game. They were quicker to the ball, displayed superior passing and most importantly, waited for the opportune times to shoot.

Clark, for one, was not surprised by the lopsided score. "I thought if we played the way we are capable throughout, we could win convincingly."

For Endris, the contest provided an opportunity to polish off the cobwebs from a hamstring injury that kept him out of action for a handful of games. And although he wasn't allowed any room to maneuver against Medway, Endris scorched Sacred Heart.

The senior took a chip pass from Jim Magner in close and let one fly with less than two minutes remaining in the first half, giving Cohasset a 3-0 lead.

Endris made it two for him and four for the team with less than two minutes gone at the start of the second half, taking a sharp pass from Kondrat and finding the back of the net from 30 yards out.

"It was important for him to get in there and get a couple of goals," said Clark.

"The kids came forward today and did what they had to do."

Clark admitted he believed there was the possibility of a letdown against Westport after Cohasset eliminated Hanover and Norwell in two highly emotional, one-goal games. Couple that with the fact Sacred Heart rallied from a two-goal deficit to defeat Westport in the quarterfinals and he knew the Skippers would have to stay focused.

"There was a concern that that you've taken care of the number-one team (Hanover)," Clark explained, "and that they might settle for that.

"They (SH) came back from two goals down to beat Westport so we knew they wouldn't quit."

The Fighting Saints never looked as though they got started, let alone quit. Cohasset marked their players well, ran well and made quicker decisions. Sacred Heart appeared confused by the Skippers' intensity and never had the opportunity to sustain itself offensively.

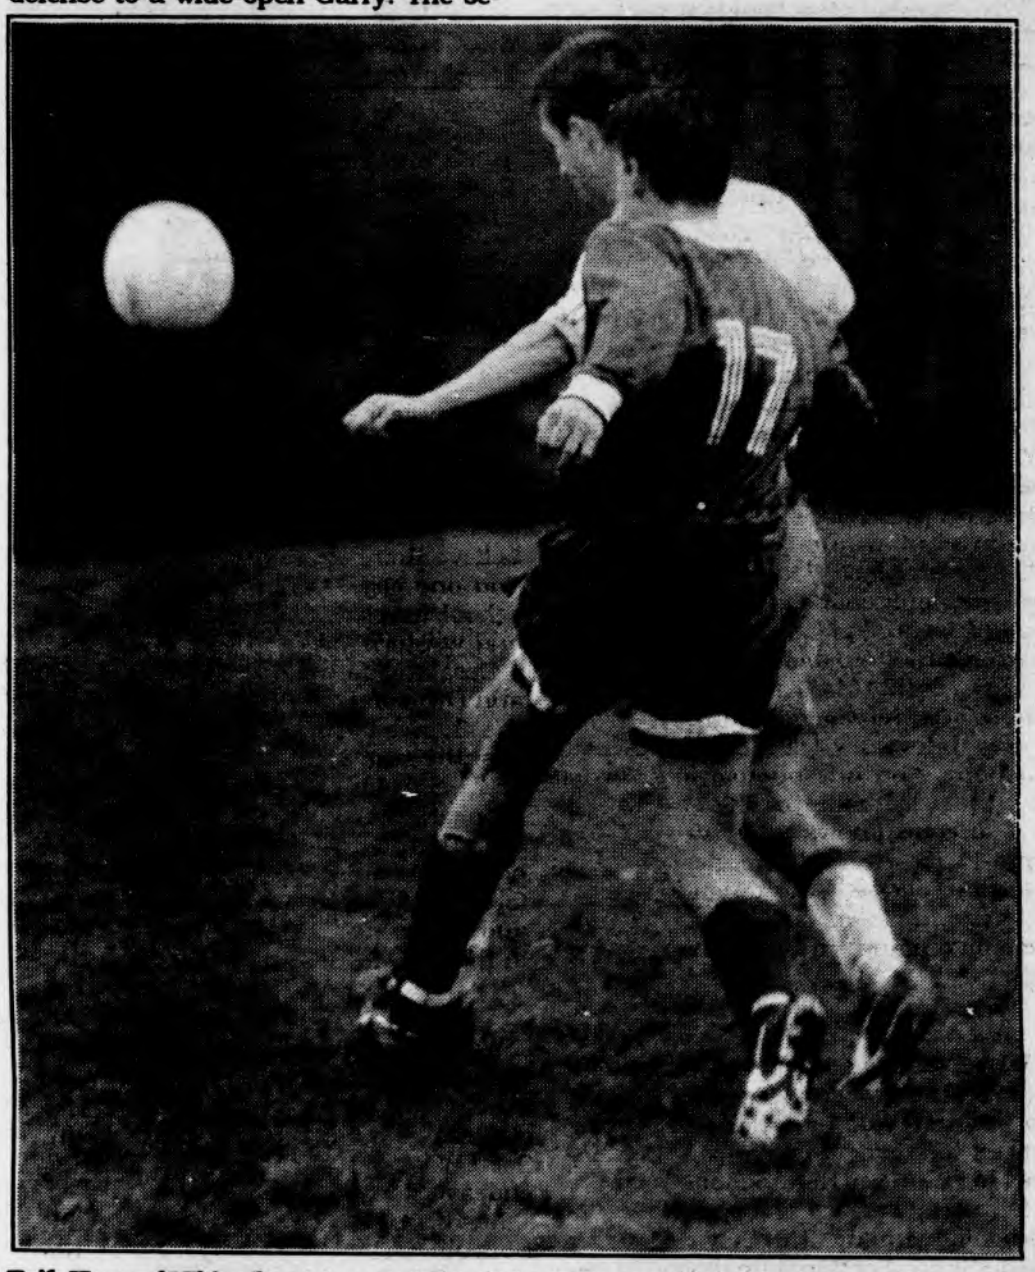
Brett MacQuarrie broke up one offensive surge by the Fighting Saints at the 15-minute mark, just before the first score of the game.

Redfield dribbled down the left side of the field and booted a perfect ball to the center. Freshman Kevin McKenna, the Skippers' leading goal scorer during the regular season, timed his leap perfectly and headed the ball sharply past the left of Sacred Heart's goalie.

In the 32nd minute, Cohasset made it 2-0 on another pretty play. Jeremiah Stevenson was all by himself on the left side, but instead of taking the shot he spotted Erik Henry cutting to the net. Stevenson tapped a lead pass and Henry proceeded to blast it home.

Defensively, Tom Greco, Dave Nothnagle, Brister and Jamie Kondrat provided blanket coverage for Goodman, who had six saves. Chris McKenna had one stop in his short stint in goal.

Magner led the Skippers in points during the tournament (one goal, three assists for four points). In post-season play, Cohasset scored eight goals and added seven assists for 15 points.



Erik Henry (17) is about to overtake a player in pursuit of the ball and then gets off a strong kick during a Division 3 South Sectional tournament game. Cohasset defeated Norwell, Hanover and Sacred Heart before being bumped out in the finals, 5-1, against a tough Medway squad.

Hettstrom, Pratt lead gymnasts

The Cohasset Community Center "Gym-it in Motion" team started its USGF season at the Ellis School in Braintree.

The competition was for level 5, 6, 7, and 8 USGF Friday, Nov. 5.

Level-5 competitor Melanie Suddath received a sixth-place finish on floor with a score of 7.10. Teammate Maggie Goedecke placed fourth on the vault (7.80) and fifth on floor (6.80) and Carolyn Pratt rounded up the fives with a second on beam (7.70) and fourth on floor (7.0).

Level-6 competitor Caitlin Flint received top honors on floor exercise (8.20), second place on vault (7.85) and bars (7.05).

Teammate Tara Hettstrom received second on beam (7.50) and third on floor exercise (7.65.

Lauren Genovese received a second-place finish on floor exercise (7.70), Flint, Hettstrom and Genovese took second-, third- and fourth-place finishes in the All-Around Level-6 competition.

Optional Level-8 competitor Jodi Colwill placed fourth on the vault (7.35).

Teammate Megan Pratt placed third on bars (7.70) and beam (7.60).

Erica Hettstrom placed second on beam (8.15), third on vault (7.50) and fourth on floor exercise (8.20).

Hettstrom placed first in the All-Around (31.15) and teammate Megan Pratt placed third in All-Around (30.60). Both gymnasts will advance to the Sectionals at Level 8 to try to advance to the State Competition.

Sunday, Nov. 7, Flint, a Level 6 gymnast with the Cohasset Community Center, traveled to Swansea for her second competition of the season. Flint placed second in the All-Around (30.85). She registered a first on bars (7.80) and floor (8.40) and third on vault (7.85) and beam (6.80).

Coaching Director Ruthann Sargent-Ardizzoni and assistant Patti Donahue are very proud of all the young ladies.

Judo lessons offered

The Community Center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, will offer judo beginning Dec. 10. This 10-week course will be held Saturdays, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. The fee is $30. Judo training gives a person an effective self-defense system if the need arises. Regular training can improve an individual's aerobic capacity, strength, and flexibility. Call 383-0088. The community center is a non-profit organization open to all.

Wah Lum Kids hit ropes course

In a melding of two of Cohasset's finest personal development/ achievement mediums, young members of the Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy recently spent an afternoon at the Cohasset Ropes Course, behind Cohasset High School.

Wah Lum Academy owner/instructor John Loupos brought 12 members of his Juniors class, (ages 10-13) for an afternoon of learning games and high flying adventure. Certified ropes course instructor Susan McMackin began by guiding the participants through a series of communication skill and trust building games. The emphasis was on safety and teamwork. She then guided everybody through some of the low elements of the course. These were challenging obstacle and teamwork activities, with names like Nitro Crossing & Tension Traverse, which are elevated only one or two feet off the ground. Then, with her support staff of several trained Cohasset high school assistants, McMackin proceeded to demonstrate the necessary skills around safety harnesses, climbing hardware, and trouble-shooting, which would enable her young charges to move safely through the treetops.

The Juniors program at Wah Lum also emphasizes the benefits of teamwork as well as getting in touch with one's personal strengths, weaknesses, and resources. Though each program clearly has its own distinct approach, the learning of how to confront and move beyond one's fears and other personal limitations is a focal point shared by both the ropes course program and the Wah Lum Kung Fu program.

An hour and a half after they started, the kids began to work the high elements, up to thirty feet off the ground. Many of the parents watched, clicking their cameras from the ground, (some not a little nervously) as their sons and daughters harnessed in and ascended the rope ladders. Under the watchful eyes of the instructors they challenged themselves with the Burma Bridge, the 100-foot Zip Line, the Dangly Doo, the Pirate's Crossing, and others, before being belayed back down to the ground.

"This program exceeded my expectations," Loupos said. The kids had a great time. Every single youngster found himself confronted with the limitations of fear at some point, and every single youngster found it within him or herself to move through that curtain of fear. I think it was great for the parents too." Parents concurred. Brian May of Marshfield whose son Colin was in the group said, "I was surprised at the height, but the kids did really well."

Dave Carroll of Weymouth had this to say about his daughter Elizabeth's participation, "She was very nervous at first, but she felt much better afterwards...she knows she did something she didn't think she could do." Said Dave and Barbara Jenson of Scituate about their sons, "We were a little worried at first about Tom and Dan but we're very proud of them. This is a big confidence booster."

The afternoon's activities concluded with Program Director, Jack Buckley, explaining the need for teamwork and a group strategy to get each and every participant over The Wall, a 12-foot high flat face with no hand or foot holds, in 15 minutes or less.

For further information on the Cohasset Ropes Course contact Buckley at Cohasset High School. For further information on Wah Lum Kung Fu call 383-6822.

should be decided on the field and advocated a return to the OT with reduced numbers.

"You could reduce it to nine-on-nine and then five-on-five or something like that," he said. "That would open the field and lead to some goals. That would be the fairest way and you would definitely see some goals scored. I don't like having it decided on a shootout. Too much can happen."

Soccer officials should explore these options for future tournaments. Sometimes change can be a good thing.

Who is the genius who chooses the sites for the state tourney soccer games?

After announcing that the Marshfield/Whitman-Hanson Girls' Division 1 South Semifinals and the Silver Lake/New Bedford Voke Boys' Division 1 South Semifinals would be held in East Bridgewater last Wednesday, the game was suddenly changed at the last minute to....(drum roll please)....Foxboro.

That's right Foxboro.

Hey, why not Marblehead or Amherst? Those are pretty good neutral sites too.

Hey I love to drive all the way to Foxboro. And our photographers just love those last minutes changes as well.

If anyone knows why these games were changed or who made this great decision, please get in touch with me.

I have a mile-expense report they can help fill out and a tune-up they can pay for.

Whatever the outcome of the football team's Thanksgiving Day clash against Norwell, it's safe to say the fall sports season has gone down as a huge success for Hanover High School.

The field hockey and soccer teams both kept winning until they all the way to the South Sectional finals before defeat stared them in the face. And even then, they were a pair of 1-0 losses. Hanover was bumped out of the tourney a little earlier than expected by South Shore League rival Cohasset in boys' soccer, but the Indians won their first SSL title in 18 years and earned the No. 1 seed in the Division 3 South Sectionals. Their loss was also by just one goal.

With a great deal of young talent coming back next fall, the Hanover sports scene should hold another great season of excitement well into Thanksgiving.

Now we can just sit back and watch the Indians take on the Clippers in one of the hottest rivalries on the South Shore.

Abington High's Zack Smith should finally have some company with him at this weekend's All-State Cross-Country Meet in Northfield. The four-time South Shore League champion repeated as the Division 4 Eastern Mass champ with his 15:34 finish last Saturday at Franklin Park. Smith, who also won the South Shore Principals Meet and the Coaches Meet, finished a comfortable 12 seconds in front of the second-place harrier. I'm predicting a top-5 finish for the South Shore's best cross-country runner.

Every year at this time my blood starts to boil when I see what the MIAA has done to the All-State Cross-Country Meet. Maybe it's because I've always been partial to the sport, but I still believe there should be one boys' race and one girls' race with the top high-school harriers from Eastern, Central and Western Mass.

Breaking the meet up into a Division 1 and Division 2 race denies the harriers the chance to compete against the very best the state has to offer, not just half of the elite. Imagine a lead pack of Adam Stone, Derek Smith, Zack Smith, Jamey Bianchi and Seth Williams jockeying for position heading to the mile mark. Unfortunately, we won't see that this year and there is no indication of any changes in the near future.

Wahle Watch: I've got to thank Boston Bruin defenseman Ray Bourque for taking some of the heat off Dave and I for our updates on Hingham's favorite son, Scott Wahle, and his singing and acting endeavors.

According to the Boston Herald, Bourque belted out a version of the national anthem during Monday's practice after spotting Wahle. The Channel 4 sportscaster filled in for Rene Rancourt at a recent Bruins game and did a commendable job in my opinion. However, Bourque kidded Wahle that it was payback time for putting the Boston Garden through his vocal cord exercise.

Hingham residents have no need to fret, though. Rene Rancourt is expected back soon and Wahle won't have to deal with the four-time Norris Award winner's ribbings.

school's in

by Ed Leary

Fugitive time has fled again! Here it is, the end of the first quarter, and I began this school year full of firm resolve to continue my monthly series of articles about school events and activities. I feel like the high school senior who has discovered that college applications were due last week. I'll have to think twice when I set the deadline for the research paper project!

Nevertheless, there has been a multitude of important activities taking place. For example, several members of the faculty are planning to institute a pilot program called the "School Family," due to begin December first. Intended to act as a support system for the transition from junior to senior high school, the program consists of small groups of ninth graders matched with eight faculty members and eight peer counselors. The ninth grade has been divided into small groups, which meet with their faculty "dad" or "mom" and a senior peer counselor twice a month in order to develop social skills, build trust and self-esteem, and form a core of people who will support each other. It is hoped that a given faculty member might become an advocate for a particular student who is having difficulty; the relationships that develop also enable the "mom" or "dad" to spot a problem that a student might be having emotionally or academically before it becomes worse. Ideally, the relationships will continue formally into the tenth grade and thereafter throughout the students' high school years.

Another exciting event was the eighth grade field trip to the wilds of Cohasset Harbor. As part of a multi-disciplinary experience, students took a look at their community from several different perspectives by working their way through a series of stations set up throughout the harbor area. Included were a trip on the John Warren 11, a 26' Monomoy surfboat, an introduction to various artifacts at the Maritime Museum, a visit to the Captain's Walk that circles the harbor, and the Minot Light restoration on Governor's Island.

This was a field trip that involved a variety of disciplines: students made and recorded observations about historic landmarks and geographic features of their community for social studies, produced a written project for English, created a detailed sketch of a maritime artifact for art, learned the teamwork necessary to crew a surfboat, used a block and tackle to understand the concept of mechanical advantage for Technology Education, and held hands to circle the Minot Light replica in order to analyze the mathematical formula for finding circumference.

The ropes course at the high school has been the scene for many activities also. Mr. Buckley spent one week last summer at the International Mountain Equipment School in order to work toward his certification as an instructor. Consequently, Mr. Buckley and Mr. Ford conducted a physical education class for juniors and seniors entitled "An Introduction to Rock Climbing/Ropes Course." Consisting of classroom as well as practical training on the ropes course equipment, the unit culminated in a field trip to the rock ledge that overlooks the Border street Bridge. Furthermore, on Sunday, Nov. 7, Mrs. Porter and Mr. Buckley invited all new students and their families to experience the thrill that comes from scaling the heights and scampering through the treetops. This doesn't seem to be the typical "Welcome to Your New School" program, giving a whole new meaning to the phrase, "String 'em up!" Mr. Buckley has asked me to announce the 2nd Annual "Turkey in the Trees" event taking place this Sunday, Nov. 21, 1 to 4 p.m. This is meant as an introduction for all families in the community interested in and/or curious about the adventure involved in the ropes course.

The faculty in the various schools have been active outside the classroom as well. Maureen Alcott, Marian Atkinson, Linda Gill, and Denise Yess have capped a year developing strategies of inclusion at Joseph Osgood. As a result of their work, they have been invited to present a workshop at the Massachusetts Statewide Council for Exceptional Children.

In addition, about a dozen teachers are attending a course entitled "Understanding Teaching," which examines a panorama of skills necessary to create an effective classroom environment. Every three-hour class focuses on a number of concrete strategies to improve student motivation, comprehension, and discipline. The insights into the process of teaching itself are invaluable. The department chairs are also taking a course consisting of six eight-hour sessions investigating the impact of Jon Saphier's concept of "the Skillful Teacher" on the new evaluation instrument that has been instituted this year.

On the side of technology, the Math Lab is now up and running! Consisting of 20 workstations with a central server, the lab is a wonderful counterpart to the writing lab on the other side of the building. It is dedicated specifically to a wide range of math skills. In fact, classes at every level have already visited the lab far work sessions. The math department has been working throughout the term to develop ways of incorporating this new tool into their curriculum, helped by a mobile presenter and computer that can travel to different classrooms and still be hooked into the network.

Mr. Walsh pointed out that the software installed includes spreadsheet capabilities, graphing of complex functions, math simulators, "Turbo Pascal" (sounds like an option on a Porsche), and Fractal Creation (now I'm really lost.) A crucial element in the setting up and running of the lab has been Ms. Jane Auster, the math aide. She has visited other schools in order to explore the software that they have found effective, spoken with industry representatives, and worked out a variety of "bugs" that are inherent in setting up any network. Every math teacher I spoke with had nothing but praise for her efforts and commented that Cohasset is indeed lucky to have a person of her talent and versatility working with us.

In the Language Department, the annual foreign student exchange has just concluded. A joint venture between Cohasset and Scituate, the program invited about 40 French students to stay with host families in these communities for two weeks. They came from St. Maur, a small town southeast of Paris. Aside from attending classes in order to get a taste of American education, the French students visited The Museum of Fine Arts, The Fogg Museum at Harvard, Lawson Tower in Scituate, and, of course, the various malls in the area. Mr. Fortin tells me that at least one young lady wants to "defect," and make Cohasset High her adopted home. In the spring, students from Cohasset and Scituate will travel to St. Maur to experience the same introduction to a culture different from their own.

I've just been notified that my talents are needed outside to finish raking the leaves. There is much that I meant to discuss, including the School Council that has had its first meeting, the food drive currently taking place at the high school and Joseph Osgood, the drama production of "What I Did Last Summer," the Oxfam dance-a-thon to fight world hunger this Friday, November 19, from 5 to midnight at the high school, and the soccer team that made it to the South Sectional finals, but perhaps these are matters for another column. Until next time, have a bountiful Thanksgiving!

Beyond the Basal

Deer Hill teachers Judy Ritts and Marj Murphy recently presented a workshop to the Plymouth County Educational Association. The workshop was entitled "Beyond the Basal: Developing Literature Study Guides." The guides include vocabulary, schemata, making predictions, metacognition skills and basic study skills as well as literal, inferential and critical thinking questions.

Crossland to perform

Dave Crossland is one of Cohasset's best kept secrets, yet he has a national and even international following.

"Breakfasting" outside Banbury, England, this summer, Ron Emmons, Cohasset High School's drama director, was asked where he was from by the young Irishman from Limerick seated beside him.

When he said Cohasset, Massachusetts, Emmons was surprised to hear the response, "Ah, yes. Dave Crossland." The Irishman, who later confessed to being a radio announcer and writer, had met Dave Crossland only through his extraordinary recording, "Here's to the Ride," and was jealous of those of us who have the opportunity to hear Dave in person and follow his continuing development as a songwriter and performer. He will have even more reason to be jealous when told that Dave Crossland will be presenting an evening of his music at Cohasset High School on Friday, Nov. 26, at 8 p.m.

Produced in conjunction with the Cohasset Drama Workshop, profits from the performance will be used to fund the high school drama program.

Dave Crossland's performing tours take him to all the major cities in the country, but he says that he's most looking forward to performing for his neighbors in his adopted hometown. His best-known song is, in fact, "Minot's Light" and was inspired by the story of that famous lighthouse outside Cohasset harbor.

Praise for Crossland's work has come from this side of the Atlantic as well. A review in one of the most prestigious magazines covering folk and acoustic music, "Dirty Linen," said, "Dave Crossland seems to have come out of nowhere (actually he's from Ohio via Massachusetts) with a nice set of original songs and a voice with heaps of range and style." "Sing Out," the bible of folk music, described Crossland as "a powerful contemporary singer-songwriter." A writer in Ohio went on to say, "He is an incredible young artist with a voice like watered silk.... Dave's music will move you."

Hear Dave Crossland for yourself at Cohasset High School Nov. 26. Get in on Cohasset's best kept secret.

Outdoor classroom

The Joseph Osgood School has formed a collaboration with the staff of the South Shore Natural Science Center to assist in creating an environmental education program using the school's nature trail as a natural classroom. Throughout the seasons, the faculty will participate in trail walks and activities with the science center to investigate the school's nature trail.

This training will foster opportunities for teachers to enhance students' learning about natural science through an inquiry process that reflects the importance of viewing and studying nature as a topic across all areas of the elementary school curriculum.

The South Shore Natural Science Center will guide classes K-3 on the nature trail and focus on seasonal changes.

This spring, the Osgood faculty science committee and science center staff will co-design a curriculum guide in conjunction with the school's curriculum for the integration and use of the trail.

This partnership is supported through the Massachusetts Department of Education, Dwight D. Eisenhower Grant and the Cohasset Parent-School Organization.

Workshop a success

Twenty-five parents attended a two-day parenting workshop in the Deer Hill School library led by Frank Fitzgerald, an adjustment counselor for the Cohasset elementary schools. The program was based on psychologist Lee Cantor's "Assertive Discipline For Parents."

This style of parenting focuses on the behaviors the adult wants to change in their child. The parent assertively communicates to the child what is expected of him, consistently provides discipline if behavior is not changed and gives a lot of praise and positive reinforcement when the child does what the parent wants. The key component to Dr. Cantor's approach is to develop a systematic plan on which both parents agree and to use this plan every time it is necessary.

Mr. Fitzgerald held a question and answer period during each training session. Several parents have asked for follow-up sessions. These meetings have been scheduled and will be a combination of instruction, a roundtable of ideas on parenting issues, as well as a support group for those who attend. Another parenting course will be offered in January, 1994. Call Mr. Fitzgerald at 383-6115 for information.

Help us, please!

Presently, supplies in area food pantries are critically low. And as each day passes, the situation worsens.

Could you help us? A donation of nonperishable food (preferably canned goods) is very much needed and would be extremely appreciated by those less fortunate. Donations of cash in lieu of food would also be very much appreciated. You may drop off your donations at either our main office in Cohasset or at our branch in North Scituate.

Thank You from all of us at Cohasset Savings for helping us to help others.

The Mature Traveler's Club will meet from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 21 at the Hingham Public Library in the Whiton room.

Linda Lyster will speak about the Evergreen Travel Club and Home Stays. Call 545-2735 for information.

Writing from the heart

The Hingham Community Center is sponsoring a one-day writing class from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 20 with Cathy Corcoran

Corcoran will incorporate in-class writing exercises, music, meditation and memory exercises to facilitate writing. This class is for "closet writers" or people interested in beginning or keeping up with journal writing.

The cost is $25. For information call 749-9786.

Pierson to Person show set

Mary Pratt of Quincy, former professional baseball player, will discuss her years in baseball and her advocacy of women in sports in the first part of "Pierson to Person" Thursday, Nov. 18 beginning at 8 p.m. on Channels 5 and 3.

The second segment guests will be Barbara Appel Siddall, Andrew Young, Margaret Michelle LaCroix and Barry Scott Hall from Uniting People in Pain Society discussing chronic pain.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening. Those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Rd., Scituate by 7:30 p.m. For information call 545-2500.

CCC programs planned

Storyteller, Valerie Devine will present "Pre-school Stories with Mother Goose" from 10:30 to 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 19 at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main St. Children ages 3 and up will become involved in familiar stories through song and fingerplay. Admission is $2.

Dance directors Donna Joyce and Tiffany Zanboni Madeiras are accepting registrations for the second session of Dance 93-94 program at the center. Classes for tiny tots to teens in ballet, jazz, street funk and creative movement are offered.

Call 383-0088 for information.

Parent support is here

Frank Fitzgerald, adjustment counselor at the Deer Hill and Osgood schools will lead parent support groups on a bi-weekly basis beginning at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 17 at the Unitarian First Parish House, 23 No. Main St. Format and topics are open to discussion.

These group meetings are open to all Cohasset parents. There is no need to register. For information call Frank Fitzgerald at 383-6115.

CCC to Celebrate '94

The Cohasset Community Center is planning its own version of first night called "Celebrate '94."

The Brown Bag Opera will be performing twice. At 5:30 p.m. they will present "Hansel and Gretel," perfect for young children and complete with a witch and gingerbread house that unfolds before them. The children are delighted at the end to perform the dance with the Brown Bag Opera ensemble. At 6:30 p.m. they will perform Bizet's "Carmen," a popular opera geared for all ages.

New this year will be Chuck Norris and his blues band. This saxaphone quartet is a local favorite at the Yard Rock Cafe and the Four Winds playing rock, blues and jazz. Returning this year are The Baroque Trio, La Sonnerie, Smiling Faces Productions Crew of Magicians, Jugglers and their amazing confetti firework display, Rick Shea's Bank, Carolyn Curtis' Jazz Quartet and Dance Visions dance troupe. There will also be clowns, face painters, hay rides and food courts.

Buttons will be on sale at the community center beginning Nov. 27 for $5 and allows entry to all events. Children under 5 are free. From Dec. 20 through 31 remaining buttons will be $10 each.

All food and novelty items are sold for fund-raising by local non-profit groups. Anyone interested may contact Rhonda Myers at 383-0088.

All events take place in the community center, art center, Cohasset common, Depot Court, First Parish Second Congregational Church, St. Stephens and town hall. Shuttle service will be provided.

Anyone interested in volunteering for an hour or wishing to be a business sponsor should call the center at 383-0088.

Order T-day pies

Once again, it's time to order your Thanksgiving pies from the Appalachia Service Project volunteers. Your support is needed to help the local teenagers and advisors raise the needed funding for the June of '94 A.S.P. trip. Pumpkin ($7), apple ($7) and pecan ($9) pies will be available.

The Appalachia Service Project is a home repair project in the central Appalachian Mountains. We have enjoyed such strong support from the churches and members of this community and we appreciate this emotional and financial backing. It helps us continue this vital program which not only benefits so many families in Appalachia, but is a wonderful program for the high school students and advisors who volunteer from this south shore community.

Order forms are available at local churches or call 383-0345 or 383-9325 to order by phone. Pies are available on Sunday afternoon Nov. 21 for pick-up at the 2nd Congregational Church or for delivery.

Village fair, Dec. 4

Throughout Cohasset preparations are underway for the Village Fair on Cohasset Common, Saturday, Dec. 4, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. All the churches on the common, in addition to Panagia Greek Orthodox Church and Beechwood Congregational, are working to make this annual event a fun kickoff to the Cohasset holiday season.

At Second Congregational Church the elves are producing an eclectic assortment of items. Handcrafts include everything from tutus and bridal veils to pine cone wreathes, Christmas tree skirts, wooden snowmen and Santas. Plans are underway for an old-fashioned New England Clam Chowder Bar, a food and candy table and special activities for the children.

St. Stephen's Church will again offer its very successful book sale. The committee is now accepting book donations which can be left at the church on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 8 to 11 a.m. and from 2 to 4 p.m. Tapes and CDs as well as books for all ages are welcome (except for encyclopedias, old textbooks and condensed books) as well as specialty magazines such as gourmet, craft and hobby.

A Swedish coffee shop will highlight offerings at First Parish Unitarian where cooks are readying their recipes for Scandinavian coffee breads, cakes and gourmet coffee with plenty of embellishments. The parish will also offer an old-style "jumble" sale, a bit of everything from attic treasures, closet clear-outs, and basement bargains to garage recycle items.

This year for the first time the Cohasset PSO will be sponsoring a "Secret Room" in the Watermelon Room at St. Stephen's. For children only, kids may enter the room to purchase small holiday gifts for their families and friends. The gifts will be wrapped by volunteers before the children leave the "Secret Room."

A variety of delectable Greek holiday food as well as greens and wreaths will be presented by the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church at the Town Hall.

Off the common, the Beechwood Congregational Church will offer a variety of holiday items for sale at their church on Church Street, Beechwood.

Bridal review planned

The South Shore Country Club will present a bridal preview reception from noon to 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 21.

The reception provides table top displays of all services to enhance a wedding reception. Businesses will be present to display their products and answer questions.

Future brides and members of the wedding party are welcome. Admission is free but reservations must be made by calling 749-1720.

Homeopathy lecture set

The Wah Lum Academy of Cohasset will host guest speaker Jane Cicchetti at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 19 at the First Parish Church in Norwell Center. Cicchetti is a nationally recognized homeopathic educator and consultant. Her lecture will focus on Homeopathy as a possible solution to many of the problems of today's health care system, including the medicines themselves.

Homeopathy is a two hundred year old science which entails the use of safe, natural remedies producing no side effects, to stimulate the body's healing response.

On Saturday, Nov. 20 and Sunday, Nov. 21 she will teach a beginners workshop in homeopathic acute care at the Wah Lum Academy.

For information call John Loupos at 383-6822.

Broad Cove performs

Four Cohasset singers will be starting their celebration of the Christmas season as part of the Broad Cove Chorale's Christmas concert Friday, Dec. 3 at 8 p.m. at Broad Cove House, 66 Lincoln St., Hingham.

Chorale members Deedee Rousseau, Lisa Koed, Susan Cameron and Jane Forrer have been singing on Wednesday mornings with women from other South Shore communities to prepare this festive concert which will take place in the large music room in Hingham's Broad Cove House, built by David Lincoln in 1733.

Margo Euler will direct the program which features carol arrangements for women's voices, plus chamber music by a woodwind trio and carol singing for all. A festive candlelit reception will follow the concert. Tickets are $9, in advance only, from chorale members or Nobles Camera in Hingham Square, or call 749-6561 and leave a message.

Authors to be at Buttonwood

Buttonwood for Kids, 28 South St., Hingham will have its grand opening from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 20.

Hingham authors and illustrators, Marc Brown and Laurie Krasny Brown will join the celebration from 10 a.m. to noon to sign their books. Marc Brown is best known for his books about Arthur the aardvark.

Those unable to attend may order signed books by calling 749-2665.

To subscribe to the Cohasset Mariner call 837-3500.

What is there about Hollywood?

Henshaw

Tom Henshaw

When I was a lad, the hero of every red-blooded American boy was Errol Flynn, the handsome and virile movie profile who strutted and postured through such epics as "Captain Blood" and "Robin Hood."

My friends and I would leave the old Weymouth Theater in the Landing, leaping and slashing our way home through hordes of Caribbean pirates and the evil minions of the Sheriff of Nottingham.

All that changed one day when our hero was hauled into court, charged with the statutory rape of two otherwise willing but not overly bright teen-aged girls aboard his yacht.

I still remember one of them, a Peggy Satterlee, testifying that Errol's pet name for her was "my little strumpet."

"Do you know what a strumpet is?" she was asked.

"Oh, yes," she said. "It's a little cake the British have with their tea."

At the same time, everyone's movie goddess was a breathtakingly beautiful Swedish actress named Ingrid Bergman — yes, the same one who urged Dooley Wilson to "play it, play 'As Time Goes By,'" in "Casablanca."

All that changed, too, when, after an interlude on the romantic Mediterranean isle of Stromboli, Ingrid turned up pregnant by Director Roberto Rossellini, a man who was definitely not her husband.

"Second mate on a Swedish tramp," they sneered of Rossellini.

I thought of Flynn, who died at the age of 50 in bed with a 17-year-old girl, and Bergman, who later married Rossellini and then dumped him, the other day when the 23-year-old actor River Phoenix died of a drug overdose with the best of his career yet ahead of him.

This after Michael Jackson is rocked by charges he molested a 13-year-old boy and Woody Allen escapes similar charges leveled by his SO, Mia Farrow, but goes right on playing house with Soon-Yi, Mia's adopted daughter.

What is there about Hollywood and show business that brings out what once was thought to be — and still is in some circles — the worst in us?

And what is there about us that makes us want to read every word of scandal that has a Hollywood dateline whether it's true or not?

It seems like it has always been that way.

In the days before the movies talked, the two most popular comedians on the screen were Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, all 370 pounds of him, and Charlie Chaplin, famed as "The Little Tramp."

Arbuckle's career ended in 1921 after an all-night orgy in a San Francisco hotel suite during which a party girl named Virginia Rappe died of internal injuries, reportedly raped by a champagne bottle. Arbuckle was acquitted of manslaughter.

Chaplin himself, whose second wife, Lita, was 17 and the mother of his child when he married her, faced down a paternity suit by protégé Joan Barry, 18 (but was ordered to pay child support anyway) and eventually fled into voluntary exile in Europe.

The list in long and lengthening.

Wallace Reid, the River Phoenix of his day, dead of morphine poisoning at 31; Marilyn Monroe, a overdose of drugs at 36; comedian John Belushi, likewise; James Dean, in the crash of his speeding sports car; Freddy Prinze ("Chico and the Man") by his own hand.

And down the road there's Heidi ("Madam to the Stars") Fleiss and her five little black books, now in the hands of the police, and her comment:

"There's a lot of rich and powerful men in L.A. They should be scared."

Musings

By John H. Cutler

❑ The wine may remember, but the vodka forgets.

❑ If I ever have a monk for dinner, the liqueur I'd serve would be Benedictine.

❑ Can you imagine Mae West a sweet 16?

❑ I have no utilization for people who say utilize when they mean use.

❑ Earrings reflect a woman's character.

❑ There are some congressmen, who, if their constituents were cannibals, would promise them missionaries for dinner.

❑ Alice Roosevelt Longworth was credited with saying, of Thomas E. Dewey: "How can the Republican Party nominate a man who looks like the bridegroom on a wedding cake?" Not so. It was Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior under FDR, who first said it.

IT USED TO BE, AT 13, LITTLE BOYS BECAME INTERESTED IN LITTLE GIRLS.

Boys and girls used to use straws to sip sodas at the drug store.

Now they cut the straws in half and use them to snort drugs deep into their nostrils.

Times have changed. Our children need our help.

We need to talk with our children. And talk. And talk. This way, we'll learn what they think abou t drugs. What they know about them. What they don't know.

Then, once we understand their perspective, we'll be in a better position to offer our own. Then we'll be able to talk about the dangers of various drugs. And about what our children can do to avoid them.

It takes courage to talk to them like this. And to do it effectively, it takes homework—like reading articles, attending meetings and talking to other parents. Otherwise, our children won't see us as informed sources. And they'll get their answers elsewhere.

As a parent, you can get answers to your own questions by contacting your local agency on drug abuse.

PARTNERSHIP FOR A DRUG-FREE AMERICA

But they're only trying to help...

By Steve Adams
South Look staff

Rare is the week that goes by without another feverish report on the insidious influence of the "Religious Right" in politics. With a breed of logic that Joe McCarthy would have loved, anyone who opposes radical sex education curricula is immediately branded a religious nut. The religious nuts themselves, according to the likes of a Connie Chung, shouldn't be permitted to participate in the democratic process at all. I'm not sure which liberal virtue — open-mindedness to different ideas, tolerance of opposing views, a reluctance to "judge" others — is demonstrated by this attitude. But trying to understand the mind of a true liberal is not an appetizing prospect.

"When you and I 'open our pocketbooks,' government largess is ladled out to organizations which, despite their 'non-profit' status, provide comfortable and risk-free career opportunities for the professional pestering class. They wring their hands about societal inequities — but only on our dime..."

To many media bed-wetters, the "Religious Right" is an alarming phenomenon. They talk as though the concept of like-minded people banding together to promote a common cause were intrinsically evil, hopelessly conspiratorial. Along the same lines, conservative electoral victories are regarded not as a mandate by the voters, but a cabal promoted by "well-organized," "powerful" fringe groups like the Christian Coalition.

Meanwhile, liberal special interest groups are regarded as harmless or even downright groovy, owing to their terrific "good intentions" (and just ask them on this point). The degree to which liberal groups are accorded a free ride became obvious to anyone who had the misfortune to tune in C-Span recently for the "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies" conference, a "Dateline NBC" exposé about which I patiently await. The "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies" confab featured various coalitions, sundry collaboratives and boatloads of "non-profit" do-gooder groups all tangentially devoted to the pursuit of... "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies."

adams' ribs

The keynote speaker was our current Surgeon General, the lovely Joycelyn Elders, who is one sharp customer. In Arkansas, she tried to control a venereal disease epidemic caused by sexual promiscuity by showering defective condoms on high school students.

Elders reassured one and all that she indeed was in favor of (all together now)... "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies." (As P.J. O'Rourke recently pointed out, "Note how the left has quit trying to be a vanguard to anybody large or healthy enough to punch them in the nose; modern Bolshies pester the crippled, the diseased, and, of course, kids.")

Elders repeated the mantra "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies" so frequently it appeared she was convinced its mere iteration would be sufficient to improve the health of America's child-bearing and infant populations. Condom Queen recited a melancholy litany of the ills afflicting the currently unhealthy mothers and babies of America. In vain, I waited for our preeminent public health official to share a single concrete example of just how she plans to summon forth a nation of "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies." What seemed like hours passed. Onward Elders prattled. Efforts to activate the liberal guilt mechanism were made. Studies finding a higher infant mortality rate among blacks were indignantly proclaimed. (Elders chose not to share another finding of the same study, that the elevated mortality rate was linked to a higher incidence of drug and alcohol use during pregnancy by black women.)

On and on kazoo-voice droned. A thick fog of sanctimony and self-righteousness threatened to coalesce in a critical mass of peevishness. Finally, a practical suggestion interrupted the parade of platitudes. "People need to open their pocketbooks," nasalized Top Doc.

And that was that. The "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies" participants arose and figuratively slapped each other on the back for their outstanding altruism and sensitivity to the needs of the underprivileged. None seemed phased that Elders had glossed over a key element of the program— doing anything helpful. But then, the "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies" conference had little to do with the health of mothers and even less to do with the health of babies. The point of "Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies," of course, was an excuse for public-sector tax sponges to try to justify their agencies' inexplicable existence.

When you and I "open our pocketbooks," government largess is ladled out to organizations which, despite their "non-profit" status, provide comfortable and risk-free career opportunities for the professional pestering class. They wring their hands about societal inequities — but only on our dime. They hold conferences and agree with each other, fervently, about what a lousy hand they've been dealt. An increase in the incidence of nose-bleeds in the spotted owl community prompts calls for a new government program. At the first whiff of a budget cut they will howl.

Their greatest fear is that someday they might be forced to get a job. The most desultory clerk at Wal-Mart does more to improve our standard of living than all the Joycelyn Elders of the world put together and stacked end upon end.

If this were a conference of the "Religious Right," about 10 seconds would elapse before Peter Jennings broke into regularly scheduled programming to alert us to this "well-organized," "powerful" coalition of right-wing groups attempting to gain political influence.

But when every other tax dodge inside the Beltway gets together with the only common cause being yet another expansion of job security in the public sector, this is called "a public service." After all, they're only trying to help.

New town sports fields on track

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

In the summer it can feel as though you are running through soft, beach sand.

When the sky opens up and the rain falls, it turns into a quagmire.

And during the spring season the Cohasset High track team is often times forced to hold its meets at Scituate's outdoor facility.

But recreational joggers and competitive runners alike may be in for a surprise if funds donated by local businesses for a new all-weather track are approved by town meeting.

Steve Endris, a member of the recreation commission, confirmed Monday night that the commission plans to gather input from the town's various boards for a propose acquisition of land behind the high school where the facility could be built.

The preliminary plan is to purchase six acres of the Music Circus presents case for liquor license

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

South Shore Playhouse Associates, doing business as the South Shore Music Circus, brought the troops along Monday as the non-profit corporation pushed for approval of its wine and malt beverage license application.

About 50 people — many representing area charitable organizations which have benefitted from Music Circus grants — turned out for the public hearing in the town hall auditorium. Proponents of granting the liquor license outnumbered opponents, who were mostly abutters, by a margin of about two-to-one.

After allowing comment from both sides, selectmen closed the hearing, a parliamentary procedure that precludes any further testimony. The board waived the

State cigarette tax money to help snuff out smoking

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Health agents in 14 area communities are about to upgrade their anti-smoking efforts. With state funds raised from the cigarette tax approved last year, communities from Braintree to Plymouth will combine forces to form inter-town policies, conduct educational programs and even carry out sting operations to crack down on juvenile tobacco sales.

The state contract, worth $300,000 over a 10-month period, is currently under review by Hingham's town counsel. After the scheduled signing Nov. 15, the South Shore Collaborative can begin to hire its staff.

When the state first issued a request for proposals, only nine communities belonged to the Collaborative: Hingham, Scituate, Cohasset, Hull, Braintree, Marshfield, Norwell, Hanover and Duxbury. Plymouth, Holbrook, Abington, Rockland and Kingston jumped aboard this summer.

Cohasset Skippers set to roll into Hull

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Nobody can tell Cohasset High football coach Ted MacDermott that the Thanksgiving Day football game is not a special day for coaches and players alike.

For him, it's the best part of the season, and for more reasons than just coaching a team that has been playing its most inspired ball over the course of the past month.

MacDermott was a member of the 1956 Weymouth High School team that upset Brockton, 48-14, in the Thanksgiving Day game to win the state title.

MacDermott celebrated his 35th class reunion a year ago. You can guess when it was held.

Reuse bags at Stop & Shop

A reuse initiative is being offered to patrons of Stop and Shop. Customers may give a donation to The Nature Conservancy by bringing in a reusable bag when they shop to carry their purchased items in. Stop and Shop will contribute the cost of the bag to the conservancy.

Last year contributions totalled $27,000.

What's open/what's closed

Thanksgiving Day will be celebrated Thursday, Nov. 25.

On that day, all retail stores and supermarkets will be closed, along with liquor stores. Banks will be closed for the day, along with manufacturing businesses, the stock market, schools, libraries and all state and municipal buildings.

There will be no mail delivery on Thanksgiving. Taverns and bars will remain open for the day.

All Mariner Newspaper offices will be closed Thanksgiving. They will reopen Friday, Nov. 26 at 9 a.m.

POW/MIA Square slated

At the request of Tom Wigmore, Commander of The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron No. 118, George H. Mealy Post 118, selectmen approved placement of a sign at the Depot Court/North Main St. island.

Selectmen were unanimous after they were assured the sign would not be an obstruction to traffic or conflict with the safety sign on the island.

The American Legion voted to dedicated the Depot/N. Main St. square as POW/MIA Square at its last meeting, Wigmore said.

"To honor our servicemen missing-in-action, or prisoners of war, we would like to erect a wooden sing, which we will have professionally done," Wigmore said.

The proposed mahogany sign is double-sided and hand-carved. It will face the community center and depot court (where the old post office was), he explained.

Wigmore said the Depot/N. Main St. island is the only one in town not currently dedicated.

Entrance and exit issue

The town safety officer will be asked to review a request by town hall employees that the south access to the town hall parking lot be the entrance and the north access, the exit. Several employees have expressed concern about cars exiting and entering the south access.

"It seems very easy to have one be the entrance and one be the exit — it's too narrow to have cars going both directions," Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon pointed out that signs "that may not be pretty" could be an issue.

Historical raise noted

The historical commission has appealed to the advisory board to a raise.

The commission would like to raise the town's contribution to $200, Chairman Noel Ripley said in a letter to advisors.

"One of the main responsibilities of the Cohasset Historical Commission is to inventory the older properties and the historical assets of the town," he said. "Each year our entire budget goes to this purpose and primarily for the required photographs to be submitted with the forms to the Massachusetts Historical Commission.

"We have been barely getting by each year and curtailing and holding over the the next fiscal year," he said.

Music Circus presents case for liquor license

30-day window in which they must make a decision until seven days after the zoning board votes on the issue.

The Music Circus, which is in a residential area off Sohier Street, must apply for a special permit from the zoning board because the granting of a liquor license is an expansion of a non-conforming use. The zoning hearing is Dec. 2 and that board has 45 days to make a decision.

Bruce Tuthill, president of South Shore Playhouse Associates, said that a beer and wine license would add about $60,000 a year to the "bottom line" through beverage sales and increased ticket sales. He said the Music Circus needs the money and service of offering beer and wine to stay competitive.

"We are not immune to financial pressures," Tuthill said.

General manager Vincent Longo said that the 2300-seat Music Circus would limit the time that its patrons can purchase alcohol to the hour before the scheduled performance and intermission. Beer and wine would be available at the four concession stands at the site and alcohol would only be served by employees who are 21 years or older, he said. A picket fence would be installed to encircle the area and keep people from sneaking in from the outside. No alcohol would be available during matinees. Longo also said the Music Circus would have security guards at each distribution point.

"The number one complaint I've had is 'why can't my wife and I enjoy a glass of wine?'" Longo said, adding a beer would sell for about $4.

Those opposed were concerned about parking, traffic, and noise problems which they see being exacerbated by adding the availability of alcohol to the entertainment facility.

"(After shows now)I see cars jamming on their breaks and people hollering — add alcohol and that scenario in my opinion can turn deadly," said Joseph Rosano, 107 Sohier St.

Longo pointed out that detail police officers do a fine job at clearing out the parking lot. He said he will try to alleviate parking problems in outside lots.

South Shore Playhouse Associates also owns the Cape Cod Melody Tent which has a liquor license. Clark Chatterton, 9 Red Gate Lane, is the concession manager at both sites.

State cigarette tax money to help snuff out smoking

"It allows a large number of communities to work together as a unit to reduce tobacco use," said Cohasset health agent Joseph Godzik.

"We hope that it'll impact adolescents and educate them and tell them smoking is not good for them," he continued.

The Collaborative is hoping to reduce adolescent smoking by 50 percent by 1998.

Originally, the grant was to be for $189,000 for the nine original communities, but the state decided to boost the funding to $1.50 per capita for each community or group, a total of $300,000, according to Hingham Health Agent Bruce Capman.

The Collaborative is still hammering out the fine details of the plan, but they already agreed that they would hire one full time project director and a full-time secretary and three part-time educator/enforcers which would be out in the communities each day.

"We would rely on the program director to coordinate with the three educators to get into work-sites, working with adolescent groups," Capman said.

The program director would also seek out target groups for no-smoking campaigns, such as pregnant women who smoke, Capman added.

Hingham is lead town in the Collaborative, handling the administrative tasks to get the program going. Recently, Capman began to form sub-committees within the Collaborative to handle tasks like hiring staff and developing policies and finding office space — the Collaborative may rent rooms at the Jenkins School in Scituate.

Cohasset will be one of the towns on the subcommittee to write the job descriptions and the job policies of the new staff.

"We should be doing that shortly," Godzik said.

Once the Collaborative can draft a uniform policy, it will be easier to enforce throughout the South Shore. New businesses would not be tempted to start-up a business in a neighboring community to avoid more stringent policies.

Sting operations will help monitor and prevent situations where youths are purchasing tobacco products at drug stores.

Any policy proposed by the Collaborative would have to be approved by each of the 14 boards before it could be enforced. The transition to a uniform policy will take time, Godzik cautioned.

Hingham and Cohasset already have 75 percent non-smoking workplace requirements, and Norwell has the most stringent no-smoking bylaw to date.

Smoking is forbidden in all public places, workplaces with three or more people and restaurants, unless they possess a special permit. For several months, the Norwell health board has been in turmoil over how to enforce the bylaw.

However, Marshfield, Rockland and Hanover have no set no-smoking policies thus far, Godzik said.

"In the towns where we (don't) already have regulations we may have to implement regulations slowly," Godzik said.

Some businesses have taken a leading position against smoking. Local pharmacist Rocky Tenaglia, who recently purchased the Hingham Center Pharmacy, is phasing out tobacco products because of their potential health risk. Tenaglia has a similar policy in his Hull and Scituate pharmacies.

"It bothers me when somebody comes in and they're hacking and coughing and they ask me for a recommendation for a cough (treatment) and then they say 'By the way, give a pack of cigarettes.' "

"I applaud him," Capman said. "I hope that other pharmacies would follow suit."

Other smoke-free businesses in Hingham include The British Relief and the Atlantic Bagel and Coffee Co., Capman said.

Godzik was skeptical when asked if Cohasset pharmacies may adopt a similar policy.

"There is only one (locally) owned pharmacy in Cohasset. The others are bigger— it would have to be a corporate policy."

However, he noted that Kimball's By The Sea went smoke-free when Cohasset adopted its smoking bylaw.

School board: who do advisors think they are?

By Sean Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

Advisory board questions have rankled the school board.

As part of its budgetary planning process, advisors are asking all town boards questions about money matters.

School board member Ralph Kidder said in some cases advisors shouldn't be asking.

"I am troubled by some of these questions because they represent a fundamental misunderstanding on the part of the advisory committee of its role," Kidder said.

He specifically referred to the questions:

'How are you using money for inservice education to improve curriculum? How and when will you be able to document that these expenditures are improving the skills and knowledge of the students in Cohasset? And do you have any hard data relating Cohasset school budgets and student achievement?'

Kidder said the advisory committee appears to be overstepping its role by entering into the arena of curriculum planning and professional development.

> 'Certainly at the federal level we have a separation of powers, and I believe we have a separation of responsibilities at the local level.'
> — School committee member Ralph Kidder.

"Certainly at the federal level we have a separation of powers, and I believe we have a separation of responsibilities at the local level," Kidder added.

Fellow board member Kenneth Wilcox was equally critical.

"This represents a fundamental misunderstanding on the part of the advisory committee regrading what we are trying to do educationally," Wilcox said.

School board members said they wanted to cooperative fully with inquiries dealing with fiscal planning but are hesitant to respond to questions which deal with the board's role regarding professional development and curriculum.

The board asked Supt. Stephen Hart to prepare answers to the questions and submit them to the school committee for review.

In other business, Chair Nancy Sandell and member Barbara Bliss reported they will review all school policies in an attempt to develop a uniform approach to rules, regulations, student handbooks, and other matters through the town's three schools.

The board also discussed planning for future expenses such as removing the underground oil tanks on school property, special education costs, and the possibility of having to purchase new busses. Preliminary budget figures for fiscal year 1995, which begins July 1, were also discussed.

SHARE is Thanksgiving 12 months a year

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

As the nation sits down to a Thanksgiving feast, Hingham and Cohasset SHARE volunteers will have more to be thankful for: their spirit of community and the knowledge they are bringing people closer together.

SHARE (Self-Help and Resource Exchange), a national program founded 10 years ago in San Diego, helps to bring communities closer together by exchanging community service for low-priced food.

"SHARE allows someone on a fixed income to purchase $35 worth of food for $13," said Cohasset Host Site Coordinator John Kierce. In return, SHARE asks participants to perform two hours of community service.

According to Sylvia Mackenzie, host site coordinator for the First Baptist Church in Hingham, community service is "anything you do to help someone and not get paid for it."

Service could mean baby-sitting a neighbor's child for two hours, taking an elderly person to the doctor, or volunteering at the library for an afternoon.

"A lot of people do community service and they never know it," she said.

Share New England, a local chapter serving six states, started in April 1991. It first distributed 2,100 food packages to 32 neighborhoods. This month, SHARE New England distributed 33,800 packages to 384 host sites in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

"We're exploding," said Joanne Cavatorta, host community developer for Rhode Island and part of Plymouth County. New England SHARE employs about 11 paid staff and hundreds of volunteers, she said.

A Hingham resident, she has served with New England SHARE since its beginning.

However, SHARE is not as strong in Cohasset and Hingham, largely because of the stigma that SHARE is for low or fixed income households.

"It's for anyone," Kierce said. "We have people in our town from both sides of the track that participate in SHARE New England," he said.

Some Jerusalem Road residents are SHARE participants, he continued. Kierce knows of families who volunteer their time to serve the community and take their discount food package to unwed mothers in Hull, or the Mary Martha Center, in Hingham.

"We don't know what they really do with it," said Kierce, 27. "I purchase two for myself and my family."

The SHARE system is relatively simple: participants pre-pay $13 at the beginning of the month. An area representative, like Kierce, brings the cash to SHARE headquarters in Canton. Once the Canton headquarters has all the cash, it starts calling area food brokers to get the best deals that month. Deals are cut, and delivery dates are set for the end of the month. On D-Day (delivery day) a group of volunteers rise at 5:30 a.m. to pick up the food from Canton and deliver it to Cohasset. They divide the food equally in boxes and subscribers pick it up.

Volunteers from Cohasset High School, the Cub Scouts, and other local organizations often volunteer to help out on D-Day to pack the boxes. "We always look for help," Kierce said.

"It brings the group of people closer to the town itself," he continued. "It's enabling them to volunteer their time. They're happy to share their work and they're happy with the reward."

Kierce found personal satisfaction when he took over the host-site-coordinator's job for Cohasset SHARE last July.

"It's really taught me how to give back to the community. It's a great reward — a self-satisfaction that comes from helping," he said.

His father, Chris, and his brothers Dan, Paul and David, and sister Rosemarie Kierce, work for SHARE each month.

"It's a chance on a Saturday where the Kierce family will get together and find out what's going on," he said. Other Cohasset SHARE volunteers include Lou Simeone, Ham Tewksbury, Lot Bates, Wayne Schmidt, Helen Murphy, Mary Keating, Merle Graham, Fred

Quonahassit, Lawrence Wharf and Captain John Smith

By David Wadsworth
Senior curator, Cohasset Historical Society

Along the southern edge of Cohasset Harbor, one can see three ancient stone wharves. These date back in time to the era when Cohasset was a major center of maritime activity and large, family-owned fishing schooners crowded the harbor. Of the three old wharves, two are privately owned and one is owned by the town.

As we travel easterly along Border Street, the first of these historic structures to be visible is Lawrence Wharf, known as the "Town Landing." Lawrence Wharf has been owned by the Town of Cohasset since 1907.

A few feet further along is Bates Wharf with its adjacent Old Salt House. The last of the three is Towers Wharf, now the location of Chart House restaurant. Each of the three structures has its own unique history, and Lawrence Wharf appears extensively in the town's early public records.

Historic town records do not indicate the origin of Lawrence Wharf, but it most certainly existed in the early 1800s, and belonged to Cohasset merchant Eligha Doane.

April 1, 1851, Eligha's son James Cutler Doane deeded the wharf property to his son-in-law Josiah Oakes Lawrence. James C. Doane, soldier in the War of 1812, Selectman, Moderator, Representative, teacher and Lieutenant of Militia, was a ship-owner. Known as "Squire Doane," he was a prominent member of one of the merchant and ship-owning families of Cohasset. James Doane was born in 1788 and died in 1878.

Sarah Jane, a daughter, became the second wife of another Cohasset merchant, Josiah O. Lawrence following the death of his first wife. Of the five children born to Josiah and Sarah Jane, their daughter Susanna Wendell was married August 2, 1968 to Bela Pratt French of Weymouth. The wharf property passed to her ownership, and it was Susanna W. French of Weymouth who deeded the property to the Town of Cohasset in 1907. In the late 1800s, a fish packing shed was located on the wharf.

"Narrative History of Cohasset" vol. 2, notes that the fish packing shed was destroyed in a spectacular fire December 25, 1890.

In a deed dated June 27, 1907, Susanna W. French conveyed the wharf to the Town of Cohasset for the sum of $800. The original deed is located in the Town Archives. As a condition of the sale, the deed required that the property be called "Lawrence Wharf," and that it shall not be used for commercial purposes.

During the early 1900s, the Harbor Improvement Committee, a town committee, began an ambitious project to modernize the facilities at Cohasset Harbor, and to obtain the land around the edges of the cove for public use. Its plan never was completed, but some of the harbor's shoreline, including the old wharf, was obtained as the result of the committee's activities. Lawrence Wharf became known as the "Town Landing."

— Smith and several of his crew, after coming into Cohasset Harbor and meeting the resident Indians, had an unfortunate falling out with them which led to an exchange of arrows and musket shot as the Englishmen left the Harbor in their small boat.—

At Town Meeting of March 4, 1907, the voters appropriated the $800 to buy the wharf; at the meeting March 1, 1909, $350 was appropriated for the improvement of the wharf, and at the meeting of March 7, 1910, two Articles were voted; the first to build a shelter with seats on the wharf, the second to obtain a float stage and run for the Town Wharf. These activities were to be carried out by the Harbor Improvement Committee. The first project was to cost $500, the second one $300.

At about this time, the Committee on Town History verified that the English explorer and trader Captain John Smith had visited Cohasset Harbor briefly in the year 1614, while on a voyage along the New England coast. It was decided to place a memorial boulder with a tablet on Lawrence Wharf in honor of that visit.

The map Captain Smith drew of the coast clearly indicates the location of Cohasset, and his book, Description of New England mentions the stop made at "Quonahassit" (Algonquin Indian name meaning "Long Rocky Place.")

Smith and several of his crew, after coming into Cohasset Harbor and meeting the resident Indians, had an unfortunate falling out with them which led to an exchange of arrows and musket shot as the Englishmen left the Harbor in their small boat.

At a Selectmen's Meeting held May 7, 1914, Dr. Oliver H. Howe of the Committee on Town History reported to the board about the placing of the boulder and tablet to John Smith. The board voted to leave the matter in the hands of Dr. Howe, with authority to call on town officials for assistance if needed.

July 4th, 1914, the boulder and plaque were unveiled with an appropriate ceremony at the wharf. The text of the tablet quotes from Captain Smith's chronicle relating to the skirmish at Quonahassit: "We found the people in those parts very kinde, but in their fury no lesse valiant; and in Quonahassit falling out there with but one of them, he and three others crossed the harbor in a canoe to certain rocks whereby wee must passe, and there let flie their arrows for our shot, till wee were out of danger, yet one of them was slain and another shot through his thigh."

Thus, the English discovery of Cohasset, which ended in a quarrel of some magnitude has been commemorated by the boulder and tablet at Lawrence Wharf. The three old wharves on Border St., the John Smith Memorial and the nearby Old Salt House are listed in the "Survey of Historic Assets of Cohasset," compiled by the Cohasset Historical Commission.

Seat-belt law update

According to the Massachusetts Municipal Association, of which Cohasset is a member, the state could face $8.8 million in losses if the seat belt law currently before the legislature fails.

Massachusetts is one of just five states that have failed to enact a seat belt law and as a result the Commonwealth has lost $1.6 million if federal funds for transportation improvement since Oct. 1.

That amount will increase to $8.8 million for each new federal fiscal year that passes without a law on the books, the MMA said.

The MMA, which lobbies for cities and towns, voted to support the seat belt law.

In order to be cited, a driver would have to be pulled over for another offense, such as speeding, the MMA pointed out.

Name: Rebecca Bates-McArthur

Occupation: Mother and newly appointed recreation department "Summer Playground" five-to-seven year old age-level director.

Best day of your life: It's a toss up between the day I was married and when I had my two kids.

Most embarrassing moment: If I had one, I probably would have forgotten about it real fast.

Goal: To make the world a happier, more caring place.

Favorite season: Fall. It's a gorgeous time to be outside.

Best (or worst) vacation: One of the most memorable was a return trip to Nova Scotia where we had spent our honeymoon. We camped in a tent with the two kids and it rained five days out of eight. We laugh about it now!

Favorite holiday: Christmas, because it's a time for sharing.

Pet peeve: People who are insincere.

Favorite book: The Bible, it's the one you keep going back to time and time again.

Favorite movie: Anything with Katherine Hepburn.

Biggest worry: Staying connected with people is important. I worry that today people are becoming isolated from one another.

Favorite place: Cape Cod.

Favorite TV show: I have two: Murphy Brown and Northern Exposure.

Favorite junk-food: Seasonal candy like jelly beans, candy corn, and ribbon candy.

Person you'd most like to meet: Abigail Adams, she was ahead of her time.

Broad Cove performs

Four Cohasset singers will be starting their celebration of the Christmas season as part of the Broad Cove Chorale's Christmas concert Friday, Dec. 3 at 8 p.m. at Broad Cove House, 66 Lincoln St., Hingham.

Chorale members Deedee Rousseau, Lisa Koed, Susan Cameron and Jane Forrer have been singing on Wednesday mornings with women from other South Shore communities to prepare this festive concert which will take place in the large music room in Hingham's Broad Cove House, built by David Lincoln in 1733.

Margo Euler will direct the program which features carol arrangements for women's voices, plus chamber music by a woodwind trio and carol singing for all. A festive candlelit reception will follow the concert. Tickets are $9, in advance only, from chorale members or Nobles Camera in Hingham Square, or call 749-6561 and leave a message.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

❑ A huge Cohasset welcome goes to Alyssa Suzanne Spalt, the brand new daughter of Kimberly and Joseph Spalt. She was born at Brockton Hospital Nov. 8, and of course everyone is thrilled!!

Dr. Ira and Carolyn Zaslow, Alyssa's maternal grandparents, and Betty Hall, her paternal grandparent must be so excited!!

One thing is for sure it will be one happy Thanksgiving for all!

❑ News from Gould Academy, junior Daniel Varisco, son of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Varisco of Cohasset, was named to the honor roll for the first academic quarter. Daniel is a member of the alpine training group at Gould Academy. The alpine team skied on a foot of manmade snow at nearby Sunday River Ski Area Oct. 11.

Hope Daniel keeps us informed as the season goes on.

Daniel Varisco is an honor roll student at Gould Academy.

❑ Sixty Elm Street will be celebrating again this month, there are two birthdays. We send birthday greetings to Dorothy Russell and Fred Mahoney and wish them many more happy, healthy ones!

❑ Matthew Silvia is a star again! Many remember how wonderful he was whenever he acted at Cohasset High School, he truly made a name for himself. Matt is now a student at the University of Maine at Farmington, where the Theatre UMF will present Beth Henley's The Lucky Spot. He will play Reed Hooker, owner of the Lucky Spot. Matt appeared in Theatre UMF's Fall 1992 production of Dracula. The show opens Dec. 2 and runs through Dec. 5, "break a leg" Matt.

❑ Belated happy birthday wishes to James Cameron, hope your big day was a happy one.

❑ The Class of 1983 is holding its 10th reunion this weekend, on Nov. 27 at Kimball's By-the-Sea, to begin at 7 p.m. It is guaranteed to be a lot of fun, and they have had a great response so far (if you have somehow not been called, and would like to go, give Rich Evans a call at 383-2457 for tickets).

They have come up with an idea that is a special one indeed, they are collecting donations in memory of two classmates for a one-time scholarship to be given to a member of the class of 1994. It will be in the names of John Ryan and Joseph Palmieri, and the good news is that you don't have to be a member of the class to donate to this wonderful memory. You can mail a donation to Christopher N. Winn, 730 Main St., Hingham 02043. His telephone number is 749-9054 if you have any questions. Hats off to you all, that is a nice tribute!

❑ We are happy to report that Helen Livingston is home from the hospital and feeling grand.

❑ Hope everyone had a chance to read the super article about Cohasset's famous Gerard Keating!

Boy, are we lucky to have such a man, for 60 years he has been an active community leader, he has touched most of our lives at one time or another. Did you know that he is the fourth generation of his family to live in Cohasset? The number of committees and boards that he has served on are too numerous to mention, suffice it to say that anything that goes on in town has had his touch in it somewhere.

Most recently he was honored by South Shore Elder Services for "his outstanding contribution to senior citizens through community service and leadership," and was the recipient of the Edythe Donkin Award. And, what a Dad!!! He raised seven children with his wife, Margaret, and is now the very proud grandfather to 20 grandchildren and a great-grandchild!! Be sure to seek him out and congratulate him on the late[illegible] of many awards, and let him know [illegible] lucky we are to have him here.

❑ Speaking of the Keating family, wonder if they will be eating venison for Thanksgiving?!! Two of Gerard's sons, Tom and Stephen, shot a deer during their annual hunting trip (course the family is convinced that they bought it). The only question is, can one deer feed that huge family?

❑ Don't forget to set aside Dec. 11, that is when The Cohasset Police Association will challenge the Harlem Rockets in a basketball game. It will be held at Cohasset High School at 7 p.m., it promises to be tons of fun, and the proceeds will go to all of the worthy things that the Association donates to each year, such as their scholarship fund and Little League, to name a few.

Be sure to lend your support!

❑ Hope that everyone has a wonderful Thanksgiving, be sure to "kick it off" in Hull, where our football team will give all of their efforts to beat Hull. Kick off time is 10 a.m.

❑ Congratulations to Paul Previte! Paul is a member of the Scituate Youth Football team, and he won the outstanding achievement award, the biggest award there is to get! It means that Paul was a team leader, had a lot of motivation and tons of spirit — he was the best!

Cohasset, Scituate and Humarock all have players on the team and we sure are glad that Paul lives in Cohasset (take note, Coach MacDermott, you'll have a great player before you know it). Paul is a fourth-grader at Deer Hill School and is nine years old.

❑ And, don't forget to call me with your news, this time of year is always news time!

Cohasset Community Center to Celebrate '94

The Cohasset Community Center is planning its own version of first night called "Celebrate '94."

The Brown Bag Opera will be performing twice. At 5:30 p.m. they will present "Hansel and Gretel," perfect for young children and complete with a witch and gingerbread house that unfolds before them. The children are delighted at the end to perform the dance with the Brown Bag Opera ensemble. At 6:30 p.m. they will perform Bizet's "Carmen," a popular opera geared for all ages.

New this year will be Chuck Norris and his blues band. This saxaphone quartet is a local favorite at the Yard Rock Cafe and the Four Winds playing rock, blues and jazz. Returning this year are The Baroque Trio, La Sonnerie, Smiling Faces Productions Crew of Magicians, Jugglers and their amazing confetti firework display, Rick Shea's Bank, Carolyn Curtis' Jazz Quartet and Dance Visions dance troupe. There will also be clowns, face painters, hay rides and food courts.

Buttons will be on sale at the community center beginning Nov. 27 for $5 and allows entry to all events. Children under 5 are free. From Dec. 20 through 31 remaining buttons will be $10 each.

All food and novelty items are sold for fund-raising by local non-profit groups. Anyone interested may contact Rhonda Myers at 383-0088. All events take place in the community center, art center, Cohasset common, Depot Court, First Parish Second Congregational Church, St. Stephens and town hall. Shuttle service will be provided.

Anyone interested in volunteering for an hour or wishing to be a business sponsor should call the center at 383-0088.

Happy Thanksgiving

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

INVESTING IN LAND

QUESTION: What is the basic financial difference between investing in land or buying an investment home or building?

ANSWER: One of the nice things about investing in land is that it rarely presents management problems. However, since it will produce no income (usually), it should be purchased only if you are financially able to carry the debt over a lengthy period of time.

The key to a good land investment is predicting land needs of the future. Here's where the experience of an office like ours is invaluable. We have intimate knowledge of our community needs and can forecast the best areas for potential growth.

'Riding and tieing'

(The following story about sharing in the early years of the 18th Century is from Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume I, by E. Victor Bigelow. At that time, Cohasset was part of Hingham. Cohasseters paid taxes to support a minister in Hingham and had to make the long trek to the meeting house there. After appeals from residents, the General Court allowed Cohasset to form its own 'precinct' in 1717 which gave the village the right to establish its own church and school).

"....It was hard to go four or five miles to church, for not everyone could afford a horse to ride There is a sweet legend of brotherly kindness an poverty that comes down to us from those earl days.

"One man who owned a horse shared with his poorer neighbor by the old-fashioned method of 'riding & tieing.'

"The first man, and his wife or daughter upon the pillion behind him, rode along the crooked old way towards Hingham about half the distance; then dismounting, they tied their steed to a tree at the roadside and walked on towards the meeting-house. Meanwhile the second couple, wearied by their long walk reach the horse and, mounting him, rested upon his back while the animal finished the journey to the church.

"Thus the four came together for their weekly refreshment to the house of God.

"In those days a meeting-house was more than a place of worship; it was a house of meeting for isolated and lonely farmers, where all the comforts of meeting, soul to soul, might be enjoyed.

"Talking about fellow citizens, about crops, about cattle, about all the immediate concerns of their toilsome days, was refreshing to men and women of all grades.

"In those days, when no newspapers retailed the world's affairs to the remotest denizens of its woods, when every incident of human life had to have a personal purveyor to make it known, then a meeting-house where men and women could gain the social life which they craved was a double blessing. It drew them into the very midst of earthly interests, while it lifted them above the things of the earth..."

Neighbor opposed to liquor license

letters

(Ed's note: The following letter was sent to selectmen with a copy to the Mariner.)

Dear Board of Selectmen:

I would like to take this opportunity to tell you why I hope you will not vote in favor of giving a license to sell beer and wine to the South Shore Music Circus. I guess no matter how times they are turned down, we as neighbors can expect to see them back in a few years with another request.

The Music Circus argues that they are the only theater in the area without such a license. They are also the only the only theater in a residential neighborhood. Sohier Street is a narrow street with no curbstones protecting its sidewalks. It has two schools, a busy playground and the town swimming pool.

I would like those of you who live in other parts of town to imagine what it would be like if you had a neighbor who entertained more than 2,000 guests several times a week for most of the summer weeks. For the most part the guests are considerate and don't cause too much of a disturbance but occasionally the entertainment is very loud and the guests get pretty wound up. Now your neighbors would like to add to the ambiance of the performances by selling beer and wine. I think that even if your neighbors were entertaining to benefit their favorite charities, you would get pretty tired of them.

I would like to remind the Selectmen and the other citizens of Cohasset that the Music Circus was in business before the passage of the zoning by-law in 1955. They did, however, have about 800 seats at that time not the more than 2,000 which they now have.

Back in the late seventies the neighbors mobilized to appeal a decision of the Zoning Board of Appeals to the courts regarding the legality of the expansion of the Music Circus. They had the support of many other citizens of the town who donated generously to help pay the legal expenses. At this time the Music Circus, who had much deeper pockets than the neighbors, sued the neighbors both individually and collectively for $350,000.

That put an end to the neighbors ever having the opportunity to get a legal opinion from the courts. They were also effectively muzzled and forced to sign an agreement not to complain to any town boards in the future. I include this little bit of history lest you believe that the neighbors no longer care what the Music Circus does because they do not contact you.

You will probably hear many glowing testimonials from the organizations who receive financial support from the Circus. I understand that these organizations were invited by the Music Circus to a meeting at which time they were urged to support the beer and wine license. The Patriot Ledger reported in last night's paper (Nov. 15) that the Music Circus gave $180,000 to worthy causes this year. I think that was very nice for the organizations receiving the money and that it is not necessary for them to be able to give more than that when it puts our neighborhood in jeopardy.

In closing, I would like to add that just about all of the patrons of the Music Circus arrive in cars, there being no public transportation as there is to most other theaters. I do not think it is good public policy to mix drinking and driving. Also, many local teens are employed by the Music Circus to work at the concessions and it would be unfortunate if they could no longer have these jobs because they are underage to serve wine and beer.

We as neighbors are relying on the good judgment of our town officials to protect us from this well-financed organization.

183 Sohier Street

Liquor license is supported

(The following letter was sent to the SSMC with a copy to selectmen.)

Attn: Vince Longo, General Manager

Dear Vince,

The Board of Directors of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is wholeheartedly in support of your request for a Wine and Malt Beverage License.

The Directors are very much aware of the impact that the Music Circus has on various sectors of the business community. The Restaurants, the Hotel, the Bed and Breakfast Facilities and other businesses benefit from your presence.

Certainly the economic benefit to the Town in the form of salaries to residents is of great value.

Beyond that, it is evident from your presentation of the licenses held by other theaters in New England that this license is necessary if you are to attract the talent necessary to present the best possible shows.

A vibrant Music Circus is a very definite asset to the Town.

The frosting on the cake is the financial support that the Music Circus provides to the many Non Profit Organizations which provide many services to the citizens of Cohasset.

I will be at the Selectmen's meeting on the 22nd in support of your request.

R.E. Martin Jr.

Kevin O'Donnell

student of the month

I nominate Kevin O'Donnell as October's Student of the Month because of his eclectic talents, academic abilities, community service, and leadership.

Kevin performed a lead role in the Drama Club's production of "What I Did Last Summer." Countless hours of rehearsal and study made the show a success.

Kevin has also been selected to attend an elite leadership conference for youth in Washington, D.C. Students attending were selected in a competitive application process.

In addition to these academic honors, Kevin and Scott Moe have taken the initiative to organize a Mountain Biking Club. I had the opportunity to join them for a ride and was quite impressed by the leadership Kevin and Scott demonstrated.

Kevin also volunteered four weekend days to assist on the ropes course teaching community members who participated in our program. His interest in helping others was quite evident.

Finally, Kevin has been able to accomplish all of this while maintaining his standing in challenging classes and practicing guitar with his band, fun in the kitchen.

Boosters donate gifts

The Arts boosters recently gave the CHS library gifts of the collected poetry of Poet Laureate Rita Dove and Nobel Prize winner Toni Morrison's novels "Tar Baby," "Sula," "Song of Solomon," "Beloved," "The Bluest Eye" and "Jazz."

Librarian Susan McFadd urges the community to visit the library to read the new works and tour the computer technology station designed for student research.

CHS arts update

The senior class play, originally listed for November has been rescheduled for spring.

The next performances at CHS include the David Crossland concert Friday, Nov. 26 entitled "What You Will" adapted by drama workshop director Ron Emmons from Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," on Dec. 17 and 18.

The winter choral and instrumental music concert will be on Dec. 21.

The community is welcome to come and support the students.

Parents and business owners may be listed in the upcoming programs as patrons of the arts. Anyone wishing to do so should send their contribution, payable to Cohasset Arts Boosters, to Olga Nohe, 10 Surrey Dr., Cohasset 02025.

Book fair set

The Deer Hill School library will have its annual fall book fair Tuesday Nov. 30 through Thursday, Dec. 2. Money raised from this book fair will be used to replenish and upgrade books and reference materials available to 4th, 5th and 6th grade students.

For parents and other members of the community who would like to use this opportunity for Christmas shopping, the fair will be open from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday Dec. 1.

Buttonwood Books & Toys will once again be providing a large selection of quality reading materials, gift books and learning tools in all price ranges.

Volunteers are needed to help set up, assist students in their selections and act as cashiers. Anyone able to help any time Monday Nov. 29 through Thursday Dec. 2 should sign up with Mrs. Murphy in the library or call Janet van Hartesvelt at 383-2593.

Pierce completes food service safety program

Canteen Corporation, a leading contract food service company, announced today Jeanne Pierce of Braintree, has successfully completed SERVESAFE®, a nationally-recognized food service safety program. Pierce is a dining center manager for Canteen at Cohasset Schools in Cohasset.

SERVESAFE, developed by the National Restaurant Association, is a comprehensive six-week course designed to certify food service employees on food safety, sanitation and handling. SERVESAFE is well-known as the premier certification program recognized by government agencies and state and local health departments.

Pierce, who joined the company in July, 1990, is among the more than 1,600 Canteen dining center managers across the nation being SERVESAFE certified. Course participants are thoroughly trained and tested on such food-safety issues as safe temperatures, bacterial control and sanitation management.

In addition to SERVESAFE certification, Canteen food service managers participate in a variety of quality assurance and food safety instructional courses and on-site training programs.

Coastal police keep watch over water environment

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

Who do you call when you spy perhaps a fisherman netting the wrong species of fish in the wrong season or perhaps a hunter hunting deer, when not in season to do so? Chances are, if you are even aware of the state regulations regarding fishing and hunting practices, you don't know who to call.

This is a job for the Massachusetts Environmental Police.

The job of the Environmental Police is to enforce environmental laws ranging from hunting, fishing, and trapping regulations to marine fisheries, hazardous waste, and wetland protection statutes.

This agency is broken into six divisions: Inland Enforcement Bureau, Marine Theft Bureau, Hazardous Waste Bureau, Hunter Education and Boating Safety Bureaus, the Registration and Tilting Bureau and the Coastal Enforcement Bureau.

The closest Environmental Police office is in the Hingham Shipyard, 349 Lincoln St. , Building 45, otherwise known as the Coastal Enforcement Bureau.

Coastal officers monitor fishing and other activities both on land and at sea. Some of these responsibilities as outlined in a recent brochure put out by the Massachusetts Environmental Police, are "conducting investigations of illegal fishing practices, marine theft cases, and boat registration and titling requirements.

"The coastal force also mediates disputes between competing fishing interests such as draggers, gilinetters, lobstermen, and recreational anglers.

The officers closely monitor fish markets, processing facilities, shellfish digging and all-terrain vehicles (ATV) use on beaches."

Major Phil McMann, who is in charge of Coastal Enforcement, said that some of the most important issues they're concerned with have to do with the shellfish area from New Hampshire to Rhode Island.

Some of the important regulation guidelines for commercial and non-commercial diggers are digging in the right areas, making sure they have licences, checking to see if their netting is the right size, and that their fishing apparatus is what it is supposed to be, McMann explained.

McMann emphasized that there are so many governmental regulations, that the agency is having problems due to shortage of man-power.

" The Dukakis administration and the Weld administration put a freeze on hiring to create the impression of down-sizing state government," he said, "but that will be changing in the near future."

Eighteen officers will be hired by July 1, 1994 and the majority of those officers will be put into coastal districts.

"(The hiring freeze) affected the agency tremendously, because we're not able to properly patrol and handle all the responsibilities we're given and this becomes costly as the coastal officers need to work overtime to catch up," McMann explained.

The geographical areas that need to be covered are so immense that with only four officers covering a specific district when there should be six, 30 percent of the responsibilities are not being adequately covered, he added.

Organized in August of 1985 when a political merger joined two state organizations, the Natural Resource Office and the Marine and Operational Vehicle Office, the Environmental Police is a relatively young, restructured organization that holds certain powers that the general public may not be aware of.

One of these powers is that an officer can stop and board a boat without a warrant or even a slight suspicion. Making sure the operator is licensed, if under the age of 16, or just making sure everything is safe is enough reason for a coastal officer to board a recreational boat, explained Lieutenant Lawrence Chenier of the Boating Safety Bureau.

"Some people spend so much time on their boats they feel as if (their boats) are extensions of their homes." Chenier said, and they do not realize an environmental police officer is not the same as a regular police officer.

When somebody is sighted not abiding by state environmental regulations, the officer can do a number of things, noted McMann.

"You can warn them, give them a non-criminal citation (like a traffic ticket), summons them into court or place them under arrest and transport them to the nearing police station, " he explained.

Harbormasters to be trained like cops

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

As soon as the Plymouth County Police Training Center can secure funding, it will begin teaching an official harbormasters training program, starting with Hingham Harbormaster Robert Buotte.

Buotte and about 29 other area harbormasters will take part in a first-ever training course designed by harbormasters, the coast guard, state and environmental police and others to keep harbormasters up to date as their responsibilities evolve.

"The role has changed so dramatically," Buotte said. "Being a retired Coast Guard (officer) I could not see why the harbormaster didn't have this training."

The 300-hour course will cover communications, interviews and interventions, conflict resolution, use of force, courtroom behavior, handcuffing techniques, mooring laws, hypothermia, seamanship and any other aspect of safety and law enforcement at sea.

Over a seven week period, harbormasters and prospective harbormasters will learn everything from navigation to liability laws. Each 35-member class will cost about $10,000. If Plymouth County can secure funding, the first course will begin in the fall of 1994.

"It's going to pick up everything that's not on the water in the police academy," Buotte said.

For example, the charge of 'operating under the influence' is completely different on the water than it is on land. Some typical field sobriety tests are impossible.

"There's no white line for them to walk," Buotte said.

Cohasset's new harbormaster, Shawn Kelly, who oversees two assistants, agrees with the need for formal harbormaster training. Kelly replaced Cohasset Harbormaster Irving Gadow, who moved to Pennsylvania this summer.

"We mostly stress safety; the life jackets, and so on," Kelly said. "Most of the training has been on the job. There's been nothing of a formal nature at all," he said.

A former Coast Guard officer, Kelly feels that state-sponsored training will define local laws.

"It's more of a precise nature; along the lines of registrations (and local law enforcement)," he said.

The benefit of an official police-related training program to harbormasters will create a more professional force, but also reduce town liability and raise revenue for towns, said Plymouth County Training Director John DeGutis.

When harbormasters write more tickets, they are putting more money into each town's general fund, he explained.

"It's a win-win situation," DeGutis said.

The idea for a harbormasters' training program started five years ago when Hull Harbormaster and president of the Massachusetts Harbormasters Association Edward McDevitt has pushed for the program.

Marshfield Harbormaster George Burgiss also vied to get the training program whenever DeGutis, who is also an amateur lobsterman, went fishing in Marshfield waters.

McDevitt suggests that some of the funds from the Federal Safe Boating Act could be used for training expenses.

"We're the eyes and ears of all the harbors and bays. Why not put some of this money for those trying to assist the public in safety and education?" he said.

"We'll figure out something," said DeGutis. Plymouth County's executive director, William Baker will head up the fundraising effort. This week, letters went to Congressman Gerry Studds' (D-Cohasset) office. DeGutis said that Baker plans to lobby state officials as well.

DeGutis is still four lesson plans away from completing the curriculum. "It's a lot of work, I'll tell you," he said.

"Some of the courses were designed by a committee of harbormasters," DeGutis said. Interest grew as the program became a reality.

"Everyone's starting to step up to the plate now," DeGutis said. More courses were submitted by the U.S. Department of the Treasury Training Program, the Coast Guard, the Environmental Police, and the State Police.

The next step is for the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council to certify the program.

John P. Giuggio

John P. Giuggio, 63 died Nov. 17 after a long illness.

He was born in West Roxbury, graduated from Boston College High School and Boston College. He began a long career at The Boston Globe as a messenger while a high school student. He ended it 47 years later as president of the company and chief operating officer of the parent company, Affiliated Publications.

When Mr. Giuggio was appointed president of the Globe in 1982, it was the first time in more than 100 years someone outside the family of Globe founder, Gen. Charles H. Taylor had occupied the top executive office at the paper.

Mr. Giuggio played a key role in the 18 months of negotiations which led last month to the sale of the paper to the New York Times.

During his career, he worked as a messenger, took death notices over the phone, sold classified advertising, and served as classified advertising manager, business manager, vice president and treasurer, and executive vice president before being named president.

He was in charge of the Globe Santa campaign which raises $1 million annually to buy toys for disadvantaged children. He also started a scholarship program in 1986 which has given 2,200 newscarriers $10 million in money for college tuitions. The Globe has also established a $20,000 annual college scholarship in Mr. Giuggio's name, which was awarded for the first time this year.

He had been president of the Boston College Alumni Association and was a trustee at Boston College, Boston College High School and Emmanuel College which awarded him an honorary doctoral degree in 1984.

He was past president of the University Club of Boston, a trustee of Carney Hospital in Dorchester and served on the executive committee of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce. He was a director of The Globe Newspaper Company, The Boston Globe Foundation, McCaw Cellular Communications Inc. and The New York Times Co.

He leaves his wife Barbara (Savage) Giuggio; two sons, John P. Giuggio Jr. of Cambridge and Stephen Giuggio of Cohasset; two daughters, Barbara Mance of St. Clair, Mich. and Patricia Cappello of Norwell; his mother, Theresa Giuggio of West Roxbury; a brother, Robert Giuggio of Walpole; a sister, Marie DiMattia of Norwood and seven grandchildren. He was the son of the late John P. Giuggio.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Nov. 22 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Hingham Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the Boston College High School Scholarship Fund, 150 Morrissey Boulevard, Dorchester 02125.

Fred Harold Tolman

Fred Harold Tolman Sr. of Albany, NY, formerly of Cohasset died Oct. 28 after a long illness.

Mr. Tolman was born in Brockton and grew up in Cohasset. As a youth, he achieved considerable fame as a horseman at shows and hunts throughout the northeast, riding his own hunters and jumpers. He attended Thayerlands School in Braintree and graduated from Culver Military Academy in Culver, Ind.

During World War II he served in the Massachusetts National Guard, the United States Army and as a sharpshooter with the United States Marines. He was present at the battle of Guadalcanal and participated in the occupation and capture of Okinawa.

Mr. Tolman was the husband of the late Mimi (Fitch) Tolman. He leaves two sons, Fred H. Tolman III and Jeffrey A. Tolman; two grandsons, Terrance and Matthew; a sister, Virginia T. Hunter and a brother, John S. Tolman.

A memorial service was held at St. Andrews Episcopal Church in Albany, NY Nov. 1. Burial was in the

Elizabeth E. Kaiser

Elizabeth A. Kaiser, 77, of Cohasset died Nov. 14 at home after a long illness.

She was a director of quality care at the South Shore Mental Health Center in Quincy for three years. Miss Kaiser became a licensed independent clinical social worker in 1981 and was also certified by the Academy of Certified Social Workers.

She did extensive consulting work and was an associate clinical professor at both Smith and Simmons colleges and an instructor in psychiatry at Tufts Medical School.

A graduate of Temple University and Smith College, she also published numerous papers in professional journals and was an active member of several professional organizations.

She leaves her sister Myra Olley of Atlanta, Ga and a nephew,

A memorial service was held Nov. 19 at the Second Congregational Church.

Donations may be made to the Elizabeth E. Kaiser Learning Center, c/o the South Shore Mental Health Center Inc., 6 Fort St., Quincy 02169.

John W. Trayers

John W. Trayers, 79, of Cohasset, a former administrative assistant for the state, died Nov. 18 after a long illness.

Mr. Trayers worked 17 years for the state department of public works before his retirement in 1985. He was employed previously by the Charlestown Navy Shipyard.

Mr. Trayers was a member of the democratic town committee of Cohasset and the Poland Spring Alumni. He was soloist at Holy Cross Cathedral in Boston for 30 years and was former director of the Men's Choir at St. Anthony's Church.

Mr. Trayers was born in Boston. He was in the first graduating class at Cathedral High School and attended Boston College.

He leaves his wife Eleanor (Armstrong) Trayers; three sons, John W. Trayers Jr. of North Andover, Ed Trayers of Sarasota, Fla. and Paul Trayers of Hull; two daughters, Joan T. Murphy of Cohasset and Eleanor T. Drew of Duxbury; four grandchildren and a stepgrandchild.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church Nov. 22. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Drive, Braintree 02184.

Here's What Some of our Customers are Saying about the Little Harbor Bookstore!

20% OFF on all adult hardcover all the time!

I moved to Cohasset the day Little Harbor Bookstore opened. If they ever leave, I'm moving.

Allison Moskow - Cohasset

Whenever I can get away from the hectic pace of my life in New York city to stay at the Glastonbury Abbey, a visit to Little Harbor Bookstore is always first on my list.

Sister Julie Upton, RSM - St John's University

I find the selection at Little Harbor Bookstore very exciting. I love this store!

Sue Watrous Cohasset Librarian

Little Harbor has been an invaluable resource for our book club. We meet at the store once a year, and Joan has an unerring talent for recommending great books.

Cara Laren - Hingham

Little Harbor Bookstore has every book you could want. It's the warmest, most attractive place in Cohasset.

Patricia Chute - Cambridge/Cohasset Author

I love the "Little Harbor Recommends" shelves - I always find a great read there. The back room is a great place to browse and relax.

Susan Meikleham - Cohasset

It means a lot to me to have a first-rate bookstore in Cohasset Village, so I make a special effort to purchase and order all my books from Little Harbor. I love to come in and browse, and always wind up with a "must have".

Dr. Susuan Schrager - Weymouth

I have a busy life, and this store is a sanctuary for me.

Dr. Andrew Merliss - Cohasset

A trip to Little Harbor is one of our family's favorite week end activities!

Lincoln and Debbie Rathnam - Hingham

Little Harbor is one of America's loveliest bookstores!

Bob Hale - Duxbury

Visiting Little Harbor Bookstore is like going home. You're always welcomed, and you never want to leave.

business notes

Jill P. Kern, formerly of Cohasset, has been named ASQC vice president of section affairs. She is a principal quality engineer with Digital Equipment Corporation's Worldwide Semiconductor Organization in Hudson and has nearly 15 years experience in quality assurance engineering and quality management at Babcock and Wilcox, Burroughs and Digital. Kern also serves as a consultant to the Massachusetts Commonwealth Quality Improvement Council, supporting a team from the governor's office in total quality management and implementation. She holds a BS degree in materials science and engineering from MIT and a MBA from the University of Chicago.

ASQC is the quality source for information on the development, promotion and application of quality strategies and techniques.

Joseph M. Cheney Jr. of Cohasset, partner at Dane & Howe Counselors at Law, was elected to the Walker Home and School Corporation in Needham. Cheney has been active with Walker's Annual Golf Tournament for the last year. He is member of the American Bar Association, the Massachusetts Bar Association and the Boston Bar Association. He received his law degree from Boston University.

Walker Home and School, named for its benefactors Irene and George Walker, was originally a dairy farm located along the banks of the Charles River in Needham. Bostonians visited the dairy, especially if their children were sickly, since the Walkers produced pasteurized milk. The Walkers left the farm to be used for the care of children.

Walker Home and School today is a non-profit organization serving children ages 5 through 13 with emotional, behavioral and learning problems and through its Trieschman Center provides educational programs for child caring practitioners throughout the country.

Huntwork, Virginia Anderson, Marguerite Rattenhause, Peter Hobson, Mike Abbruzzese and June and Rob Kierce.

Kierce would like to see more local participation in Cohasset SHARE. Mackenzie agrees.

"It's very hard. We have been there for two years and I have not been able to increase my attendance," Mackenzie said.

The Resurrection Parish in Hingham runs a SHARE program which distributed 50 packages this month and the First Baptist Church chapter distributed 31. "Weymouth has over 200 (participants)," Mackenzie said.

Mackenzie sometimes gives care packages to Hingham's needy. The boxes of food are particularly helpful to single mothers on fixed incomes because they include fruit and dairy products, which some mothers can't afford, she said.

"One month I had two packages. I gave them to two young mothers. They (wrote and) said how grateful they were for all the fruit and vegetables," she said.

But she often takes advantage of the inexpensive food as a reward for her own community service.

"It's a great idea to cut down on your food bill. I'm a senior citizen with a fixed income. I get the same amount of money every month but every time I go shopping I pay more and more."

On D-Day at the First Baptist Church, with her son Robert and grandson, Ian. "It's a three-generation operation," she said.

"I have a darling picture of him sorting oranges," she added.

(Ed. note: To participate in SHARE this month: Cohasset SHARE sign-up is 10 a.m. to noon, Nov. 25th to Dec. 4th at the Cohasset Community Center. Food delivery is 8:30 a.m. to 10:00 p.m., Dec. 18 at the Deer Hill School.)

Say no to liquor license

(The following letter was sent to Selectmen).

Dear Members of the Board of Selectmen,

We are writing to let you know that we are opposed to granting the Music Circus a liquor license. We feel that it is not necessary to provide liquor in a place where students under the age of 21 work. There are certainly enough businesses in town that serve alcohol.

We appreciate your attention to our concern.

Beer, wine should be an option

Ed.'s note the following letter was sent to selectmen).

To: Board of Selectmen

This letter is written in support of the South Shore Music Circus' application for a limited liquor license.

An economically viable entertainment center can mean continued summer employment of Cohasset's youth and increased patronage of our restaurants and shops. The request to offer beer and wine is not unreasonable, such beverages are routinely available at most professional live theater presentations.

The Music Circus would not be the destination of choice for those seeking an evening of drinking! The availability of beer and wine merely adds to the ambiance of a theater experience for those who choose to purchase such a beverage. It should be an option.

New town sports fields on track

land and develop four of them for the project. The cost would range from $250,000-$300,000.

If approved, work on the project could begin as early as next summer.

According to Endris, the new land would be needed because a possible upgrade of the existing track circling Milliken Field would not be feasible, given its proximity to the other athletic fields.

Parts of the varsity and JV soccer fields, the baseball outfield and the lacrosse area all go over sections of the track.

"We'd have to figure out where we'd put it," Endris said of the new facility.

Recreation Director Jack Worley said the commission backs the plan "conceptually." He. believes the town is in dire need of the playing fields.

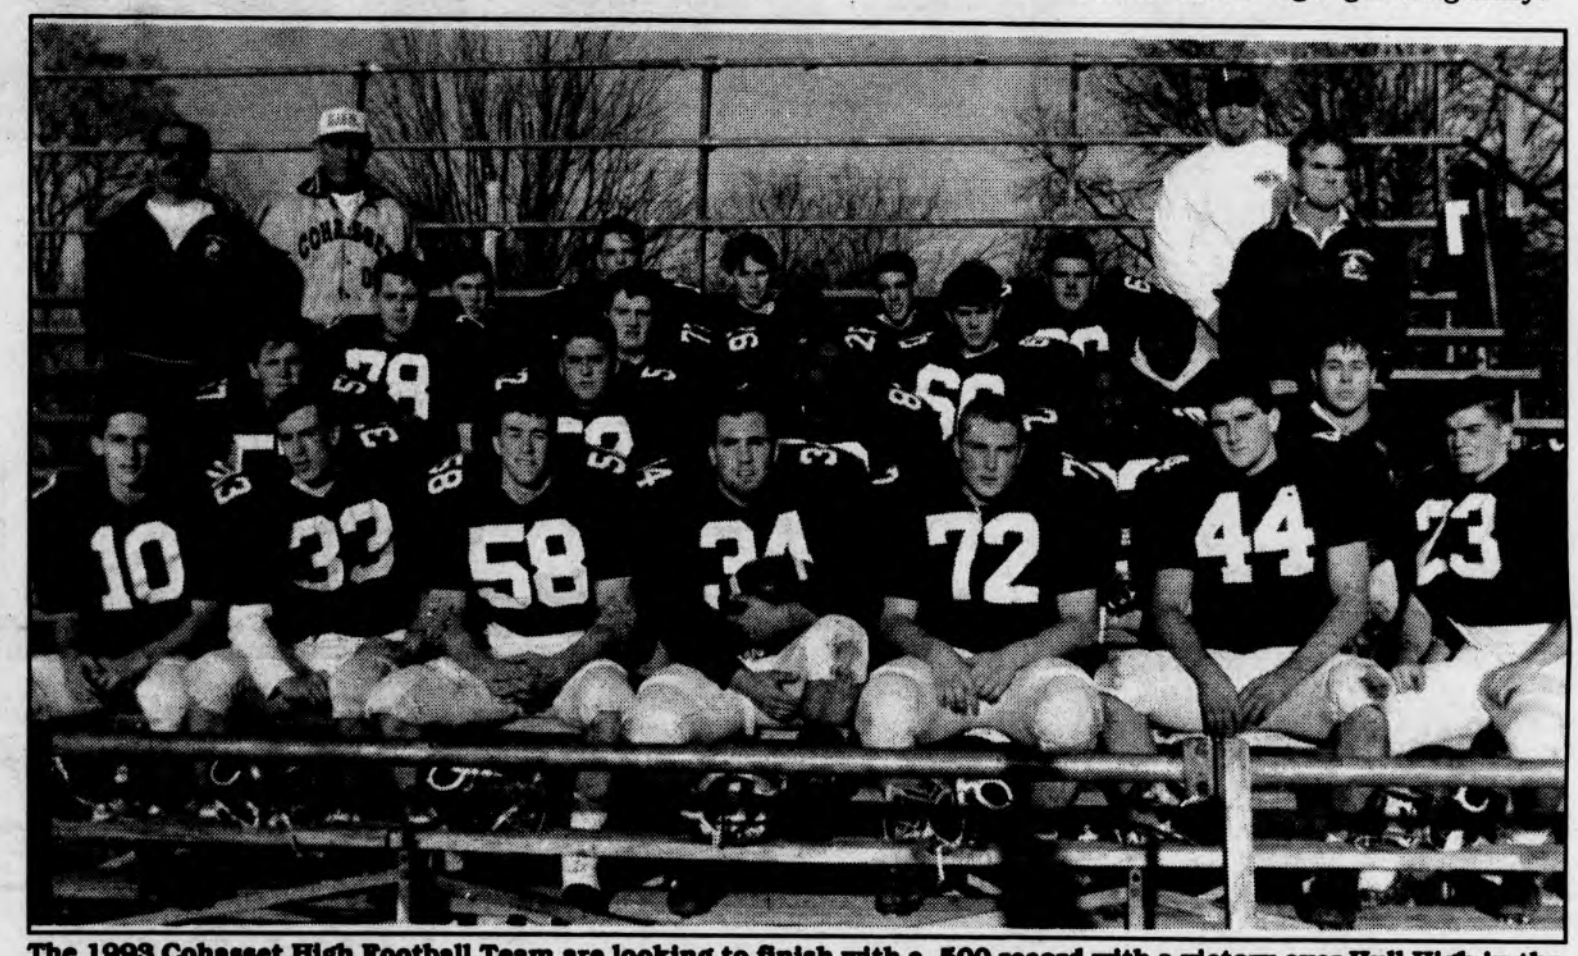
"Ideally, we need more field space," said Worley. "The general plan would benefit the community."

The area between the existing fields and the water tower is being considered as a location to build the new facility. The track would circle a field big enough to be used for football, soccer and field hockey. It would not only be used by the high school's athletes, but by town residents as well.

"We're going to make this a community field," Endris said.

Cohasset High's current field hockey area in the front of the school is too small and doesn't meet the required size. He said it could never be the site for tournament games for that reason.

The project would have to get the approval of the board of selectmen. Conservation questions would have to be addressed, but Endris said he would like to avoid a "big engineering study."



The 1993 Cohasset High Football Team are looking to finish with a .500 record with a victory over Hull High in the annual Thanksgiving Day game.

Cohasset Skippers set to roll into Hull

"We hold it on Thanksgiving Day weekend," he said, "because that's when we clinched our unbeaten season. There are still a lot of strong ties."

The '93 Cohasset High squad won't be out to wind up an unbeaten season, but they do have a clear-cut goal against Hull High on Thursday. A victory over last year's South Shore League champions would guarantee the 3-4-1 Skippers a .500 record and end the season on a positive note after finishing 3-7 in '92.

MacDermott is proud of the way the Cohasset has battled back from adversity this year. But on the same note, he is by no means taking the Pirates lightly.

"It's a team that's kind of come together and stepped up accepting the challenge of a difficult schedule," MacDermott said of the Skippers. "I just think it will be a street fight. I have a lot of respect for (Pirates' coach) John Anderson and the Hull High School football program and I'll continue to say that for as long as I keep coaching.

"It's a traditional rivalry. I know it's a cliche, but records go right out the window. The does the Xs' and Os' and executes will win.

"We're looking for the weather gods to smile and a good, competitive football game."

The Skippers have been executing and scoring points consistently since tying non-league opponent Sharon, 7-7, on Oct. 30. Cohasset has beaten both Charlestown and Marian the following two weeks, led mainly by the running of Thomas Allen.

The junior scored three big touchdowns against Marian and has gained over 200 yards during the two wins. MacDermott said Allen's game-winning TD against Marian came on an off-tackle play "that he turned into a track meet."

Allen, who was a spot player last year, got into the offensive flow slowly this season, but has turned into Cohasset's most dangerous offensive threat.

"In the last three or four ball games he has been an outstanding running back for us," said MacDermott. "He can score from any point on the field."

Scott Theriault, who carried a good part of the offensive load for Cohasset during the early part of the season was moved to the power back slot by MacDermott. He is carrying the ball less — from six to eight times a game — but has been extremely effective in picking up the short yardage for the Skippers.

"I have nothing but praise for Scott," said MacDermott. "He was moved from a glamour position to one that isn't fully appreciated by the spectators, but is by his teammates and coaches."

Riley, the team's field general is a senior rookie, playing his first season of football. He started the season backing up Jeff Littlehale, but has been a permanent fixture since the second half of the Charlestown game.

"If you want to talk about unsung heroes," MacDermott said, "here's the kid. He worked himself into a starting role on defense, while trying to learn the quarterback position."

MacDermott, though, has been especially proud of "the solid play from the leaders (of the team)." He expected captains fullback and linebacker Chris Rolandelli, guard Brandon DeVoe, Andy Church and Brian Pattison to be the Skippers' "mainstays," and they turned out to be exactly what MacDermott envisioned the team's captains should be.

"We expected leadership out of them," he said. "They were chosen co-captains by their peers and they warranted being chosen captains for the 1993 season."

Brian Sasso, Dorian Bryant and Brian Potolichio have all played well in their starting roles and should make a big impact against Hull.

MacDermott said there is something special about the Thanksgiving Day game that keeps building as the years go by.

"The kids will get caught up in the moment," he said of what he believes his team's reaction will be playing in the biggest game of the season, "but down the road it will take on more meaning."

Take it from a guy who remembers winning the state title 36 years ago as though it was only yesterday.

MacDermott plans to tell his players to hold onto the memories of the game.

Then they'll burst out of the locker room and sprint to the sidelines, ready to make their own memories.

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

When I was growing up in the '70s the most popular sport in this area was hockey.

Thanks to the success of the Boston Bruins and the superstar status of Bobby Orr, just about every youngster on the South Shore signed up for youth hockey.

I remember those early Saturday morning rides to the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke or the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham with all my gear in a huge gym bag and my two sticks in hand. (You always had to bring two in case one broke while you were on the ice. I never broke a stick, though.)

I also remember tying my skates extra tight and how good the Pepsi tasted after an hour on the ice.

I was all right in hockey, but like many other youngsters I lost interest and moved on to other things.

However, the result of that South Shore hockey boom in the '70s can be seen in the NHL with superstar players such as Pembroke's Kevin Stevens and Marshfield's Jeremy Roenick, who are both 50-goal scoring all-stars.

However, these days things are different in youth sports.

Sure hockey is still popular, and football and basketball always draw a lot of interest among young people.

But the biggest youth sport on the South Shore is soccer and has been for a while.

When I was growing up there was hardly any interest in the sport among my friends.

Everyone wanted to skate for the Bruins.

But now, soccer leagues for boys' and girls' of all ages are held in every town in the fall, spring and summer.

There are even indoor soccer leagues in the winter for those who can't get enough of the sport.

And this boom in soccer can be seen paying off at the high-school level.

A quick survey of the teams I cover shows the growing South Shore dominance in the sport.

Both the boys' and girls' teams at Silver Lake qualified for this year's Division 1 state tourney.

The boys' team, which won the Division 1 state title in '88, reached the Division 1 South semifinals before losing to Greater New Bedford Voke. The Lakers have won the OCL for four straight years.

Both teams at Marshfield High school qualified for the state tourney.

The boys' team won the Atlantic Coast League title with Duxbury. However, the Rams were booted from the state tourney by Silver Lake.

The girls' team reached the Division 1 South finals before losing to Newton North, the second-ranked high school team in the USA high school poll.

Both teams at Norwell High qualified for the state tourney.

The girls' were regular season co-champs in the South Shore League with Hanover.

The boys' finished right behind Hanover for the SSL championship.

The Scituate High boys' soccer team also qualified for the state tourney for the first time since '88.

And the Hingham High boys' soccer team made it to the Division 1 South quarter-final round before bowing out. They had a three-year streak of reaching "Gymnast In Motion," gymnasts Carolyn Pratt, Tarra Hettstrom and Maggie Goedecke are back in their competitive season and training at the Cohasset Community Center.

Varsity gymnastic try-outs Nov. 29

Students interested in trying out for the CHS varsity gymnastic squad should meet Monday, Nov. 29, from 5 to 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center. Gymnasts should be dressed appropriately with hair pulled back, leotards, lycra shorts or pants. No big T-shirts, boxer shorts, long underwear or large sweatshirts.

The varsity squad will be posted Tuesday in the lobby of Cohasset High School.

Ski trip planned

The Cohasset Recreation Department will co-sponsor a day ski trip to Mt. Cranmore Monday, Dec. 27, with the Scituate Recreation Department.

The cost for this day-long trip is $48 per person and includes motor coach transportation, a lift ticket and an all day mountain ticket. Buses will depart from Cohasset town hall at 5:30 a.m. Monday, Dec. 27, and return to town hall at about 8:30 p.m. Ski lessons and equipment rentals are available at Mt. Cranmore for $14 each.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Space is limited, hence, immediate registration is advised.

Hartman leads Wah Lum at competition

Several members of Cohasset's Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy competed recently at the Windsor Save the Children Karate Championships held at Weaver High School in Windsor, CT. Competitors whose skills earned them trophies included the following students: Tim Hartman of Quincy, first place in Advanced Weapons and fourth in Advanced Men's Forms; Lori Sartre of Braintree won first place in Women's Intermediate forms and second in her weapons division; Scott Jeffrey of Roslindale took second in Advanced Weapons and third in Advanced Hand Forms.

Wah Lum Academy is located on Route 3A in Cohasset. For further information, please call John Loupos at 383-6822.

Santa hockey signups slated

Mite A and Squirt A youth hockey teams are wanted for the 20th annual Santa Claus Hockey Tournament at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, Dec. 27-30.

All teams are guaranteed four games. Applications are available in the pro shop at the Hingham arena or by calling Hoby Taylor, 749-6660.

As for some towns that I don't cover, such as Hanover, Weymouth, Cohasset, Rockland and Whitman-Hanson, they also had great soccer seasons.

The success at the high school level is a direct result of the youth programs.

You cannot shape a player to play a varsity sport when he enters the ninth grade. The foundation has to be there.

So why is youth soccer so popular?

There is no pro soccer league similar to the Major Leagues or the NBA.

And there is certainly no soccer superstars like Michael Jordan or Shaquille O'Neal on TV.

I must admit, the popularity of soccer is something I had trouble understanding.

However after talking to several high school coaches and youth program directors, the answer to why soccer is so popular on the South Shore is three-fold.

First of all, the sport is inexpensive.

You don't need expensive and elaborate equipment to play. All you really need is cleats, a shirt and shorts.

Compare this to hockey with its expensive ice time and Super-Tack skates.

Second, you can start playing the sport at a very young age.

Towns have programs for youngsters starting around age six. And because of the age involved, the fields are smaller so the players don't have to run the 110 yards of the high school fields.

And third, the nature of the game allows for everyone to play and not look bad.

Numerous substitutions are made because the games are long and there is a lot of running involved.

And most youngsters can run and kick a ball pretty easily without embarrassing themselves.

Other sports like golfing or tennis require lessons to learn the right technique. That is not the case in soccer.

And no kid in soccer suffers the trauma of the last inning strikeout or the missed foul shot.

To test these answers, I recently gave my two nephews, age three and five, a soccer ball and they had a blast and took to the sport right away.

Previously, I had tried to teach them to catch a baseball, throw it and bat it.

They could do it but got frustrated easily and wanted to go watch Batman.

I also tried basketball. But they could only dribble the large ball a couple times and the hoop stood 10 feet above ground.

They could not reach it unless I held them on my shoulders.

Anyway, the point is youngsters like to play soccer because it comes easily to them. And towns like to sponsor soccer programs because they are inexpensive.

In short, the soccer dominance of the South Shore will continue for many years.

Just cleaning out the cobwebs and mulling over a few things that have been on my mind.

• It would have been quite a sight watching parents, fans and spectators jumping off the high-school bandwagon and running for their cars to get home and see the final minutes of "The Game of the Century," on Saturday. That is of course if they showed up to the game in the first place. After all, there's always the Thanksgiving Day rivalries.

• Why do some cross-country runners think they have to stop short the second they cross the finish line of a race. And even more puzzling is the fact that they're ready to take a swing at the runner behind them whose momentum moves the harrier from 101st into the top 50 on impact.

• The Notre Dame Academy field hockey team should have talked the entire school into showing up to at least one game dressed in the school's mandatory uniforms. The only equipment they do without during a normal school day are mouth pieces and sticks.

• It should be mandatory that every school nickname strikes some fear into the opposition. Forget Panthers, Wildcats and Rams. Why not Cady, Booth, Bundy (Al or Ted, it doesn't make much of a difference) or the scariest of all, Schotts. When I hear the Skippers' nickname I expect Gilligan to be somewhere on the roster.

• It may be me but would somebody please explain the appeal in seeing everyone you went to high school with at the Thanksgiving Day game? Don't we all pretty much keep in touch with the people we want to see after high school? And those inane conversations! I thank Touchdown Jesus that I'm covering games instead of watching Braintree battle Milton just because it was "a tradition" on Thanksgiving Day. What a joke!

• You know Cohasset's Scott Theriault actually has the opportunity to kick a field goal into the Atlantic Ocean when Cohasset takes on Hull this Thursday. Judging by the way Ted MacDermott's squad has played in its past four games, Theriault's boots into the drink will only be worth a point.

• I don't care what anyone says, it's more amusing watching a female cross-country runner slip in the mud than a male. On the flip side, after seeing male cheerleaders at college football or basketball games I have the urge to put on a flannel shirt and chop wood for an hour.

• Do those morons from UMass-Amherst who protested the Minuteman logo as politically incorrect get mad when they come across statues in memory of the veterans killed defending the United States? If so, the low-lifes can blow up a rubber raft and sail away, being sure to leave their financial aid when they go. Better yet, they should be shackled and thrown off the Concord Bridge in "The splash heard around the world," event.

• I wonder if Dennis-Yarmouth athletes listen to the theme to "Flipper," the way others do to "Rocky," in order to get pumped up before the big game.

Mashburn a good buy

By Chris Yourell
Special to the Mariner

Greetings and felicitations! Welcome to the inaugural column of "Card Corner." Over the years, sports have evolved into a significant slice of American culture. Many of you (and your children, if applicable) spend a considerable amount of leisure time viewing and participating in sports activities and events. Many of us also have a passion for collecting (and yes, I have been termed a "pack rat" in the past). What then, aside from chips and salsa, could be more suited for each other than sports and collectibles?

Of all sports collectibles and memorabilia, cards have drawn the most interest. The purpose of this column is to tell you what's hot and what's not; who to trade and who to save; what to buy and when to cry.

As for myself, I've been collecting cards and a vast array of sports "stuff" since 1974. My roommate and I seriously contemplated opening a card store last autumn, and consequently purchased more cards last fall and winter. However, having full-time jobs to begin with, we simply didn't have enough time to devote to our plans. Much in need of a venue to sell this cache of cards, I recently began to peddle my wares at local card shows. After a slow start, I began to get a feel for the marketplace and what customers look for (inserts, inserts, and of course...inserts). Business is comparatively good now. And besides, if I wasn't at a show on a Saturday or Sunday morning, I'd be home asleep. It's a close call, but I'll choose the shows anytime.

Show story of the week: I was able to buy six packs of classic pro-line football cards for $5 (83¢ each). However, if I purchased the entire box, the price was $35 (97¢ each). Did I buy the box? No! Get a calculator, pal.

— Who's hot: Jamal Mashburn of the Dallas Mavericks.

— Who's not: Garrison Hearst of the Phoenix Cardinals.

— Pull of the week: Gold redemption card/Upper deck basketball — a $60 value.

— Get 'em now: Dino Radja, Upper deck basketball '93-'94, 30¢.

Happy Hunting!

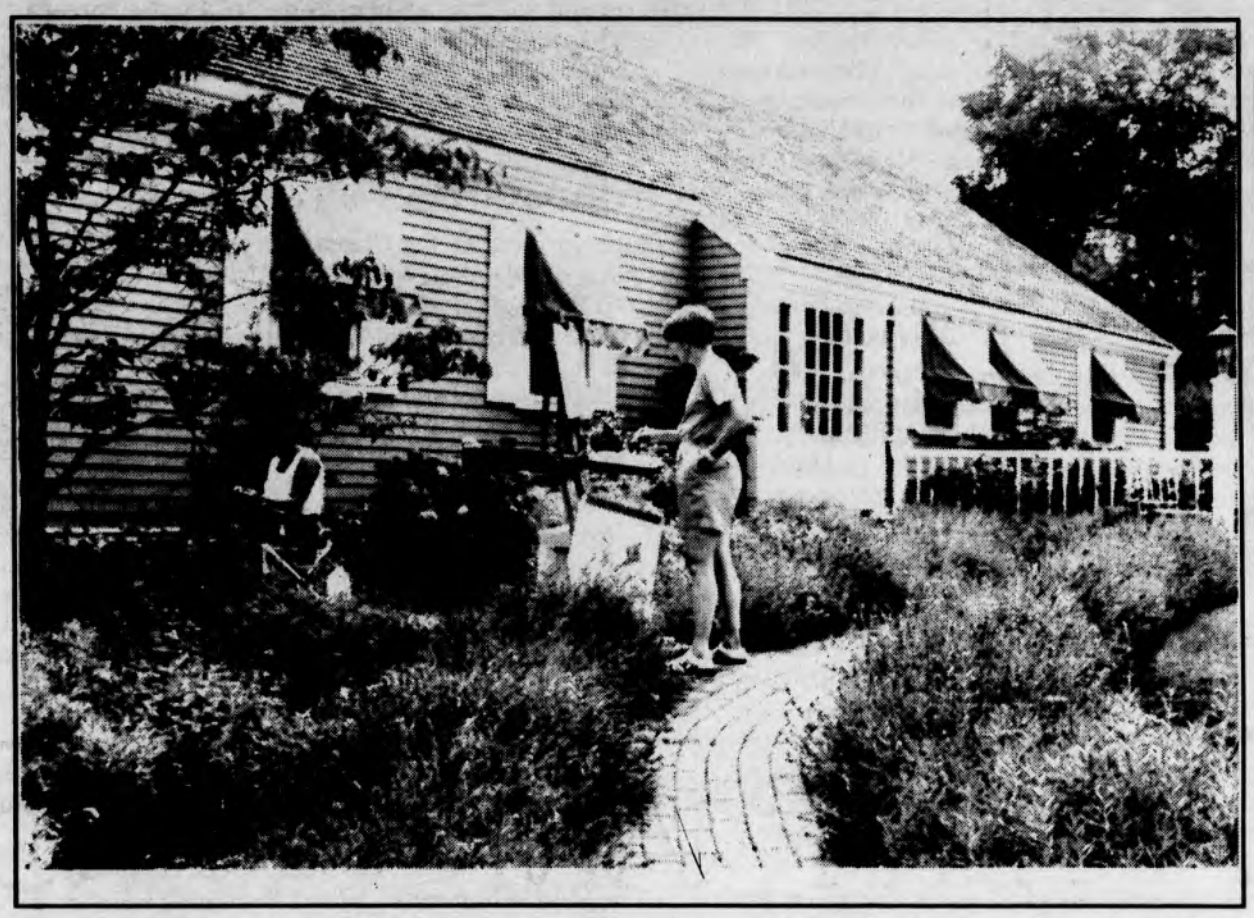
The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863



The Grand Tour stops off this week at Ginger Ferenz's lovely home on Windy Hill Rd. For the past three summers, the South Shore Art Center has gone to the Ferenz home to use the gardens as "subject matter." This year watercolor classes were conducted by Virginia Avery. We thought you might be interested in a look back to this peaceful summer scene. Armed with her camera, Ginger is busy driving around town snapping those holiday touches which make Cohasset unique this time of year. Be sure to greet her with a great, big hello and stay tuned to the Cohasset Mariner every week for The Grand Tour.

CDC to present comedy

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present, "No Sex Please, We're British," a two act comedy by Anthony Marriott and Alistair Foot, beginning at 8 p.m. Friday Jan. 7, 1994 at the Cohasset Town Hall. Other performances will be offered at 8 p.m. Friday Jan. 8; 2 p.m. Sunday Jan. 9 and 8 p.m. Thursday Jan. 13, Friday Jan. 14 and Saturday Jan. 15.

The performance on Thursday, Jan. 13 will benefit the Cohasset food pantry.

Bob Champagne is directing. Angi Walsh and Gayl Varallo are production managers and Stephanie Pedigo is stage manager. Members of the case are Harry Heineman, Scott Metevier, Sally Wright, Mike Nakashima, Molly Hochkeppel, Bob Julian, Julia Szulerowski, Deb Fitzpatrick and Dan and Mike Walsh.

For information call 383-2151.

Craft sale set

An exhibit and sale of traditional American crafts featuring 33 professional artisans will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 4 at the Hingham Junior High, Main St., Hingham.

Among those exhibiting will be David Claggett, a Vermont tinsmith, whose work is sold at the Museum of American Folk Art in New York and the Winthur Museum in Delaware, as well as at Colonial Williamsburg. The husband-and-wife team of Andrew and Phyllis Leck of Round Pond, Maine will display Andrew's hand-forged iron pieces for home and hearth while Phyllis will be represented by handwoven coverlets, rugs and other fabrics. Hand-carved folk sculptures and Santa Claus figures are the specialty of Tim Jumper of Hingham while Joyce Curry, also of Hingham will display her handwoven baskets in a variety of sizes and styles. this is an opportunity to purchase pottery, quilts, decoys, Shaker boxes, primitive paintings and many other fine crafts created by nationally known artisans as well as a chance to talk with the artists themselves.

Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1 for children under 12. Lunch and refreshments will be available.

Locals in "Holiday Pops!"

"Holiday Pops!", the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra's annual celebration of music and dance will take place at 2 and 8 p.m. Saturday Dec. 4 and 2 p.m. Sunday Dec. 5 at Memorial Hall, Court St., Plymouth. Rudolf Schlegel, former music director of the philharmonic and creator of this concert will be the guest conductor.

More than 100 dancers from eastern Massachusetts are involved in this production. Dancers from Cohasset are Emily Libby, Megan Chastain, Torrey Androski, Liz Myers and Clara Sceery.

The philharmonic will open the program with light classical and symphonic pops favorites followed by a carol sing-along.

Tickets are available at Notes & Quotes in Kingston, Hub Music Shop in Pembroke, The Studio in Duxbury and the Snow Goose Shop in Plymouth or by calling the Philharmonic at (508)746-8008.

Coastline councils to meet

There will be a joint meeting of the South Shore Coastline Councils for Children from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 14 at the home of Roberta Dunfield, 35 Arbutus Dr., Braintree.

The business meeting will be followed by a holiday social. All council meetings are free and the public is encouraged to attend.

For information call Marty Amdur at 749-0691.

Winter rec. programs set

Winter afternoon recreation programs for children age 4 through grade 6 will meet daily from 3:30 pm. to 5:30 p.m. at Deer Hill School Jan. 17 through March 4.

In addition the school department conducts a day care program at the Deer Hill School daily from right after school until 6 p.m. Those needing day care prior to recreation programs which begin at 3:30 p.m. or after the programs should register on an hourly basis/rate. Day care registration forms are available at the Deer Hill and Osgood School offices. Students from Osgood enrolled in the day care program at Deer Hill will be bused to Deer Hill.

Registration forms for the after school programs will be sent home with students and should be returned to the recreation department office before Jan. 13.

Authors to be at bookstore

Children's book authors, Ann and John Hassett will be signing their latest book, "We Got My Brother at the Zoo," from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday Nov. 27 at Buttonwood Books and Toys, Cushing Plaza, Rte. 3A, Cohasset.

"We Got My Brother at the Zoo" is a story about the difficulties of adjusting to a new sibling. John and Ann Hassett's other books, "Moose on the Loose," and "Junior: A Little Loon Tale," will also be available.

The Hassetts are originally from Marshfield, but have moved recently to Maine with their two daughters.

House tour planned

A holiday house tour, sponsored by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 8.

Tickets are available at the Cohasset Community Center or by calling Peg Smart at 383-6438.

Village fair, Dec. 4

Throughout Cohasset preparations are underway for the Village Fair on Cohasset Common, Saturday, Dec. 4, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. All the churches on the common, in addition to Panagia Greek Orthodox Church and Beechwood Congregational, are working to make this annual event a fun kickoff to the Cohasset holiday season.

At Second Congregational Church the elves are producing an eclectic assortment of items. Handcrafts include everything from tutus and bridal veils to pine cone wreathes, Christmas tree skirts, wooden snowmen and Santas. Plans are underway for an old-fashioned New England Clam Chowder Bar, a food and candy table and special activities for the children.

St. Stephen's Church will again offer its very successful book sale. The committee is now accepting book donations which can be left at the church on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 8 to 11 a.m. and from 2 to 4 p.m. Tapes and CDs as well as books for all ages are welcome (except for encyclopedias, old textbooks and condensed books) as well as specialty magazines such as gourmet, craft and hobby.

A Swedish coffee shop will highlight offerings at First Parish Unitarian where cooks are readying their recipes for Scandinavian coffee breads, cakes and gourmet coffee with plenty of embellishments. The parish will also offer an old-style "jumble" sale, a bit of everything from attic treasures, closet clear-outs, and basement bargains to garage recycle items.

This year for the first time the Cohasset PSO will be sponsoring a "Secret Room" in the Watermelon Room at St. Stephen's. For children only, kids may enter the room to purchase small holiday gifts for their families and friends. The gifts will be wrapped by volunteers before the children leave the "Secret Room,"

A variety of delectable Greek holiday food as well as greens and wreaths will be presented by the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church at the Town Hall.

Off the common, the Beechwood Congregational Church will offer a variety of holiday items for sale at their church on Church Street, Beechwood.

Order X-mas wreaths

Place your order for Christmas wreaths and boxwood trees to be made by ladies of the Greek Orthodox Church, Panagia.

Wreaths will also be sold at Cohasset Village Fair on Dec. 4.

Call Jean Syrmopoulos at 383-9071 to order.

Mom's morning out

The Community Center is offering baby-sitting Saturdays, through Dec. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Pre-registration by Thursday for any Saturday.

Fee is $11 for the first child and $7 for the second child. Call 383-0088.

Annual Merrie Market

The annual Old Ship Church Merrie Market will be held Saturday, Dec. 4, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main Street, Hingham.

The Merrie Market is an old fashioned holiday fair where people of all ages can buy delightful gifts and dazzling treasures. Festive holiday greens and wreaths, available for purchase, will be the first find to catch the eye of everyone who enters. As one meanders through the market, the tantalizing smells of the snack bar and the baked goods will entice you to stop and linger before you choose a treat to enjoy—then or later. As you are taking in the scope of the unique handmade gift items, the children can have their pictures taken with Frosty the Snowman and enjoy the children's table, complete with gifts for their pets. Be sure to buy a chance at the raffle table for one or all of the fantastic prizes available.

Sponsored by Old Ship Church, proceeds from this annual event will be used to maintain the Old Ship Church, Hingham's First Meetinghouse, built in 1681 and now a National Historic Landmark.

Spinners to meet

The South Shore Spinners Guild will have a Christmas Party from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 2 at Old South Union Church, 25 Columbian St., So. Weymouth. Those attending should bring a small gift to swap. New members are welcome. Call 331-1493 for information.

art notes

Art & craft sale planned

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset will hold its annual art & craft sale from 6 to 9 pm. Friday Dec. 3 and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday Dec. 4. There is a $3 admission to the Friday evening preview and includes wine and hors d'oeuvres. There is no admission charge on Saturday.

There will be drop-in workshops for children upstairs while parents shop.

Fine art created by SSAC Gallery Artists and members will be on sale at print prices. From watercolors to oils to monoprints to photographs, the diversity of work offers a wide selection. More than 20 craft artisans will also be selling their work including wooden clocks, silk scarves and accessories, baskets, pottery, ceramic puppets, children's sweaters, woven throws, painted wooden items, birdhouses, bookends and Christmas ornaments.

Quilts on display in the Pieceful Connections: Contemporary Quilt Exhibition are also on sale. The center's gift gallery will also be open with special holiday hours from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, Sunday Nov. 28, Dec. 5 and Dec. 12 from 1 to 5 p.m. and Fridays Nov. 26 through Dec. 17 until 9 p.m.

For information call 383-9548.

Brass concert benefit

The Paramount Brass quintet will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 11 at the First Parish Church, Duxbury to benefit the Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury.

A Boston-based ensemble, the Paramount Brass was the grand prize winner at the 1992 New York Brass Conference Competition.

The Paramount Brass performs a repertoire from all periods and provides a musical experience for everyone. The musicians display their own style in a number of original pieces written specifically for this group. One concert goer refers to the talented ensemble as "one voice."

They have performed throughout the Northeastern United States, entertaining locally at the Wang Center, Tanglewood-on-Parade, the Boston Esplanade and the New England Conservatory. They are currently the Quintet-in-Residence at the North Shore Conservatory.

Proceeds from the concert will provide scholarships for students of the Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury.

General admission is $10 and reserved seating is $25. Tickets can be purchased by calling 934-2731 or 749-7565. Limited tickets may be available at the door.

Holiday art workshops

Registration is now open for several two-part holiday art workshops. In "Painted Ornaments/Painted Cookies" children ages 5 through 12 may create ornaments from baker's clay. These workshops will be from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 16 and Friday, Dec. 17 and Monday Dec. 13 and 20.

During vacation Tuesday, Dec. 28 and Wednesday, Dec. 29 a workshop sculpting with colored clays will be offered. Boys and girls will learn the techniques of creating with this medium.

For information call the Children's Creativity Workshops at 749-2453.

Tenants' future foggy following sale of plaza

By Mary Ford

Could a third super store be coming to town?

The recent sale of Cushing Plaza for $2.65 million to a realty trust is fueling speculation that the Shaw's supermarket chain plans to build at the Route 3A site.

A shroud of secrecy over the purchase coupled with an uncertain future has the Plaza business owners worried and gearing up for a fight.

John D. Kelleher, head of real estate development at Shaw's, would neither confirm nor deny that the supermarket corporation has purchased Cushing Plaza.

But he did acknowledge that Shaw's is eyeing Cohasset.

"We've been interested in the Cohasset area for some time," Kelleher said. Shaw's, which had pro-

HMOs prompt local pharmacist to sell business

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A Cohasset fixture for more than 100 years closed its doors last week.

Colonial Pharmacy, owned by Ralph Harrison since 1959, and a staple before that since the 1880's, was not open for business Friday.

Super Stop & Shop purchased the pharmaceutical business from Harrison for an undisclosed sum. Harrison will manage the new Stop & Shop pharmacy which is at the front of the supermarket where the videos were.

The closing took the Village by surprise. Even drug store employees weren't told until two days before the store closed.

Chamber of Commerce president Robert Martin, whose insurance business is a few doors away, said he heard a rumor last Monday and then Friday he saw the inventory being packed up and taken away.

Wanted: return of stolen signs

Those who have taken road signs have until January 1 to return them "no questions asked," Safety Officer Clifton Jones said.

Jones said swiping signs has reached epidemic proportions in town and poses a real danger.

"Someone is going to get hurt," he said. Jones said the stop signs at the Beechwood/Doane St. intersection have all gone missing. And a brand-new 'not a thru way' sign at Flintlocke Rd. was stolen just two days after it was put up.

Jones asks that parents check their children's rooms to look for signs. He said kids steal signs like 'Do Not Enter' to decorate for their bedrooms.

"If the signs come back before Jan. 1 — there won't be any questions asked," he said. The signs can be left at the police station or highway department.

Writer finds pleasure in fiction

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Italian-born Cohasset resident Ubaldo DiBenedetto felt a surge of pride when he learned his first novel, Polar Day 9, was going into a second printing. For seven years he poured his heart and soul into his book, an environmental technothriller, while nestled in his tiny office amid shelves of books and Spanish paraphernalia.

To his left is a ham radio. With it, he communicates with friends in Italy and around the world. In 1981, after an earthquake in Italy, reporters sat in his office listening to DiBenedetto's communications with Italians on the scene. But the excitement and action is only part of the hobby's reward.

"I like to have friends around the world," he explained. "It's one way of expanding my world."

Indeed, DiBenedetto's world is worth sharing. The 66-year-old Harvard Linguistics professor wakes up each day to home-brewed Italian coffee ("The only thing American is the water — and that's purified,") and sits listening to classical flute music on his

Cohasset's week

Lost boy turns up

A ten-year-old Rhode Island boy spending the holiday weekend in Cohasset with relatives went back home with a story to tell.

Stephen McNamara of Coventry, R.I. with is dog Trixie in tow and along with his sister and older cousin went for a nature walk Friday along the railroad tracks in North Scituate. Somehow, Stephen got separated from the others and tried to find his way back to Cohasset.

He ended up in the back yard of a Gannett Road Scituate home and knocked on the door. The couple tried to help the boy find the house in Cohasset but Stephen couldn't identify it. So the couple took Stephen and Trixie to the Cohasset police station.

The officer on duty, Lawrence Ainslie, had just heard over the police radio that a search for a missing child was being launched in Scituate.

"He was scared," Ainslie recalled. "So I let him watch TV and talked to him" until he was reunited with his cousin and sister.

Cohasset Police Officer Lawrence Ainslie chats with Stephen McNamara, 10. Stephen was visiting relatives in town over the Thanksgiving weekend and wandered off during a nature walk with his sister and cousin. A Scituate couple found Stephen and his dog, Trixie, and took them to the police station where Ainslie settled them down and let them watch TV until they could be reunited with Stephen's relatives.

Speed limit addressed

Selectmen will ask the state to investigate reducing the 50 m.p.h. speed limit on Rte. 3A near Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza.

The matter came up following an appeal for slower speed on the state highway from Seavey Engineering Associates, Inc., 135 King St. In a letter to the board, John M. Seavey alerted the board to the "dangerous situation" at that location.

Seavey also asked that the town request the state paint a crosswalk across Rte. 3A at the plaza and install an appropriate pedestrian crossing sign.

Selectmen agreed to ask Safety Officer Clifton Jones to look into the matter. However the consensus of the board was that a crosswalk would be dangerous to pedestrians because of the traffic speed and density.

Metal building to remain

The Victorian house which was the showroom for Cohasset Colonials and the post-and-beam boat house won't be the only structures to remain at the Hagerty site which was recently purchased by the town.

After hearing reasoning from Selectman Merle S. Brown, who sits on the Hagerty committee, selectmen decided that the metal building at the site should remain and be used for storage.

"It's a reasonably good building," Brown said. He said the Hagerty committee did not feel it should be demolished along with the other structures.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said he was "cautiously optimistic" that bids for the demolition project could be opened Dec. 15 if the conservation commission has an order of conditions ready in time. The town plans to demolish the remaining hodgepodge of buildings on the two-acre site.

Car flips on King St.

Thomas J. Lucas was lucky to walk away from a single-car accident on King Street Saturday morning, police said.

Lucas's 1987 Toyota hit a stone wall near 326 King Street at 9:30 a.m. and flipped over three times ending up on its roof, Officer Richard Yocum said.

Hermon Maynard of King St. told selectmen Monday that there have been at least three accidents over the years at the same spot.

Selectmen voted unanimously to ask Safety Officer Clifton Jones to look into the matter.

Cohasset's week

Boat shot with arrows

Paul Figueiredo's fishing boat, Janice Marie, was vandalized twice over the weekend, police said.

Someone shot hunting arrows into the boat's bow, Officer Richard Yocum said.

Yocum said Figueiredo's mooring is close to Government Island and that a compound bow was probably used to shoot the arrows which penetrated the boat's planks.

The incidents are under investigation, Yocum said.

Teenager cited in accident

Police cited John L. Gillen, 17, of Hingham for failure to stay in the proper lane, following a two-car accident on Rte. 3A at about 11:45 a.m. Sunday near the Super Stop & Shop.

Travelling southbound in a 1978 Monte Carlo, Gillen tried to slow down to go left and lost control on the wet roadway crossing over into the northbound lane side swiping the 1989 Toyota driven by Brian James, 42, of Buttonwood Lane in Cohasset. Gillen was checked out at the scene for possible injuries, police said.

Branch damages cars

In a freak accident, two cars were damaged Sunday by the same tree limb, police said.

Both vehicles were travelling north on Rte. 3A by the Super Stop & Shop when the strong wind and rain caused a large tree limb to fall onto the windshield of the 1988 Ford van driven by Richard A. Bonanno of Scituate. The the limb apparently flew off Bonanno's car and struck the front end of the 1991 Toyota driven by Domenic M. Baccari of Reservoir Rd., Cohasset.

There were no injuries, police said.

Growth cutting okay'ed

In a Nov. 8 memo Jeffrey C. Waal, chairman of the Conservation Commission, gave the recreation commission the go ahead to cut back the growth in the skating area in Elms Meadow off Cushing Road each fall.

posed to build a supermarket on the Cohasset/Scituate line, unsuccessfully lobbied for a zoning change a Scituate's annual town meeting last spring.

At that time Shaw's officials said they would continue to look for a site to build a supermarket in the area.

Cushing Plaza, 739 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., was sold Nov. 15 by Resolution Trust for Old Stone Bank to Adrian Realty Trust for $2.65 million in cash, according to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. The deed was transferred the same day to 739 Realty Trust for $500.

Resolution Trust is a federal agency that takes over failed banks. The prior owner of Cushing Plaza was foreclosed on by Old Stone Bank which later failed.

Shaw's is the sole beneficiary for Adrian Trust, according to the registry, with trustees listed as John D. Kelleher and Scott W. Ramsay. Ramsay is treasurer of Shaw's.

Kelleher would not say why the deed was transferred to 739 Realty Trust, whose trustees are listed as Karen DeMers of East Bridgewater and Jean C. Tracy of Carver.

Several of the Plaza businesses contacted by the Cohasset Mariner have retained attorneys to look into their lease rights. Legal ramifications of what happens to lease agreements following foreclosure on both the landlord and the bank that held the mortgage aren't clear.

What is clear, however, is the tenants in Cushing Plaza don't want to move.

Sea 'N Cheese has been at the shopping center for 11 years and the family-owned business expanded about three years ago into the former J. Bildner's location.

"What's our future? My son has a baby on the way," said Cynthia Peters, whose family owns the specialty market.

Linda Johnson, owner of American Image, said the commercial tenants have been left in the dark.

"It's not fair, no one will tell us anything," Johnson said. "The girls that work here don't know what it do.

"We stuck with this location when it didn't have customers and there was nobody in the parking lot — it's picked up so much and now we might all be kicked out," she said.

Betsey Detwiler, owner of Buttonwood Books and Toys which opened in the Plaza four years ago, said the tenants all expect letters from the new owners. But in the meantime, she's staying focused on the holidays.

"We'll be there serving our customers one way or another," she said.

If Shaw's Supermarkets Inc. does plan to build a supermarket in Cohasset, it could be the third 'super' store in the town. Star Market wants to build a supermarket on 12 acres at the corner of King St. and Rte. 3A near Super Stop & Shop.

Return of stolen signs wanted

But once the amnesty period ends, police plan to get tough.

"It's larceny and we'll take them to court," Jones said.

He explained that signs are not only a safety issue but the highway department can't continually replace them on a limited budget.

"So give the town a Christmas present and return the signs," Jones asked.

Bill payments made

Selectmen approved payment of two professional statements from sewer counsel Goodwin, Procter & Hoar for $2,241.06 for August and $2,612.35 for September; and to Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson for $2,702.50 for October.

Reappointment approved

Selectmen reappointed building inspector Robert Egan to another three-year term. The board will ask the personnel board and conservation commission, however, to investigate having the duties of conservation agent rolled into the building inspector's position.

Unemployment is up

The employment news in September was not good for Cohasset .

According to figures from the state Department of Employment and Training, unemployment in Cohasset rose from 4.5 percent in August to 5.1 percent the following month.

In September, 192 Cohasset residents received unemployment insurance benefits from a total local labor force of 3,781.

The state unemployment rate dropped to 6.9 percent in October, down from the September rate of 7.2 percent.

Unemployment rates for municipalities lag a month behind the state numbers.

According to state Commissioner Nils L. Nordberg, "October's rate reverses the trend we have seen since June. We have begun to absorb entrants and re-entrants into the job market - with gains in the construction and services industries.

The Mariner welcomes your letters to the Editor.

DO YOU NEED A WILL?

To answer the question "Who NEEDS a WILL?", it is simpler to respond in the negative; YOU DO NOT NEED A WILL IF YOU INTEND TO DIE WITH NO FAMILY, NO FRIENDS AND NO ASSETS TO BE CONCERNED ABOUT... Obviously, for most of us, this is not the case!

Ensure that your wishes are carried out in the event of a catastrophic illness or even death... Protect yourself as well as those you love!

WHAT YOU WILL NEED:

- Will: Allows you to determine those individuals who receive your property at death. It also allows you to name a personal representative for your estate affairs, appoint a guardian for minor children and set up trusts for your children.
- Health Care Proxy: The appointment of a person you trust to make medical decisions in the event that you are unable to.
- Living Will: A declaration that in the event of a catastrophic illness, you do not want to be kept alive by artificial means.
- Power of Attorney: Naming another person you trust as your "agent" to handle your general financial affairs if you are unable to.

At the Law Office of Alan H. Segal we believe that in today's world every individual should have these basic and necessary documents. Therefore, we offer basic "Will" packages at an affordable price. More importantly, we understand your busy schedule and can produce your Will package within a half hour. All this without sacrificing service and quality!

Our basic Will package includes the four necessary documents mentioned above.

HMOs prompt local pharmacist to sell business

Long-time employee Lynne Brandenburg didn't find out until two business days before the store closed after customers said they'd seen Harrison's picture at Stop & Shop.

Harrison said the sale was kept under wraps so the purchase and sale would go smoothly.

Stop & Shop spokesman Terry Vandewater would not comment on the apparent secrecy of the sale and would only say it was company policy not to discuss terms of any agreement.

Harrison explained that times were tough for independent pharmacies because people are being forced to buy prescriptions from large chains.

"It was a business decision," he said. "Stop & Shop approached me and said they'd like to buy me out. They made an attractive offer. I thought about it and liked it and that's what I did." He said it was too soon to say if he would sell or lease the Colonial building.

Harrison said "an influencing factor" in his selling was a change in the prescription policy of one of the town's health insurance providers.

Sixty-five percent of the town's 190 employees on health insurance subscribe to Bay State Health Care which, as of March 1, restricted prescriptions to retail providers CVS, Brooks, and Osco.

"I asked the town to divide prescription coverage from the hospital plan but they seemed not to choose to do that," he said.

Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon said separating the coverage from the hospital plan would be subject to collective bargaining. He said there was no incentive to split the coverage because employees were satisfied with the plan offered to them.

Brandenburg said the store lost 30 percent of its business overnight when town employees could no longer get their prescriptions filled at Colonial.

"The pharmacy part was dragging down the rest of the store," she said. "We had a steady clientele for cosmetics, fragrancies and gifts but people were not in the store to get prescriptions.

"And Ralph had visions of things not getting better," she said.

All Harrison's files have been transferred to Stop & Shop. The old Colonial phone number 383-0100 rings at the new store.

The inventory of cosmetics and gifts at Cohasset Colonial is being transferred to Harrison's Marshfield store. Pharmacist Grace Adams has been employed by Stop & Shop and will be another familiar face in the supermarket pharmacy.

Reports that the Marshfield Colonial Pharmacy is also closing could not be verified. Harrison would not comment. Vandewater at Stop & Shop also declined to comment when asked if Harrison's pharmaceutical business in Marshfield was also sold and if he would also be managing the pharmacy at the Pembroke Super Stop & Shop on Rte. 139.

Martin said the loss of Colonial "is a blow" to the Village.

"All we can do is hope for the best," he said about the closing of one of the Village anchor stores.

Selectman Jane O. Geodecke said she was sad to see the store go and the "wonderful service" that the business provided the town.

(See page 7)

The lights at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy went out last week after the pharmaceutical business at the drug store was bought by Stop & Shop. The store has been a fixture in Cohasset for decades.

Despite being kept in the dark, Brandenburg spoke positively about the difficult choice that Harrison was faced with.

"It was a burden for Ralph not to share it (buy out)," she said. "Stipulations in the agreement said he couldn't."

Brandenburg said she and sales clerk Lisa Keddy are "toying with the idea" of opening up a business in cosmetics and fragrancies. Keddy worked at Colonial for about a year.

She said the last few days at the store were very emotional.

"Customers were crying and hugging. It was so sweet.

"I've had a relationship with these people for 28 years," Brandenburg recalled. "I'd like to extend my thanks and best wishes to all the people who supported us.

"Our wonderful customers, I will miss them all. They are like an extended family, a lot I came to know as friends. They'd tell me about their lives and their own families. I watched their kids grow up."

❑ Patrick Suhrbier had great news to make his Thanksgiving even better than ever! He has been accepted to participate in the University of Colorado's Canadian Arctic Trip as a six credit upper division course.

And, he should be pleased with himself, only a few freshmen were selected to participate in this extensive trip! This will take place in August, and hopefully we will hear all about it from Patrick upon his return.

❑ Have you gotten the Christmas Spirit yet? Would you like some ideas for decorating your home? The Community Garden Club of Cohasset has the perfect answer for you. They are holding "Cohasset Celebrates," a winter house tour reflecting the joy of the holidays. Seven homes will be on the tour, decorated by the club members. Most of the homes have panoramic water views, which adds to the festive air. Refreshments will be served at the Second Congregational Church from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The date is Wednesday, Dec. 8, the time is from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., admission is $15, and tickets are available at the Cohasset Community Center, or you may call Peg Smart at 383-6438. Don't miss it!!

Cohasset committee members Dottie Remick and Max Pounder discuss the exciting new services at the new Outpatient Rehabilitation Center at South Shore Hospital during a recent reception for members of South Shore Hospital's Cohasset Regional Town Committee.

❑ How many times were you asked in the last couple of weeks, "Where were you and what were you doing when President Kennedy was assassinated?" It certainly brought back memories for Arthur B. Howe, which he wanted to share with all.

This is what he wrote, 'Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country.' These immortal words spoken by John F. Kennedy at his inauguration reminded me of the time I met Jack and his brother Joe in the summer of 1924 when Jack was seven and I was 15. I was sitting on the sand at Pleasant (Sandy) Beach in Cohasset with Mort Rose, deceased, when Jack and Joe came down from their summer home located at the point in back of the former bathhouse and sat with us. Joe had a perpetual smile but Jack was very serious and somber. Jack sat about two or three feet from us letting sand flow through his fingers. Joe had a tennis ball which he would toss to Mort who in turn would toss it to me.

"After a while Jack, who seemed to be frustrated, came toward us and tried to intercept the ball. After trying to get the ball, I said to Joe and Mort, 'Let the kid have the ball.'

"I never realized until Jack was assassinated in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, that I was speaking to the future president of the United States of America. It was a moment that I will never forget. God Bless both Jack and Joe."

❑ We hear that Betty Maree had a very special birthday which was held at the American Legion Hall Nov. 6!! Many family members and friends attended the great event. Betty is a member of the Sweet Adelines Chorus (Island Grove Chapter). They sang for a while and everyone was pleased at how great they were. Then Jay Fiori deejayed the remainder of the evening. Everyone had a super time with great food and lots of laughs. May you have many more happy birthdays to come, Betty. We love you!

❑ Sad news comes from Naples, Florida this week, Nov. 11 Daisy Rogers passed away after a long battle with throat cancer. Many knew Daisy and her husband Bill when they lived on Main Street. They were an integral part of Cohasset! Daisy was a former Community Garden Club President.

Our hearts go out to Bill at this time of great loss.

❑ Happy Birthday greetings go to Laura (Pompeo) Ritz, who will be celebrating her big day in Germany (that's where Laura and Jeffrey live).

Hope its a wonderful one!!

❑ The Broad Cove Chorale's Christmas Concert will be led tomorrow night (Dec. 3) at 8 p.m. at the Broad Cove House, 66 Lincoln St. Hingham.

Four Cohasset ladies will be singing in this concert: Deedee Rousseau, Lisa Koed, Jane Forrer and Susan Cameron. Tickets are $9 and can be purchased from chorale members or at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square (sold in advance only).

❑ That's the news from here.

weddings & engagements

Starmer/Moyse

Susan Elizabeth Starmer, daughter of Ralph and Linda Starmer of Cohasset, married Danny John Moyse, son of Carolyn and Wayne Moyse of McIndoe Falls, Vt. on July 24 at St. Anthony's Church. Fr. Richard Bourgeois officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Maid of honor was Hilary Haynes of Cohasset. Jadine Starmer of Chatham, NJ, Michelle Mushroe of Miami, Fla., Linda Piecuch of Manchester, NH and Elizabeth King of Dallas, Texas were bridesmaids.

Duane Moyse of Monroe, NH and David Moyse of Bangor, Maine both served as best man. Ushers were Doug Smith of Boston, Dennis Aiken of Candia, NH and Russell Starmer of Cohasset.

The bride is a graduate of Texas Christian University and works at BIS Strategic Decisions in Norwell.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Vermont and works at Thomson Financial Services in Boston.

A wedding trip to Hawaii followed the reception at the Scituate Country Club.

"Come Quick, Mr. Grillo! The Cat Is Peeing On Our Tabriz."
Oh-oh, cat trouble! First, sop up as much as you can without spreading the stain. Then let me give it a good, professional cleaning. (The rug, not the cat.) I'll Scotchgard® it, too, so when this happens again (let's be realistic), it'll clean up more easily. I'll also give you a free copy of my booklet on Oriental rug care. It's filled with helpful information, including how to deal with cats like yours.
By the way, we offer pick-up and delivery service, or you can use our cash-and-carry service and save 25%.

Thanks, Lynne

When the doors to Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy closed last week it was the end of an era.

Gone is the homey, friendly place which was so much more than somewhere to fill prescriptions.

Not only will we miss the paper faces of a youthful Steve and Eydie, Jay Leno, Barbara Mandell and Steve Carlin on the walls but we'll miss all the stuff: the scrunchies for pony tails, unique key rings, and the toiletries and cosmetics that made shopping at Colonial so much fun.

The copy machine in the front window wasn't just for copies. It was also a place to have a friendly word or two. We'd often run into local notables there like Polly Logan or Ned Tebbetts among others who always had time to share some politics.

But most off all, we'll miss Lynne Brandenburg.

Lynne is blessed with an abundance of patience — a true virtue. Never did we hear her raise her voice to a customer — not even to those interrupting a $200 cosmetics' sale to demand that the copying machine be turned on.

For 28 years Lynne provided a warmth of service that became synonymous with the local pharmacy.

During the few minutes while collecting items left at our drop spot at Colonial every Monday and Tuesday, Lynne shared with us bits of news and happenings in both Cohasset and Hingham, where Lynne lives with her family.

Reached by telephone, Lynne was still thinking more about her customers this week than her own loss.

"I'd like to extend my thanks and best wishes to all the people who supported us," she said. "Our wonderful customers, I will miss them all.

"They are like an extended family, a lot I came to know as friends. They'd tell me about their lives and their own families. I watched their kids grow up."

Lynne says she and Lisa Keddy, who worked at Colonial for about a year, are considering opening a cosmetics and fragrancies business. We wish them all the best — and know they'll have a loyal following.

Don't miss the Village Fair, Saturday

The Cohasset Village Fair, sponsored by five churches, the P.S.O. and the Appalachian Service Project, will be held on Saturday, December 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Throughout the day the Cohasset Carillon in Saint Stephen's Church tower will be featured in 45 minute segments on the hour, beginning at 10 a.m. and ending at 2:45 p.m. Advent and Christmas music will be played by Mary Kennedy, Assistant Carillonneur at Saint Stephen's; Robert S. Wright of Bristol, Conn.; Marilyn Clark of Rockport; Lucy Dechene of Fitchburg; Terence McKinney of Allston; and Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of Saint Stephen's Church. The tower will be open during these hours and visitors to the keyboard room are welcome.

The Bake Table at Saint Stephen's, 16 Highland Avenue, will feature a delicious assortment of jellies, breads and pies. Christmas greens, centerpieces and wreaths will also be sold. The Village Fair Book Sale will present a wide array of titles. One Cohasset resident donated an entire library to this sale. A silent auction will also be held on the day of the fair for several unusually fine books. All proceeds will benefit the Outreach Program of Saint Stephen's.

Members of the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue, are busy sewing, baking and crafting in preparation for Village Fair Day.

The craft area will feature decorations and gifts for everyone on your list. For your sweet tooth, purchase homemade fudge, chocolate sauce, candies, cookies and other goodies at the Candy and Bake Table. Be sure to stop by the Chowder Bar for lunch prepared by the church's now famous chefs. A quilt raffle and other proceeds will all benefit the Church Benevolence Fund.

The First Parish Unitarian Church, 23 North Main Street, will offer a coffee concession and sell homemade Swedish coffee bread. There will be other baked goods for sale as well. A "jumble" sale at the church will feature yard-sale type bargains.

The Panagia Greek Orthodox Church will hold its sale of great food, Christmas crafts and greens at the Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

The Cohasset P.S.O. will offer a Secret Room at Saint Stephen's Church where children can buy inexpensive holiday presents and wrap them in secret so the gifts, when given, will be a wonderful surprise.

The Appalachia Service Project Youth will sponsor a visit from Santa Claus. Santa is scheduled to arrive around 11:30 a.m. at the back of the Second Congregational Church. Picture-ornaments, buttons or picture folders will be available for purchase. The visit with Santa is free.

All of this portion of the fair is on the Cohasset Common. Off the common, at Beechwood Congregational Church, on Church Street, the traditional Snowflake Fair will be held. One of the specialties of this fair is their Beach Glass Candy.

Don't miss this exciting, music-filled, fun day for the whole family at the Cohasset Village Fair, Dec. 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Book sale at St. Stephen's

One feature of Christmas on Cohasset Common is the book sale at Walton Rodgers Hall, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, this Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. A great variety of book bargains await for book lovers. One prominent resident of the town has given an entire library. Other donors have supplied titles to satisfy a wide range of interests.

Available are travel, biography, art, gardening and craft books, as well as a great collection of cookbooks. There are hardcover fiction and paperbacks, including mysteries. There is a table of children's books. Also on sale are tapes and cassettes and specialized magazines.

Come and browse among the tables of books and participate in the silent auction of three very special books. Make your bid and the winners will be announced at the end of the sale!

Liquor license for Music Circus opposed

(The following letter was sent to selectmen).
Dear Mrs. Gjesteby:

I understand that the South Shore Music Circus has applied for a liquor license at 130 Sohier St. in Cohasset.

I own a residential property directly across from the Music Circus and I would be 100% in opposition to the granting of a liquor license to them.

Friends clean up

Last week, Friends of the Library volunteered 12 man-hours to a fall landscape clean-up at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Trees and scrub brush were removed from the front of the building and along the south boundary. In cooperation with the Friends, Peter Laugelle and and the Cohasset Park and Tree Department hauled a full truck-load of scrub brush to the sanitary landfill. Special thanks to Barbara Power, Friends and Trustees who participated in this effort.

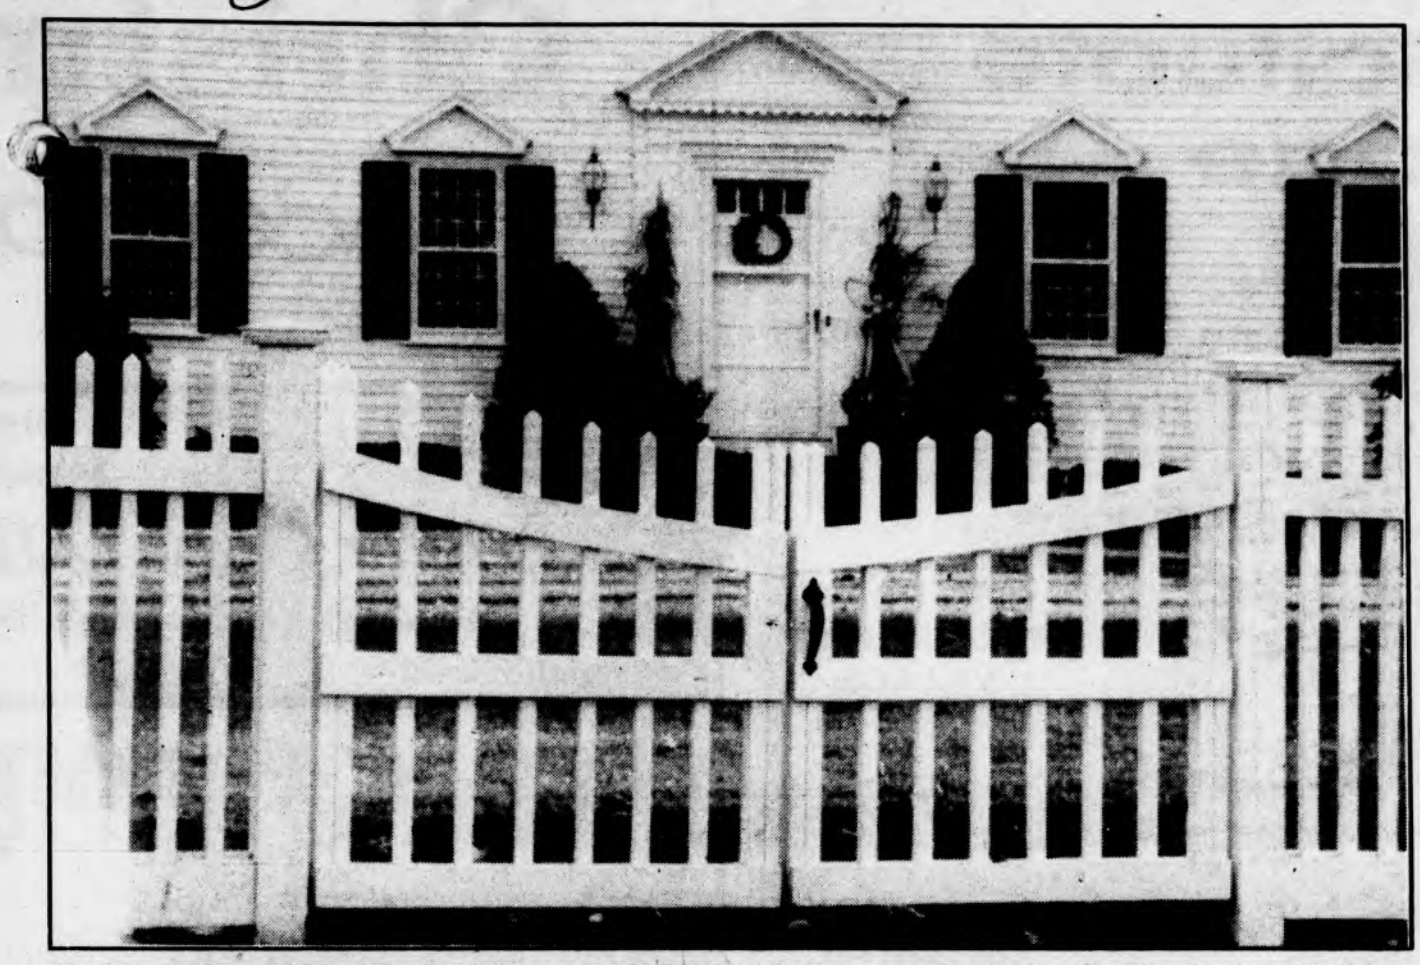
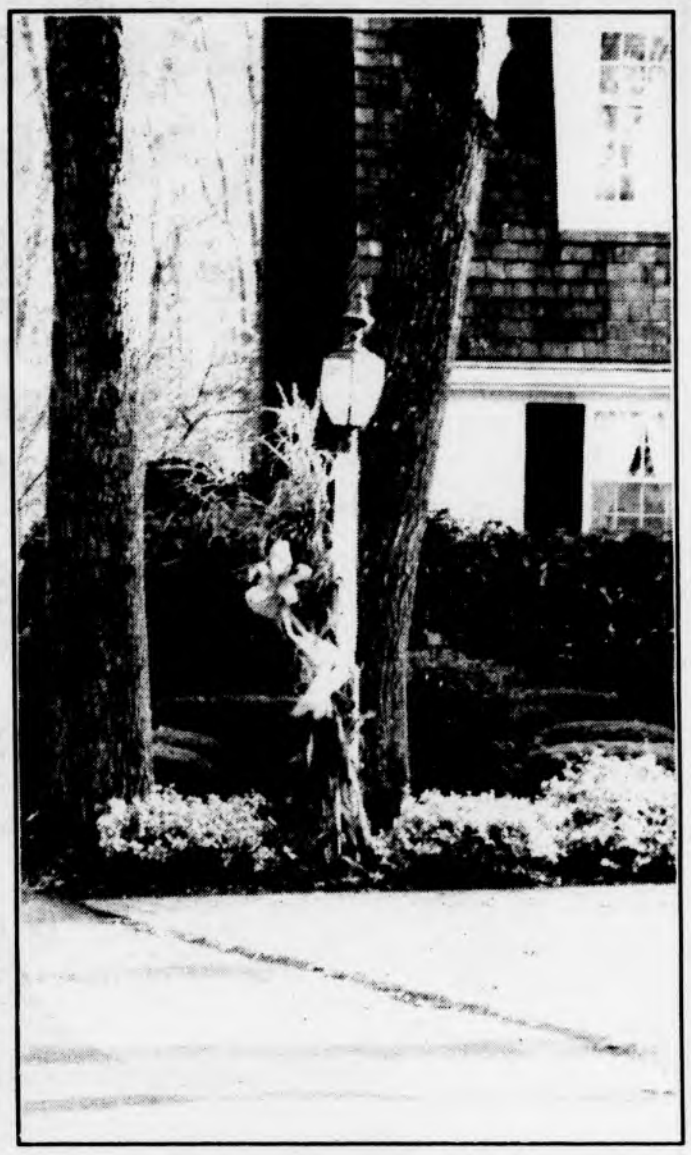
The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863





The home of Donald and Paula Dickerson at 225 Fair Oaks Lane was dressed up for Thanksgiving holiday! In the photograph, you can see the front door flanked by corn stalks tied with golden yellow ribbons and bows and planters on the step are filled with yellow mums. A grapevine wreath hangs on the door. The lamp post, shown in the smaller photo, is also decorated with a corn stalk and tied with the same golden ribbon. This lovely, white Garrison colonial with its pristine white fence seems to invite you to step through the gate and walk to the front door to be welcomed in for Thanksgiving dinner with the family.

Local writer finds pleasure in fiction surround-sound hi-fi while he watches seven "pet" crows from his kitchen windows.

After breakfast, he travelled across the house to his office, where he worked each day, sandwiched between a computer and stacks of papers representing hours of painstaking research.

"Fiction is very punishing. It's a very lonely job," he said. His publisher, Berkley Press, made the 'punishment' more difficult to bear when they marketed the book under the surname, Kyle Donner. The absence of his real name was a blow to his ego, he admitted.

"That was part of the deal." However, he feels lucky to be published. Berkley receives 450 manuscripts a month, he said.

In order to keep up with trends, DiBenedetto enjoys attending writers conferences.

"It's like a coffeehouse where you go in and snuff around. The name of the game is knowing exactly what a market wants," he said.

As Hollywood producers write letters of inquiry on film rights, DiBenedetto seems to have known what the market wanted.

"Even if they don't do it, just the idea that it excited producers in Hollywood is an index of the worth of the novel," he said.

The science vs. nature plot of Polar Day 9, released last May, centers on an environmental conflict where a natural disaster inflicts imminent cold on the earth. As time closes in, the temperature will drop to a level so low that humans can't survive. To save the planet, the hero single-handedly uses technology to try to divert the gulf stream.

Some of the inspiration for the plot came from DiBenedetto's days in the U.S. Army, when he served as a meteorologist.

But writing fiction was difficult for him.

He has been published frequently— under his own name — for scholarly works. But scholastic work is easy compared to the labor of fiction, he said. To write essays and articles the information presents itself clearly and the work is methodical.

"I could get my idea into 125 words," DiBenedetto said. "And then I realized I needed 125,000 more to finish!"

A researcher by trade, he found he could flesh out his story by learning more and more about the setting of the book. As he learned through interviews how scientists at Woods Hole felt while plunging to icy depths, he learned how his character would feel in a similar situation.

"Research will feed you ideas," he said. "If you hit the environment or the landscape properly the characters come out."

DiBenedetto's lead character is based on a culmination of American qualities that impressed him most when he came from Italy in 1948. Hard work, morality and working for a common good were traits he admired.

"If you're conscious of your mission and you're unabashedly conscious of your own self-worth, you can put the two together," he explained. "That reflected America to me."

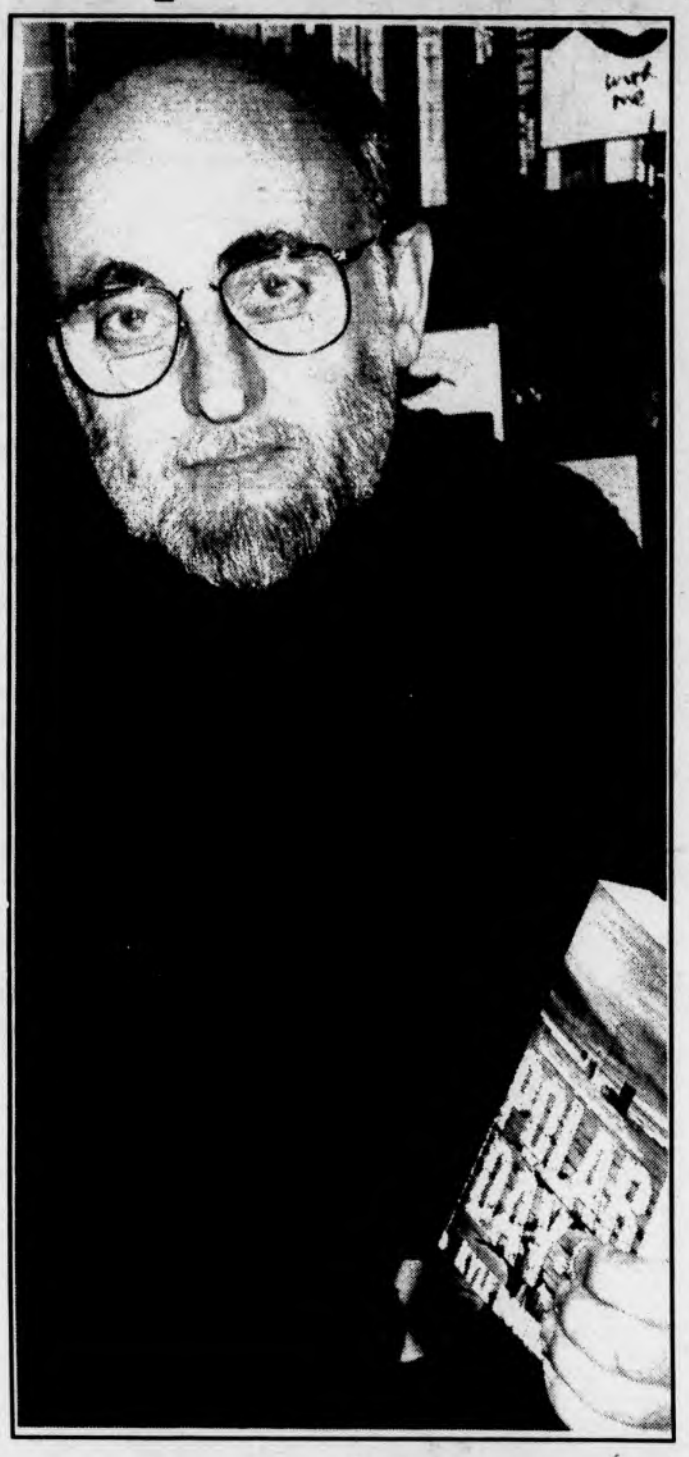
DiBenedetto's publications include a Spanish/English dictionary, a study of poetic theory of the Renaissance and countless journal articles.

"All my work dealt with the Renaissance," DiBenedetto said. An award-winning article dealt with a psychoanalysis of the characters in Don Quixote characters.

"Is this character fiction, or does he have human traits?" he said, explaining his thesis.

He was awarded the internationally-acclaimed Jose Vasconcelos Prize for this work in Mexico City in 1976.

As he continues to work on a new novel, which will first be optioned by Berkley, he studies the flute in his spare time. He lives on Jerusalem Road with his wife, Delia and has no children. "Just crows," he said.



Cohasset author Ubaldo DiBenedetto sits in his office which is nestled in a corner of his home. He surrounded himself with a warm Spanish decor including artifacts, furniture and wood in order to create an environment in which to write.

License opposed

I do not think that the Music Circus is a place to sell alcoholic beverages.

We have many good restaurants in town who would be very happy to cater to those that need a drink between the acts, and I think that it is very unfair to place the Music Circus in competition with the restaurants who supply jobs and pay very high taxes.

From my own point of view, allowing a liquor license to the Music Circus and the problems that would go along with it, would cause immediate problems to the good police officers who have enough to do to get cars in an out of the parking lots.

(The following letter was sent to selectmen).

To the Board of Selectmen:

In recognition of the generosity of the South Shore Music Circus, in past years, to many worthy organizations in the town we trust the selectmen will approve the application of the Music Circus for a limited license to offer wine and beer to their patrons during its operating season.

We are in favor of this proposal.

Thanksgiving Day Blues

Hull, Presley cool Skippers' hot streak, 30-13

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Just one short year ago when Thanksgiving rolled around, Hull High was a game away from facing Ipswich in the Division 4B Super Bowl. The South Shore League champs used their Turkey Day match-up to assess their progress, shutting out Cohasset, 26-0.

Last Thursday, one year later, the Skippers' football club couldn't have been in a better position heading into its seventh Turkey Day clash against Hull. Cohasset was riding a three-game unbeaten streak, including a decisive victory over Super Bowl qualifier Marian High, Charlestown and a tie against Sharon.

However, it was the Pirates who gave Cohasset its second holiday loss in a row, 30-13, in front of nearly 1,000 spectators at Hull. The win gave the Pirates a 4-3 edge in the holiday series.

Skippers coach Ted MacDermott's pre-game comment that regular-season records meant nothing when it came to the annual Thanksgiving Day game, held up stronger than even the bone-numbing wind.

The Pirates were led by the offensive prowess of back Bill Presley. Presley was able to master Cohasset's defense, running for 150 yards and two touchdowns.

"At best we were inconsistent," said MacDermott, who watched as his team lost its chanced at finishing with a .500 (3-5-1) record.

"It's a traditional game. We, by no stretch of the imagination, took Hull lightly, even with their 1-7 record.

What made the win all the more disappointing for the Skippers was that they had finally put together consistent defensive and offensive performances in their three previous games, after struggling against the SSL teams on their schedule.

Until facing Hull, Cohasset once again looked like the team who had overwhelmed West Bridgewater in the season-opener, 26-0. The Skippers played to a tie against Sharon and scored consecutive victories over Marian and Charlestown. Adding insult to injury for the Skippers, both West Bridgewater and Marian qualified for this Saturday's afternoon of Super Bowl play.

MacDermott vowed there would be no let-down in effort or any semblance lackadaisical attitude when the Skippers took the field — and there wasn't. In the end, it simply came down to Hull making more big plays at opportune times than Cohasset.

Cohasset goaltender knows the score

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Chris Goodman knows a thing or two about scoring goals and stopping shots as well.

As a member of Cohasset High's lacrosse team last spring, the two-sport All-Star set the Skippers' record with 53 goals as the squad became the smallest school in Eastern Mass to qualify for the state tourney. Those statistics were good enough to earn Goodman his first All-Scholastic selection in The Patriot Ledger.

And as the starting goaltender on the 14-4-4 soccer team, the tri-captain backboned the squad's defense with five consecutive shutouts and seven overall on the season.

Despite playing the different positions in two very different sports, Goodman believes he has become a better soccer goaltender observing the style used by lacrosse goalies.

"In lacrosse," he explained, "I'm right in front of the goalie the whole game, so I can see the mistakes the goalies make."

Goodman also gets a thrill playing lacrosse that didn't present itself to him during the fall season.

"I know what it's like to score a goal."

Goodman's job this fall was to stop the shots, and he did it as well as any goaltender in the South Shore League as Cohasset beat SSL rivals Hanover and Norwell, before romping over Sacred Heart of Kingston in a surprisingly easy, 5-0 win, in the Division 3 South Sectional Semifinals.

The string of impressive wins for the Skippers put them in position to face the iron of the state — Medway — three days later in the finals.

"We had known they would be the strongest team we were going to face," said Goodman, "so we were prepared for them."

Or so he thought. Medway used its lightning-quick offense and flawless passing — the same style game the Skippers used for so long — to end Cohasset's season by blitzing the Skippers, 6-1.

"When they went up 2-0 we realized they were that much stronger," Goodman said. "They played just the same way we do, but they were faster."

The game, though, was hardly a failure for Goodman or the rest of the Skippers.

"Usually the bus ride home is pretty miserable, but everyone pretty much knew they were going to go all the way," he said.

Fans who attended the finals counted no less than six shots that could just as easily could have been goals if not for Goodman's quick reflexes.

And it's just that — making the big save — which Goodman finds the most appealing as a goaltender.

"You feel like your teammates rely on you and that's good," he said. "It feels good making a big save — just as good as scoring a goal.

"It just seems when I'm in goal the team is more confident and plays better. I stay relaxed and I think it relaxes them too."

Goodman did admit he was a little on the nervous side prior to the finals, but once on the field for the pre-game stretching he became more "pumped up," anticipating the task at hand in trying to wrestle the title from the Mustangs.

"I think about it a lot," said Goodman of the time leading up to a game, "but I don't get too nervous."

Goodman got his start in protecting the area between the posts the way most players do — by accident. He was placed

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

The Holiday season is upon us.

The leftover turkey is in the fridge and soon stockings will be hung by the chimney with care.

In keeping with the season, I offer 12 Holiday Sports Wishes to correspond with the 12 Days of Christmas.

So if you see a big fat guy with a beard in a red suit, give him a copy of the paper and tell him to do what he can.

#1- New nicknames for area high schools.

There are too many Bulldogs, Raiders and Indians. These lead to problems when you talk about the girls' teams. How does the Lady Bulldogs or the Lady Indians sound? Like, yuck. Anyway I suggest nicknames like the Coasters or the Tree Frogs. They sound better and have character.

#2- Domed high school football fields.

I almost froze my Thanksgiving cranberries off covering Marshfield vs. Duxbury last Thursday. Sure I love football but standing on the sidelines in 30-degree weather is about as much fun as going to Disney World with Michael Jackson.

#3- A South Shore baseball superstar.

Sure we have Kevin Stevens and Jeremy Roenick in pro hockey, but I want to root for someone local who is in "The Show." And I don't mean some bum who gets called up in September for a cup of coffee. I want a guy like Don Mattingly or Rickey Henderson.

#4- A return to big time football on the South Shore.

Let's face it soccer is the biggest sport and thanks to players like Duxbury's Bill Curley, basketball is right behind. I want to see big powerhouse programs go to the Super Bowl every year from the Old Colony, Atlantic Coast and South Shore Leagues. I'm tired of hearing about Brockton.

#5 More dunking in high school games.

I've only seen one player, Scituate's Walter Brown, who could regularly dunk in a game. I think it's time to move the rim down to nine feet. You don't need to have it at nine feet the whole game, one half would be fine. At nine feet, even I could dunk.

#6- Cheerleading clinics by Paula Abdul.

Hey, I think high school cheerleaders are doing a great job but if you have a pro like Paula show up once in a while with some pointers, you will really see some great moves. Attendance will go through the roof.

#7- Make video games a varsity sport.

Imagine the talent the South Shore would produce. Compare the number of kids at the arcades to the numbers at the basketball courts. It is not even close.

#8- Quote classes for high school coaches.

Instead of stuff like "We played mistake-free ball and capitalized on our chances" I want to hear, "They stunk like two week-old clam dip and we ran them over like a runaway boar."

#9- Free snacks for members of the press.

in net as a seventh grader and instantly made an impression with his obvious skills at turning away shots from all angles.

"We used to rotate in goal," Goodman explained, "and Mr. (Larry) Shultz (the president of the Cohasset Soccer Club) told me I should stick with it and I might play varsity someday."

Shultz's prediction was right on target. Goodman became the Skippers' starting goaltender his sophomore year and improved steadily since. He was named to the SSL All-Star team as a result of fine play in a league known for its strong soccer programs.

Goodman considers the Medway game his best of the season, but said he'll remember the tourney match against SSL champion Hanover because of the, not soon to be forgotten shoot-out to decide a tourney finalist.

By the end of regulation both teams had managed a goal each, leading to the shoot-out. Cohasset tri-captain and fellow All-Star, Chris Kondrat, drilled his first shot past the Indians' ace netminder, Jeff Ramsay, to give the Skippers a 2-1 advantage. Goodman saved all three shots on him, to drop the No. 1-seeded team in Division 3.

Goodman's success, however, does not begin and end on the soccer and lacrosse fields. He is the vice-president of Cohasset High's Student Council and director of the school's radio station. Goodman's duties entail the weekly scheduling of disc jockeys and buying the music that is played on the station.

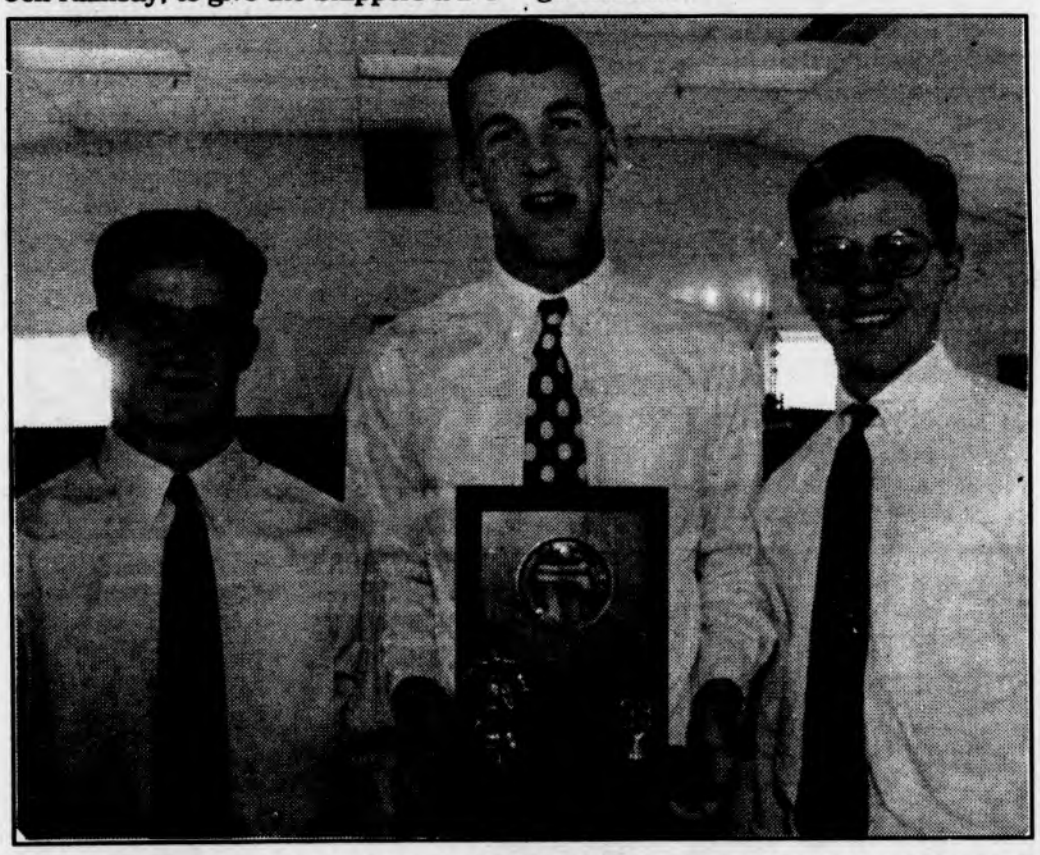
The work he does at the radio station takes up a good chunk of his time, but Goodman wouldn't have it any other way.

"It's fun because we never had a radio station at school and it's fun to be a part of it," he said.

Goodman is undecided as to whether or not he'll play lacrosse in college, but he definitely wants to continue guarding the net next fall, preferably at Babson College.

"I'd really like to play around here at a good school where I could get a good education and play soccer," he said.

And you can bet there'll be teams that show some interest in the mobile goaltender.



Cohasset High varsity soccer captains Charlie Endris, Chris Goodman and Chris Kondrat display the plaque for the Skippers' second-place finish in the Division 3 South Sectional tourney during the annual varsity soccer banquet. Goodman was a catalyst in Cohasset's drive to the finals and was sensational in goal against eventual state champion Medway.

Napoleon said an army marches on its stomach and the same is true for sportswriting. A sportswriter with a belly full of grub won't be too concerned about a last-minute fumble or an air ball from the foul line.

#10- High school baseball fields with Green Monster fences.

Most high schools don't even have fences. If Fenway-type fences were installed, the fun and excitement would be incredible. By the way, all sportswriters would get to take some BP before the game.

#11- Sportswriters coach half the game.

I've heard coaches say, "If you writers are so smart, why don't you coach." Well, this is our chance. We get to call half the game. Coaching is not rocket science, then again neither is sportswriting. Anyway, I'd make sure there are plenty of razzle-dazzle plays and crowd-pleasing tantrums against the referees. Heck, I'll even throw a chair or two.

#12- No more whiny parents.

I just love to hear about someone's son who is the second string punter on the freshman football team or some little league parent whose daughter got a bunt single during a doubleheader on a hot Saturday. I used to play sports and recognition is a nice thing. But I find it's usually some psycho accountant who got cut from the JV squash team who rants and raves when his child is not on the front page with three stop action photos and a 20-inch feature. Give me a break. I'm just one sportswriter in a Wide World of Sports.

When it comes to miserable high-school football fields to play on, Hull High heads the pack. However, there are at least some extenuating circumstances as to why there are crushed sea shells on the field.

The Pirates' gridiron is rivaled by a baseball infield as far as the amount of grass on it. During the Thanksgiving Day game the yard markers weren't printed out, making it a task in itself to figure out what kind of field position either team had.

In defense of the condition of the field, however, it is located at the very end of the tiny seaside town, right on the water. During stormy weather, water often surges over the sea wall onto the playing field. The salt makes growing grass for any length of time extremely difficult. Hull should seriously consider playing its games at another site.

One of the announcers in the press box during the Cohasset/Hull game didn't bother checking the Skippers' roster when a host of defensive players stopped Hull fullback Bill Presley for a loss. He just said the tackle was made by a "## load," of players. The comment was met by a rumble of anger from the fans sitting on the Hull side of the field. Probably thought he had a five-second delay button.

Cohasset players have to be shaking their heads after learning that West Bridgewater, the team they whipped into submission, 26-0 in the season-opener, will be playing Old Rochester in the Division 6 Super Bowl on Dec. 4. The game still stands as the Skippers' biggest romp of the season.

The odds are pretty good at this point that the Cohasset football club will become a member of the South Shore League next season, a move that could be a giant step backwards for the program, which has struggled in its games against the SSL squads.

Why not put the team in the Mayflower League where its level of play, numbers of players and student enrollment is similar. The Skippers are 1-9 against SSL teams, but a whopping 12-4-1 v.s. other squads outside the league in their past 27 games.

Last but not least: It never fails, that is until this year at Hull High. When you enter the press box at a high school field on Thanksgiving Day to cover the big game you would think that every newspaper from the Mariner to the Daily Planet has a sports reporter there. What you really have are youth coaches, parents who have a kid on the team kids from the high school who think they belong there because they attend the school.

The kids are annoying enough, but its that one guy you plays the part of the Press Box Bouncer. It's always fun, when showing him your I.D. to whip your press pass under his chin, just enough to give him a paper cut that would make a mercenary wince.

Hull had its share of individuals in the box, some from Cohasset also, who really didn't belong there. But they were a friendly group and made the cold at least a bit more bearable on the holiday morning.

Hull, Presley cool Skippers' hot streak, 30-13

"It's a traditional game," said MacDermott. "By no stretch of the imagination did we take Hull lightly.

"I just felt Hull dominated the game on both sides of the football," he continued. "They were able to control the ball for long periods of time. We just didn't make enough big plays."

Cohasset controlled the flow of action for the first 2:32 of the game as Thomas Allen bounced back from a no-gain rush to break through Hull's line on the next play and run 60 yards to give the Skippers a quick start. Scott Theriault kicked the extra point, giving Cohasset a 7-0 lead.

"Scott Theriault, I thought played a great game," said MacDermott. "He was our MVP of the game as far as I'm concerned."

Hull head coach John Anderson wasn't afraid of gambling with his offense through the course of the game. He gave an unspoken warning to the Cohasset defense right off the bat.

Facing a fourth-and-5 situation on their first possession, the Pirates faked the punt and hiked the ball to Presley, situated halfway between Hull's center and punter. The move surprised the Cohasset defense long enough for the rugged fullback to take it in from 55 yards out with 4:21 remaining in the quarter.

Presley provided as much bite to the Pirates' attack with his pair of touchdown runs as the sub 30-degree temperature and the frigid wind howling off Hull Gut.

Cohasset was able to stop the conversion to stay one-point up, 7-6.

The tone of the game had already been set for the game on that one set of downs. The Skippers would be forced to stop Presley if they wanted to stay close to the Pirates.

Cohasset accomplished part of the plan as Presley was caught with nowhere to go in the backfield, before being run down by defensive end Dorian Bryant. He was then thrown for a 1-yard loss two plays later.

Still, Presley had runs of 4 and 22 yards, and was also on the receiving end of a 9-yard pass from quarterback Mike Burke, prior to his score.

The Skipppers had their best defensive series on Hull's next offensive set, holding the Pirates on a fourth-and-2 at their own 40. Defensive back Andy Kamataris bolted through Hull's offensive line to stop the rush, half a foot from the first-down mark. Chris Rolandelli and Jared Hardwick both made big plays for Cohasset to slow Hull's offense in the opening plays of the series.

It didn't take long for the Pirates to regain possession of the ball as Bill Chisholm recovered a fumble on the first play of the second quarter at Hull's 48. Six plays and three first downs later, the Pirates were in the end zone again. This time the 6 points came on a 13-yard pass from Burke to Pat Spadea at 7:29. Burke scored with a keeper on the conversion to give Hull its first lead of the day, 14-7.

Theriault had his longest run of the year on a reverse play that went for 72 yards and another Cohasset score. Burke hit Chisholm for a 22-yard touchdown. Presley scored touchdown No. 2 from 2-yards out and Paul Burke added the two extra points and a 42-yard field goal in the closing minute to give the Pirates their second win of the season.

"I'm disappointed with the outcome of the game," MacDermott said. "Hull didn't do anything we didn't expect them to do."

Ski trip planned

The Cohasset Recreation Department will co-sponsor a day ski trip to Mt. Cranmore Monday, Dec. 27, with the Scituate Recreation Department.

The cost for this day-long trip is $48 per person and includes motor coach transportation, a lift ticket and an all day mountain ticket. Buses will depart from Cohasset town hall at 5:30 a.m. Monday, Dec. 27, and return to town hall at about 8:30 p.m. Ski lessons and equipment rentals are available at Mt. Cranmore for $14 each.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Space is limited, hence, immediate registration is advised.

Sharks keep on rolling

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

The Baystate Sharks Squirt minor team regained its undisputed hold of first place in the metropolitan Boston Hockey League with two impressive victories.

Once again the Sharks' back checking, goaltending and defense were second to none as the team registered two shutouts.

First up were the Boston College Jr. Eagles.

Once again goaltending was crucial and Stoughton's Gabe Winer came up big time after time.

The Sharks settled down midway through the first period. They took control of the game and the outcome was never really in doubt. The Sharks' defensemen played a key roll in the victory. Defenseman Ryan Hatch (Hanover) hit Brian Lewis (Cohasset) with a pass in the slot. Brian slid the puck across to Greg Osborne (Stoughton) for the score.

Dave Saggese (Hingham) intercepted an Eagles' pass in the neutral zone and fired a pass to Greg Osborne to set up the fourth goal. Thumper went wide and drew the Eagle defense out of position, then hit Scott McGinn (Hingham) with a pass in front for the goal.

The Sharks wrapped up the scoring with a Hingham triple play. Pat Devine and Brian Boyle, both from Hingham, got the puck back to Garret Daigler, also of Hingham. Garret fired from the blue line into a screen for the score. Final score Sharks 6, Boston College Jr. Eagles 0.

Next up the always physical Hobomock Chiefs, but the Sharks won 5-0.

It was 4-0 after Scotty Sparks (Norwood) passed to Ryan Hatch (Hanover) who backhanded a pass off the boards to Brian Boyle (Hingham). Brian walked in for the goal.

The Sharks closed out the scoring when Dave Saggese (Hingham), smartly covering at the point, passed to Kenny Roche (So. Boston), who shot. Boyle scored on the rebound.

While the Sharks were putting the puck in the net at one end of the rink John Lynch (Hingham) was keeping it out at the other end. Johnny's goaltending was spectacular as time after time he robbed Hobomock of what appeared to be a sure goal.

Matt Bouras and Garret Daigler (Hingham) both had solid games on defense.

It was a big weekend for the Sharks. Two victories, two shutouts against two very good teams. Good job, coaches and players. Final score Sharks 5, Hobomock USA Chiefs 0.

The Sharks are in first place with a record of 9-1-1.

Safe Homes contract

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee has mailed Safe Homes contracts to parents of children in grades six through 12.

Safe Homes is a nationally recognized program which encourages parents to use networking as a technique in curbing underage drinking. Parents who sign the Safe Homes pledge agree that they will neither provide nor condone illegal use of drugs or alcohol in their homes, and that they will not allow unsupervised parties in the homes. Unsupervised parties are the source of many problems associated with teenagers and illegal activities. This program encourages parents to talk with each other about their teenagers' social activities.

Although the Safe Homes program has been in effect in Cohasset for several years, the committee realizes that the most effective way of implementing the program is by increasing participation among the younger families. Ellie Waal, chair of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, reminds parents that when their children are in first or second grade, parents always confirm arrangements regarding children's activities.

Safe Homes is a logical extension of that parental concern, Waal says.

Teenagers often put themselves into situations which can easily get out of control. Safe Homes attempts to alleviate some of these situations by increasing parental awareness.

An important reminder in the Safe Homes contract states that it is a crime in Massachusetts to serve alcohol to anyone under 21 (other than your own child). If there is a party in your home, even if you are unaware of it, you are responsible for injuries and damages. This is something that the committee thinks parents should remember when reading the Safe Homes information. Becoming a Safe Homes family simply reinforces common sense thinking and assures teenagers that parents are simply following the law.

The committee would like to see 100 percent participation among the families of the sixth and seventh graders this year.

"If our children grow up with this understanding, there will be less opposition when they are in the 11th and 12th grades," Waal says.

Contracts should be returned as soon as possible. The committee will be publishing a booklet containing names and phone numbers of families participating. Although there is no cost involved in joining Safe Homes, donations are encouraged to help make the program self-supporting.

Arts boosters donate gifts

The Deer Hill School library held its annual fall book fair Tuesday Nov. 30 through Thursday, Dec. 2. Money raised from this book fair will be used to replenish and upgrade books and reference materials available to 4th, 5th and 6th grade students.

Buttonwood Books & Toys once again provided a large selection of quality reading materials, gift books and learning tools in all price ranges.

METCO trip planned

The National Center of Afro American Artists will present the "Black Nativity," a gospel song-play directed by Elma Lewis. This musical drama of the Christmas story, done in gospel music will be performed Sunday Dec. 19 at the Tremont Street Temple. The Cohasset METCO committee is sponsoring a bus trip to the matinee performance.

Tickets, which include transportation may be purchased from Patricia Brown, Cohasset METCO coordinator who can be reached at 383-6100 or 383-6105 or from Ozzie Ingram at 383-0493. Tickets are $20 for adults, $15 for children under 12 accompanied by an adult.

The bus will leave from the town hall parking lot at 2:15 p.m. and return at 6:30 p.m.

Money raised will support the METCO late bus which provides transportation for students from Boston participating in extracurricular activities.

For information call Mrs. Brown or Mr. Ingram.

Cohasset METCO students Kelvin Ferreida, Wayne Pryor, and Jonathan Pedican play on the swirly slide at the Osgood School. The boys are first graders in Mrs. Maloney's class.

Boating course offered

HCO concert set

The Hingham Civic Orchestra, under the direction of John Corley, will be performing a Yuletide Concert at 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 5 at the Old Ship Church,m 107 Main St., Hingham. The concert will feature carols and seasonal selections with soprano Pamela Wolfe as soloist. Tickets are $8. For reservations call 925-1311 or 749-4411.

Pamela Wolfe has sung with numerous local and regional orchestras including the symphonies of Boston, Cape Cod, Worcester, New Haven, Conn. and Nashua NH. She has also been a soloist at Carnegie Hall and Lincoln Center in New York City, She has sung with the Manhattan Philharmonic. Wolfe has recently returned from a benefit concert in Door County Wisconsin. Equally at home on the musical theater stage, she has performed at the Berkshire theater Festival in "She Loves Me" and has toured with her cabaret "Less Miserable." she will also be featured in the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra's upcoming Christmas tour.

Brass to perform

The Atlantic Brass Quintet will perform a family concert at 4 p.m. Sunday Dec. 19 at St. Paul's Church in Hingham to benefit the South Shore Conservatory.

Recent grand prize winners at the international brass competition in Narbonne, France, the ensemble is well known for its usually wide-ranging classical and contemporary repertoire.

They have performed at Carnegie Hall, Tanglewood-on-Parade, Lincoln Center's Damrosch Park and as part of the Fourth of July celebration at Boston's Esplanade.

Money raised from the concert will provide scholarships to the conservatory for deserving students.

General admission to the concert is $10. Reserved seating is $25. For tickets call 749-7565 in Hingham or 934-2731 in Duxbury. Limited tickets may be available at the door the day of the performance.

Caregivers support meeting

The Hingham Visiting Nurse and the Cohasset Council on Aging will hold a Holiday Coffee Hour for Caregivers Friday, Dec. 10, from 10 a.m. til noon at the Cohasset Council on Aging, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset. The meeting will be the first in a series of monthly support group meetings for caregivers.

Carolyn Housman, medical social work supervisor for the Hingham Visiting Nurse, said, "Over the past few months. the Hingham Visiting Nurse held a series of lectures for families and friends of aging parents. The response was very positive, and we realized that families and caregivers need a regular group where they can share their experiences."

Housman said that the group is open to spouses and other family caregivers, friends and neighbors who care for someone who is ill.

Group co-leader Karen Farmer, LICSW, said, "We especially encouraged adult children who have elderly parents. who live out-of-state to attend. We've found that people whose parents live at a distance often have trouble coping with being so far away from aging parents. The parent may be ill, or may need special care and the adult children don't know where to turn for help."

Farmer said that the group will not be a therapy group, but will focus on sharing experiences, and socializing, giving people a break from the day-to-day concerns of caregiving.

For more information on the Holiday Coffee Hour or on the Caregivers' Support Group, call Karen Farmer at the Hingham Visiting Nurse at 749-1160.

Unicorn program set

The Unicorn Singers, under the direction of Margo Euler, will present their annual Christmas program at 8 p.m. Saturday Dec. 11 at Old Ship Church in Hingham; 4 p.m. Sunday Dec. 12 at First Parish in Cohasset; and 7 p.m. Sunday Dec. 12 at St. Andrew's in Hanover.

The concert will feature music for double chorus and eight-part ensemble and will offer the "Mass in E-flat" by Josef Rheinberger, "Magnificat" by Italian baroque composer Francesco Durante, jazz arrangements of familiar carols and carol arrangements for the audience to sing with the chorus. Tickets are available at each church office and at the door.

Craft sale set in Hingham

An exhibit and sale of traditional American crafts featuring 33 professional artisans will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 4 at the Hingham Junior High, Main St., Hingham.

Among those exhibiting will be David Claggett, a Vermont tinsmith, whose work is sold at the Museum of American Folk Art in New York and the Winthur Museum in Delaware, as well as at Colonial Williamsburg. The husband-and-wife team of Andrew and Phyllis Leck of Round Pond, Maine will display Andrew's hand-forged iron pieces for home and hearth while Phyllis will be represented by handwoven coverlets, rugs and other fabrics. Hand-carved folk sculptures and Santa Claus figures are the specialty of Tim Jumper of Hingham while Joyce Curry, also of Hingham will display her handwoven baskets in a variety of sizes and styles. this is an opportunity to purchase pottery, quilts, decoys, Shaker boxes, primitive paintings and many other fine crafts created by nationally known artisans as well as a chance to talk with the artists themselves.

Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1 for children under 12. Lunch and refreshments will be available.

Dwyer and Mullin Real Estate, located on Route 3A, Cohasset, is now affiliated with HomeView, a revolutionary, broker-sponsored computer home search service. HomeView, which is free to buyers, is the first major technology breakthrough in real estate since dial-up multiple listing services (MLS) were introduced 25 years ago.

According to Bob Mullin, his company joined HomeView to increase the exposure of its real estate listings. Dwyer and Mullin's Cohasset office serves Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Hingham and Norwell.

As HomeView member broker, Dwyer and Mullin Real Estate has its listings entered into HomeView's interactive digital-picture database. At HomeView Realty Search Centers, exclusively owned and operated by HomeView, buyers preview the interiors and exteriors of millions of homes in minutes using a touch-screen computer. Cushing Plaza tenants told they may have to go

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A Shaw's spokesman sought to quell tenants' concerns about what the supermarket chain has planned for Cushing Plaza.

"We're not the kind of company that would go in and close the Plaza down," said John D. Kelleher, head of real estate development with Shaw's Supermarkets, Inc.

But this week commercial tenants at the Plaza said they received letters from the Plaza's new owners informing them that they are "tenants at will on a month-to-month basis." The letter also states tenants will be given 90 days notice if they have to move.

Kelleher said Shaw's would make a public statement this week about the sale.

Positive solution to graffiti problem sought

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Some Cohasset High School students plan to spend their early-release days this month using a lot of elbow grease.

Weather permitting this afternoon and next Thursday, a group of student volunteers will clean up the graffiti that has cropped up around town.

Police and school officials hope that involving volunteers in the clean up will send a double message that young people can be part of the solution and that students will put pressure on their peers not to do it again.

About six weeks ago, graffiti started to appear on buildings around town.

"It started in the parking lot behind Cohasset Savings Bank," Det. Richard Grassie said. "From there it went to South Main Street on the road by the McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home. And then it became an epidemic.

"We don't want Cohasset to turn into an MBTA station," he said.

Grassie conducted an investigation and met with

Nominations for 'Citizen of the Year' open

Nominations are now being accepted for the first annual Cohasset Mariner "Citizen of the Year" Award.

The first in what will become an annual tradition, this award will seek to recognize an individual for outstandng service to the community or for a special achievement.

"We are please to recognize the significant contributions of Cohasset's many public-spirited citizens," said Mariner publisher David S. Cutler. "The spirit of volunteerism is vital to any town."

The deadline for nominations for this year's "Citizen of the Year" is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan. 14.

Cohasset's week

All-night parking ban

No all-night parking is allowed through April 1, according to the town's by-laws.

"It shall be unlawful for the driver of any vehicle other than one acting in an emergency, to park said vehicle on any street for a period of time longer than one hour between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m." from Nov. 15 through April 1, the by-law states.

Drop spot at Hennessy

The Cohasset Mariner drop spot is at Hennessy News (formerly Cohasset News) on Brook Street in Cohasset Village.

The other drop spot at Colonial Pharmacy has been eliminated due to the pharmacy's closing.

Remember the final deadline for all editorial copy for that week's issue is noon Tuesday. Items may also be mailed to The Cohasset Mariner PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025 or 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield 02050.

Advertising deadlines vary, please call 1-800-649-6661 for information.

Town report deadline

Department heads, boards, officials and town committees must submit their reports for the 1993 Annual Town Report to the selectmen's office no later than Friday, Dec. 31.

Those departments which have calendar year statistics should forward their "prose report" and complete the statistical report as soon as possible after Dec. 31, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

The 30-foot spruce at night BEFORE the lights were re-hung to go in a circular pattern. Selectman Jane O. Geodecke said hanging the lights this way accentuated the asymmetry of the tree. She said selectmen owed it to the town and those who donated to light the tree to "make it right," The tree was a gift from Robert V. Davenport.

Tree lights are now aesthetically correct

When selectmen gave the go ahead to put a Christmas tree on the Town Common this year, they didn't anticipate the sight of a fully lit 30-foot blue spruce would be less than aesthetically pleasing.

The lights were hung as if a helicopter had just flown over and dropped them on, Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said Monday.

Goedecke defended the tree's apparent list by saying that trees aren't perfect.

"It's not symmetrical but the way the lights are put on accentuates the asymmetry," she said.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle disagreed.

"I think it looks pretty good," he said.

In consideration for abutters to the common, the board decided to go with a single tree and not to string lights around the trees that encircle the duck pond.

Several citizens and town groups donated money to pay for the lights and electrical hook-up. The tree was donated by Robert V. Davenport.

Selectmen decided Monday to have the lights re-hung and to add bows and garlands to the stakes and guy wires supporting the tree.

"We can make it look nice. We owe it to the town and the people who donated," Goedecke said.

Wire Supt. Stephen Wigmore re-hung the lights in a circular pattern Tuesday.

Police officers get raises

Selectmen approved step raises for the following police officers: Thomas O. DaSilva, from $30,348 to $31,014, effective Jan. 1; and Shellee L. Peters, from $31,014 to $32,001 effective Jan. 2.

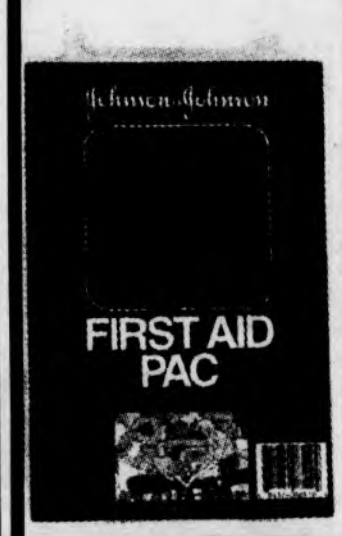
ATTENTION
Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy Customers!
Don't get lost in the shuffle

Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy has just closed and Walgreens would like a chance to earn your trust. We have been filling the prescriptions and needs of our customers for over 91 years, and we welcome Cohasset Colonial's customers and all others who are looking for convenience, value and stability in a pharmacy.

Across town or across the nation, our pharmacies are linked by satellite, making your records available to many of over 1,850 locations, even if you find yourself on the road and without your prescription.

Finding the nearest Walgreens or 24-hour location is as easy as dialing 1-800-WALGREENS toll-free. This number will also help you arrange for express delivery to the few areas in America without a Walgreens.

It's easy to transfer your prescription, just call in or bring in your prescription information, and we'll do the rest!



A Special Thank You Offer for Switching to Walgreens...
When you purchase a new or transferred prescription (except one from another Walgreens), get this Johnson & Johnson First Aid Pac FREE or $10 off your prescription price. Use the coupon at right.

Cohasset advisory committee gets personnel

By Jeff Cutler
Mariner Correspondent

In an effort by the Advisory Committee to learn the policies and the views of the Personnel Committee, the two groups met Tuesday night at town hall.

With ongoing salary discussions and the need for new contracts in FY'95 for fire, police, and library personnel, budgets were also a topic.

Advisory chair Nan Roth said one reason for the get together was to see "what the numbers in some of (the town's) contracts look like."

Currently Cohasset is negotiating the contract for all clerical staff and the personnel committee is handling those talks.

According to personnel chair Peter Pacetti, the workers in the clerical union have not received a raise since 1990 and when the contract is decided that money will be retroactive.

Approximately 15 people are employed in positions affected by the pending contract and the funds that it will take to reimburse them have to come from somewhere.

To that end the town could be facing an override if a larger than anticipated contract is decided before town meeting in March.

Last year Roth told the town that a 2 1/2% increase was the most the advisory committee would recommend for any pay raises.

She said this week that the town's budget numbers are "fairly stable...we don't want them to get out of line again."

On the issue of overrides, Roth insisted that it was still too early to tell if one would be needed but sa[illegible]e clerical salaries "won't be the item that tips the scale."

But, she added, their goal is to "not let one side of our budget drive things."

Pacetti agreed and pointed to another contract that had averaged 2 1/2% over a four year span, but Roth saw a problem with that because the figure was an average.

"Averages don't work for us when you're dealing with a budget," she said. "It's better to have even increases."

Cushing Plaza tenants told they may have to go

"Unfortunately, we did not have the opportunity to announce this in the fashion we would prefer," Kelleher said.

News of the sale appeared in the press last week following the filing at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds.

In a telephone interview, Kelleher confirmed that Shaw's plans to redevelop the shopping center with a Shaw's there. He said there will be some additional space left for tenants in the new center and if space is not available the company will assist those tenants in finding a new location.

Last month Cushing Plaza was sold by Resolution Trust for Old Stone Bank for $2.65 million to a realty trust of which Shaw's is the sole beneficiary, according to the registry of deeds.

Resolution Trust is a federal agency that takes over failed banks. The prior owner of Cushing Plaza was foreclosed on by Old Stone Bank, which later failed.

Rumors of the sale fueled speculation that the tenants would be forced out and that Shaw's plans to level the current Plaza.

Kelleher would only said the company "will be sensitive to the needs of tenants there." He said the 90-day notice was recommended by Shaw's legal counsel.

'Unfortunately, we did not have the opportunity to announce this in the fashion we would prefer.'

John D. Kelleher, Shaw's Supermarkets, Inc.

Some tenants who received letters insist they have valid leases on the property.

Plaza businesses contacted by the Cohasset Mariner confirmed they have retained attorneys to look into their lease rights. Legal ramifications of what happens to lease agreements following foreclosure on both the landlord and the bank that held the mortgage aren't clear.

Linda Johnson, owner of American Image, said her attorney said the letter stating she is now a tenant-at-will "is unacceptable."

And Rick Peters, an owner of Sea 'N Cheese, said "we sent a letter back saying we don't think we are tenants at will, we have a lease."

Peters added that support his family has received since news of the sale surfaced has been heartening.

"The public support has been phenomenal," he said. "A lot of people said there is a need for us and their voice will be heard.

"They want us here and that's a good feeling," Peters said.

Planning Board Chairman Alfred S. Moore Jr. said the first step for both Shaw's and Star Market, which also hopes to build a supermarket on Route 3A in Cohasset, is filing a site plan which neither company has done.

However, Star Market officials have met informally with the planning board and indicated they would like to build, Moore said.

Moore said both proposed supermarket sites are problematical. The Star Market site on 12 acres near the King St. and Rte. 3A intersection has grading and potential drainage problems. Cushing Plaza, where Shaw's would like to build, has a totally failed septic system, Moore said. Both sites present potential traffic problems on an already congested Route 3A, he said.

Moore explained the planning board looks for neighborhood concerns. But those concerns can't be purely emotional — saying "you don't like it there" is not enough, he said.

Override is still a possibility

She continued and told Pacetti that the town was limited to the 2 1/2% mandated by law and that was it.

Advisory member Ken Ingber backed her up and said if the contract(s) come in higher "you can count on this committee advising against it."

To help ease the impact of that possibility Pacetti suggested the town find savings areas other than salaries.

"You don't realize how small the discretionary part of the budget is," replied Ingber.

When asked if drawing out the negotiations was hurting the town in legal fees Pacetti replied, "Clearly we're conscious of the town's economic situation."

In situations like the clerical one, meetings with lawyers are necessary and often take hours at a time explained Pacetti.

But, he added, the fees for legal consultants were not a cost the personnel group ever saw because the selectmen were responsible.

The personnel committee's budget is only a couple hundred dollars according to Pacetti.

Other employment topics crossed the table and at one point Roth wanted to know if the town could pool their office workers so overtime could be eliminated.

As outlined, an employee in a slow office could help those who were swamped and vice versa.

This would help alleviate crunches, said Roth, and would "keep it (the work) in their regular hours."

She also wanted to know if comp time could be substituted and if overtime could be eliminated all together.

Pacetti said it wasn't the role of the personnel committee to "go interfering with the structure of the town," but he said there was nothing that would prevent the town from doing what Roth suggested.

The next Advisory Committee meeting is scheduled for Dec. 14 at 8 p.m.

Lot safety addressed

The town hall parking lot will soon have signs indicating which driveway is an entrance and which is an exit, selectmen said.

Safety Officer Clifton B. Jones told the board he supported the town hall employees' request making the entrance and exit driveways one way.

The south access (nearest the Young's property on Highland Ave.) will be the entrance and the north (nearest the Congregation Church) will be the exit.

Jones said signs should be posted as "Entrance" and "Exit" and white arrows should be painted on the asphalt to signify the flow of traffic.

"The height of the hedge on the Young's property is of no problem as it is set back, and it, as the entrance does not block one's view when entering the lot," Jones said.

Warrant closes Jan. 10

The annual town meeting warrant closes Jan. 10.

Petition articles must have the signatures of at least ten registered voters of the town.

Special town meeting warrant articles by written petition require the signatures of 100 registered voters. The special town meeting, which takes place within the annual town meeting, deals with appropriations from this year's (fiscal year 1994) budget. During the annual town meeting, monies will be appropriated for FY'95 which begins July 1, 1994.

To ensure placement in the warrant, draft articles must be submitted to the selectmen's office by the deadline.

A request to save a place in the warrant for an article with no detail and substance is not acceptable, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Positive solution to graffiti problem sought

Assistant Principal Jack DiLorenzo.

Grassie said no students came forward to pinpoint the culprits.

So Grassie and DiLorenzo, who said "indications are that some of the vandals aren't attending the high school," came up with the plan of involving student volunteers in the clean up.

"This came about because we'd like to make a positive out of a negative," DiLorenzo said.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said the police feel lucky to get on top of the situation and work it out with the schools.

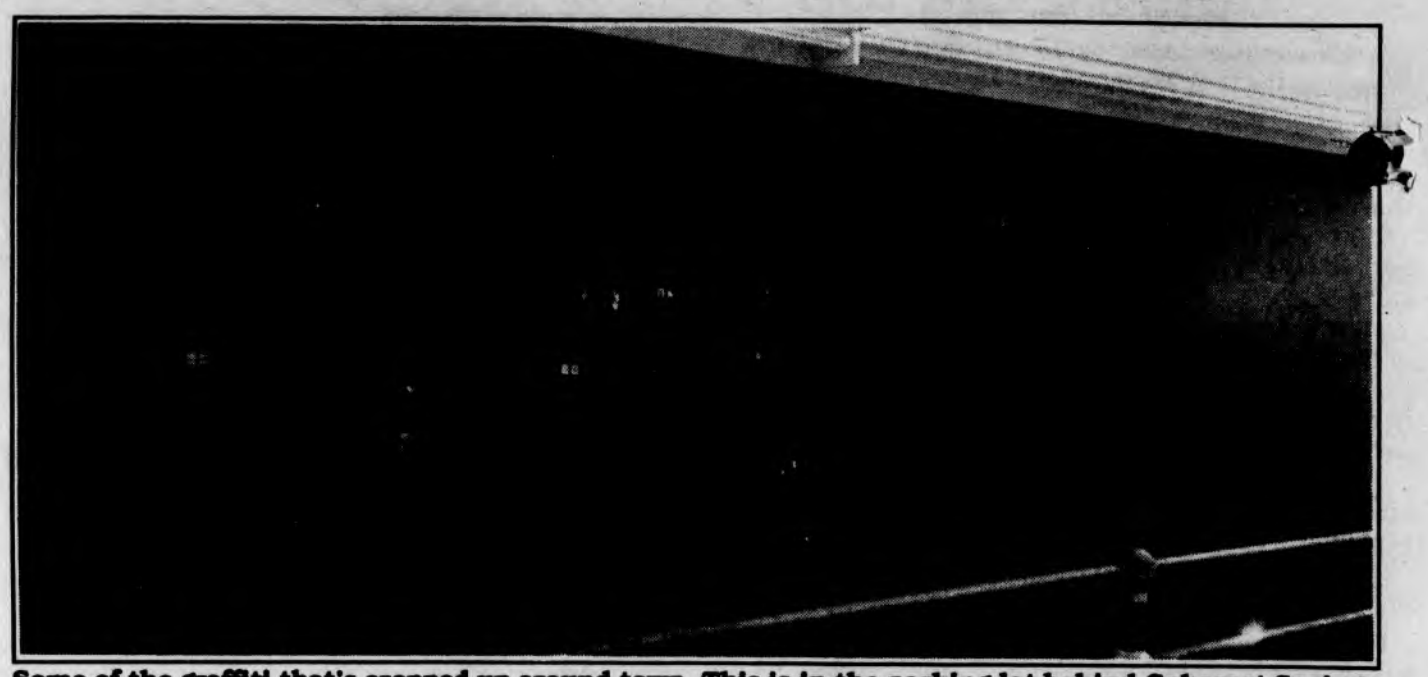
"It's a positive approach rather than yank kids into court," he said.

Grassie added, "hopefully this will end it and the town will be cleaned up in time for the holidays."

But Grassie made it clear if the problem continues, police will seek out and prosecute offenders.

Defacing property can be a felony if the total damage is more than $250.

"A felony stays on your record and shows up when you go for a real job someday," Grassie said.



Some of the graffiti that's cropped up around town. This is in the parking lot behind Cohasset Savings Bank. A group of high school volunteers will remove the graffiti today and next Thursday.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

BEWARE SIGHT-UNSEEN PROPERTY

QUESTION: I just received a mail-order offer to buy vacation property. The photos look great and the price seems attractive. The developer wants me to purchase by mail because it is limited. What do you think?

ANSWER: Don't buy by mail, sight unseen. It exposes you to every possible abuse and mistake. What if you are unable to visit? If you do, and are dissatisfied, will the developer still be in business? If he is, what assurance do you have that he will return your money? If you think the purchase is worthwhile – take the trip and look at the property. But don't make any advance commitment to buy.

❑ We'll begin by telling you news from Framingham State College. Heidi M. Lincoln, former Lady Skipper at CHS and now a Lady Ram, has been elected Captain of the Women's soccer Team. Heidi had a great season and scored two goals from her defensive position as Sweeper.

You can be sure you will hear more about Heidi in the future, she is great!

❑ We can also boast about some Cohasset gals that are students at Notre Dame Academy. The first marking period honor roll is out, Julie Catalano made the Principal's List, Danielle Nohe made first honors and Jennifer Cellucci and Julie Smith made second honors.

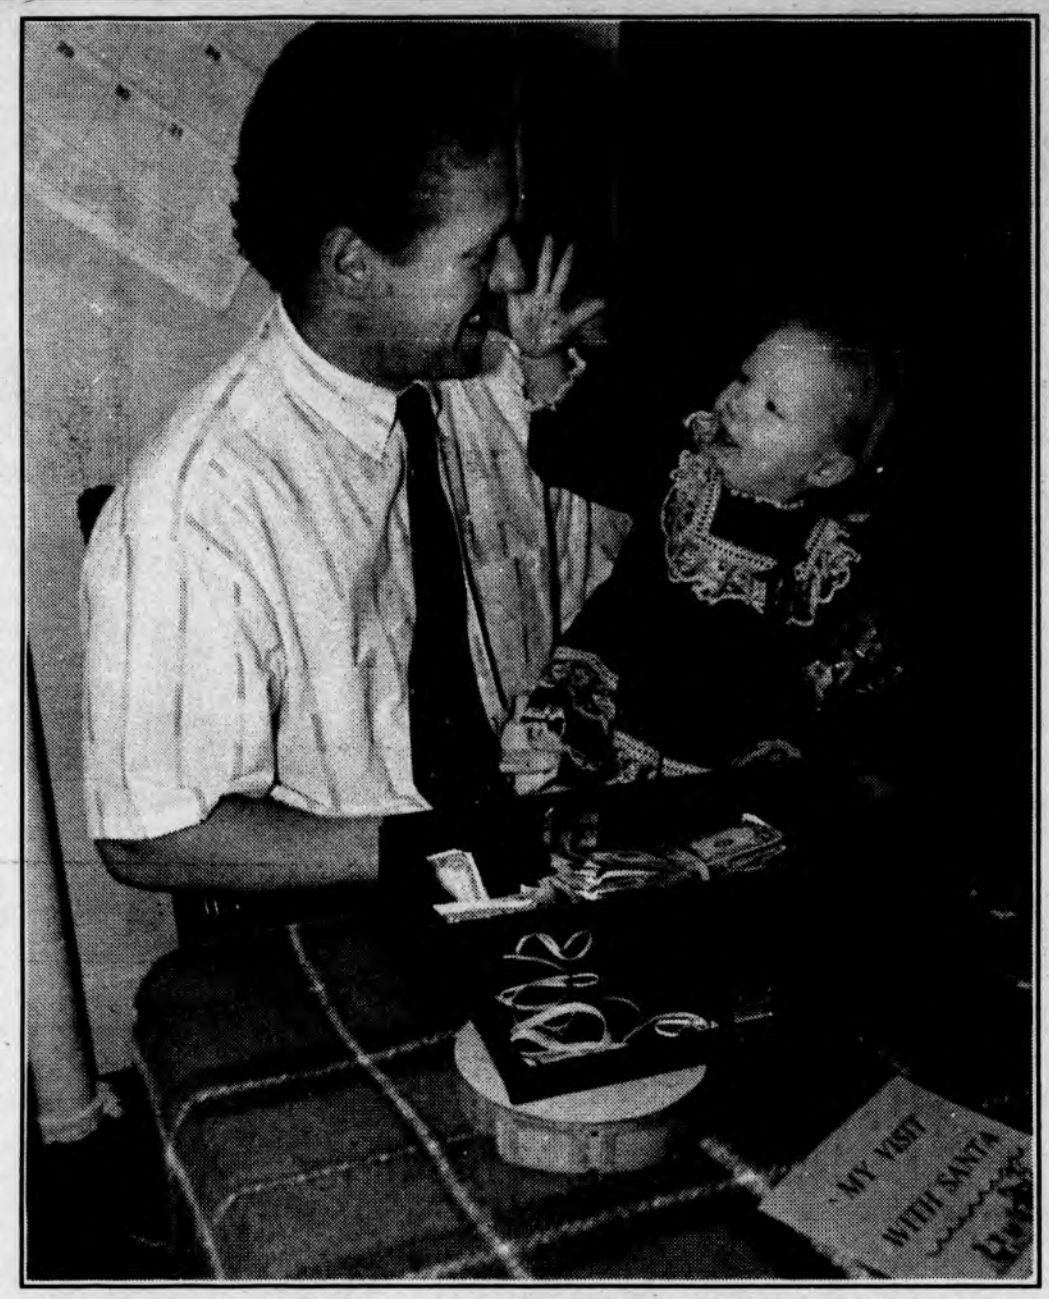
Congratulations go to you all, you certainly earned them.

❑ This is a wonderful time of the year, with many events that put us all in the Christmas Spirit! One wonderful one was held last weekend at Memorial Hall in Plymouth. More than 100 dancers from eastern Massachusetts were involved in "Holiday Pops!", the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra's annual celebration of music and dance, and four Cohasset dancing stars were among them. Emily Libby, Megan Chastain, Torrey Androski, Liz Myers and Clara Sceery all did super jobs, and they deserve a standing ovation from all of us for their performances!

They must be proud but tired young ladies; three shows in two days is a lot of dancing! Please let us know what is next on your agenda gals; we love watching all of you.

❑ Happy 35th wedding anniversary greetings go to Ken and Sue Fone, a great couple who are adored by all that know them.

Here's to the next 35, kids, hope they are even happier and fuller than the first 35!!



Eighteen-month old Victoria Lehr feeds her father, Philip, a cookie during the Village Fair, Saturday. For more photos, see page 11.

❑ It's really hard to believe that Bob James won't be spotted around town any longer, he was such an integral part of so many lives! You name it, and he was involved, always working for the good of others! And, what a handsome, dapper man!

It's impossible to list all of the good things that he did, how active he was, and how much he was loved! Just take a look around you, anything that you see had his hand in it somehow. My, how he will be missed!

Our heartfelt sympathies to Bob's family, we know that everyone will be sharing their memories of Bob with you for a long time to come. We all feel lucky to have known him and shared our lives.

❑ All of the football players are talking about the great dinner that the Gridiron Club put on for them last weekend. Held at Kimball's-by-the-Sea, the food was great and the program excellent. Among the guests was Paul Farron, former CHS star who played with the Cleveland Browns for 10 years. Paul now resides in Scituate; we are glad to have him in the area, he's a super guy!

❑ Be sure to set aside Tuesday, Dec. 21, that's when the Intergenerational spaghetti dinner and concert will take place at the high school. The dinner will be at 6 p.m. and the show will begin at 7:30 p.m. The cost of the fun-packed evening is $3 per person; everyone is invited to be there and have lots of fun!

❑ Hats off to Tracy Reardon, she earned herself a prestigious award recently that everyone should know about! Tracy, a senior at Thayer Academy was selected to the Independent School League (ISL) all league team for her prowess in field hockey.

Holiday giving

The holiday season is a time of giving, and charities and other non-profit organizations capitalize on that spirit to raise their funds.

Last year, charities received slightly more than $124 billion — about $1 billion less than the previous year — according to the American Association of Fund-raising Counsel Trust for Philanthropy. And nearly 82 percent — $101.8 billion — came from individuals, with another $6 billion from corporations.

But businesses and individuals must be mindful to whom they are giving and how their donations will be used.

Last year a national organization which raises hundreds of millions of dollars was rocked — with fallout raining on its local affiliates — when financial disclosures revealed extraordinary expenses for luxurious items by or on behalf of its president.

Attorney General Scott Harshbarger is aggressive in identifying deceptive and fraudulent fund-raising practices in Massachusetts and has taken many organizations and individuals to court since he was elected.

But in addition to his prosecutorial role, Harshbarger works with the Better Business Bureau to educate the public about giving wisely and to inform board members of charitable organizations what their responsibilities are.

Massachusetts has some 31,000 organizations registered with the attorney general's division of public charities — up from 28,000 the year before — and for the most part, their fund-raising efforts are worthwhile, legitimate causes.

But in a survey of 158 public charities where professional fund-raisers were used in 1992, 23 charities received less than 10 percent of the gross revenue raised by telemarketing, direct mail, entertainment events or other types of solicitations.

Just 19 of the 158 organizations received more than 50 percent of the gross revenue. The average charitable organizations receive is about 28.9 percent.

Harshbarger notes that many charities use professional solicitors to publicize their existence and educate the public about their cause. Huge charities, on the other hand, have employees whose sole function is to raise funds.

To ensure that the integrity of charitable giving remains in tact and that those philanthropic dollars are put to their best use, the attorney general's office, together with the Better Business Bureau, has issued the following tips:

Prospective donors should become informed not only about the charity but about the individual who is soliciting funds as well.

Ask who is seeking a contribution and what is his/her relationship to the charity. Is the caller a professional fund-raiser? What is the address and telephone number of the fund-raising organization?

Ask who will benefit from the donation and what kind of services will be provided?

How much of the donation will go to the charity and how much will be kept by the fund-raiser?

The attorney general's office and the Better Business Bureau can provide information about a local charity. Information about a national organization can be obtained from the Better Business Bureaus' Philanthropic Advisory Service in Arlington, Va., or the National Charities Information Bureau in New York City.

President Clinton's first year

commentary

By Wigmore A. Pierson
Special to the Mariner

It is much too early to assess the long-term success of the Clinton presidency, but it is certainly timely to take a look at his first year in office now that Congress is on vacation until mid-January.

President Clinton clearly is trying to pattern his presidency on the model of John F. Kennedy in both style and substance. As was Kennedy, Clinton is a good orator, can be inspiring, is a hands-on politician, enjoys being with people out in the country, is young (in his mid-forties), is smart, is impatient with the status quo, and most importantly, is trying to offer a vision for the nation.

His legislative victories have been impressive: NAFTA, the 1994 budget, deficit reduction, the national service program, family leave, and the motor-voter law. And certainly his leadership in placing health reform at the top of the nation's agenda is both desirable and courageous politically.

Up to now, however, his overall leadership and ability to command the Congress has been sporadic. His narrow victories in Congress on NAFTA and the budget demonstrate this. His approval ratings are down and there is little evidence he has increased his voting percentage beyond his 43 percent plurality vote in November 1992.

Improving the economy — on which he predicated his election appeal — seems to be an area which is going in the right direction, albeit very slowly. That is certainly another plus for the President.

Foreign relations issues are not his long suit and he has tried to delegate these responsibilities largely to his Secretary of State, Warren Christopher, with very mixed results. Because the President of the United States is THE world leader, and because this world is so small and now inter-related at both a macro-economic and village level, the President must assume an important role on the world stage. This Clinton has failed to do. Only after public and Congressional outcry was he personally forced to address Somalia, Haiti, and Bosnia.

Obviously, the newest and most immediate threat now is North Korea's apparent development of a nuclear capability and its refusal to allow a neutral inspection of its facility. The threat of U.S. military action is real. How Mr. Clinton handles this crisis may well determine the fate of his presidency.

Beyond foreign policy issues of war and peace, a president occupies a unique position to inspire the nation as did Kennedy (1961-1963), Theodore Roosevelt (1901-1909), and Franklin Roosevelt (1933-1945). Teddy Roosevelt once described the presidency as a "bully pulpit".

This nation and its people face a crisis of confidence and hope in the future at both a national political level and a very personal and local level in every home and apartment in the United States.

The pressures of the global economy raise, for the first time in American history, the doubt that the next generation will be able to improve its standard of living beyond the preceding generation - or to even have an equal standard of living.

The disintegration of the American family in America since World War II, largely because of cars (mobility), television, and the collapse of personal and moral values has brought us to being a nation besieged by family violence of one sort or another, abuse of family members of all ages, and a very splintered society on how best to cope with this national tragedy.

Today, tens of millions of Americans face the future in poverty, loneliness, anger, fear, frustration, self doubt, and a hopelessness about their ability to control their own future.

In my view, whether and how successfully President Clinton addresses these concerns as well as the once again widening schism between black and white Americans will ultimately determine the success of his presidency and his place in American history.

Don't shovel snow into roadway

Dear Residents:

As the winter season approaches, we would like to remind everyone that the snow plowing trucks will be out plowing whenever there is a storm. These trucks will continue to plow until the roads are passable and safe. Residents are urged to refrain from shoveling snow from their driveways onto the roads as this causes the potential for a serious accident which the homeowner may be liable for.

We understand that people have to get to their jobs and appointments, but whenever possible, please wait until the roads have been plowed before shoveling out the end of your driveway. It serves no purpose for residents to become angry at our truck drivers as they are only doing their job.

The Highway Department is not responsible for snow pushed onto the ends of driveways from our trucks even after a private contractor has plowed the driveway. It would be impossible for us to open up these driveways all over town.

Private contractors are reminded not to leave snow in the roads after plowing a driveway. It creates a serious driving hazard.

Thank you for all your cooperation.

obituaries

Robert B. James

Robert B. James, 88, long-time Cohasset town moderator and Gulf Oil sales executive, died Dec. 2 after a brief illness.

Mr. James had been the moderator of Cohasset for 29 years through 1968 and had been employed by the Gulf Oil Corporation for 42 1/2 years. He retired as the Boston division manager in 1968. He was also a member of the board of directors of the Pilgrim Co-operative Bank in Cohasset.

He was born in Cohasset in 1905 where he lived his entire life. He was an active participant in many civic, community and athletic activities .

In addition to being Cohasset town moderator, Mr. James was a former president of the Cohasset Historical Society and past moderator of the Cohasset Second Congregational Church. He was also a long-time member of the Konohassett Lodge of the Masons. During World War II, he was the Captain of the Cohasset auxiliary police and shore patrol as well as assisting the Red Cross.

Mr. James also loved football and golf. He was an official and past president of the Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Football Officials. Many will remember his days on the football field refereeing New England collegiate games. He was also a charter member of the National Football Hall of Fame Association.

When Mr. James was not involved in football, he could be found on the Cohasset golf course. He was president of the Cohasset Golf Club from 1971 through 1974. Mr. James was also a former commissioner of the Old Colony Senior's Golf league and a member of Cohasset's Old Goats club.

He leaves a daughter, Marcia C. Carthaus and her husband, Richard, of Edina, Minn.; a son, Philip M. and his wife, Cynthia of North Haven, Conn.; a special friend, Sally Anderson; a sister, Myra Sherman of Plymouth, NH; a brother, Paul of North Scituate; and two grandchildren. He was the husband of the late Hazel M. James.

A funeral service was held Dec. 6 at the Cohasset Second Congregational Church. Burial was in Woodside cemetery.

Donations may be made in memory of Mr. James to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer St., Cohasset 02025 or the Cohasset Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

Grayce Poor, DDM

Holiday concert planned

Even if you are in the humbug minority not yet there, a special evening of musical selections performed by the choruses and bands of Cohasset High School Tuesday, Dec. 21, is sure to deliver you fully into the holiday spirit.

In what has become a memorable Cohasset holiday tradition, the various high school singing groups, so expertly directed by vocal director Bryan Marks, and the concert bands, conducted by instrumental director Marcia Lajoie, will perform a varied selection of pieces guaranteed to put you in the mood of the season.

The free concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the H.S. auditorium. Vocal director Marks sends this request to all senior chorus alumns: "I hope all of you who can will join us this evening to relive memories, and join the current chorus in a special singing of our "Silent Night."

Newly arrived instrument director Lajoie commented, "It has been both a challenge and a lot of fun to get ready for this concert. Despite the short preparation time the musicians have been super responsive and I am really looking forward to being part of this special evening."

Come to the high school Tuesday, Dec. 21. Enjoy a wonderful evening of holiday musical entertainment and support our talented students.

Bus trip to "Black Nativity"

Area residents will have an exceptional opportunity to experience two of Boston's famed institutions — one relatively new, the other over 150 years old — when the Cohasset METCO committee sponsors a bus trip on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 19, to see "Black Nativity" performed in Converse Hall of historic Tremont Temple.

This will be the 24th annual production by the National Center for Afro-American Artists of "Black Nativity", poet Langston Hughes' inspiring gospel song-play which features outstanding Boston vocal soloists and a chorus of "Children of the Black Persuasion". In its series of productions, directed by teacher-impressario Elma Lewis, this exuberant telling of the Christmas story has won enthusiastic acclaim by critics and audiences alike and has established itself as a fixture of Boston's holiday season.

Tickets, including transportation and a portion of the proceeds to help support the local METCO program, are $20 for adults and $15 for children under 12 accompanied by an adult. They may be purchased from Patricia Brown, Cohasset METCO coordinator, at 383-6100 or 383-6105, or Osborne Ingram, 333-0493. The bus will leave the Town Hall parking lot at 2:15 p.m. and return at 6:30 p.m.

Matching the show in appeal is the setting itself. Tremont Temple, built 154 years ago at the height of the 19th century religious revival fervor, is a landmark structure on Tremont Street, near the corner of Beacon and School Streets, little changed from the time when Charles Dickens gave a reading of his A Christmas Carol there. Many of the well-known orators and speakers on the popular lecture circuit of over a century ago found this their forum.

Tremont Temple is particularly appropriate for a staging of "Black Nativity" since President Abraham Lincoln arranged to have the text of his Emancipation Proclamation sent by Morse code over the then-new telegraph system directly into Converse Hall.

Theatrical producer is perfectly cast in Art Center role

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Ron Rawson, the newly-elected president of the South Shore Art Center and former director of the South Shore Music Circus, has been involved in the entertainment industry almost all his life.

"Up until I got involved with the Art Center, I wasn't involved with the visual arts," Rawson said.

Yet, a lifetime in the arts and entertainment industry lent itself well to the Art Center.

"It's all related. My whole life has been connected with the arts in one way or another. This is a different media," he said.

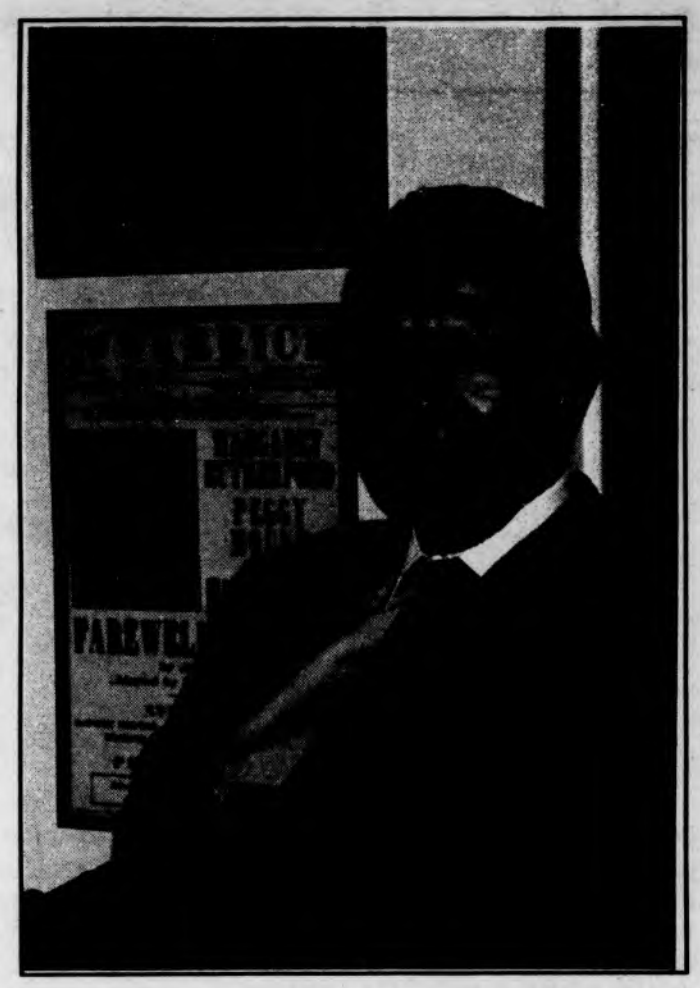
Rawson's life has been the perfect marriage of the creative and business aspects of the art world. As a producer, he has to be sure the entertainment he provides turns a profit. At the same time, he has to have an eye for star-quality and a nose for what an audience will like.

He had 20 years to try out his instincts at the Music Circus, and now he will be devoting similar energy to the Art Center, he said.

"The Art Center goes far in helping to define the heart and soul of the community. Imagine living here without that beautiful space with those beautiful things. If that weren't here there would be an enormous loss. It does affect everybody. Really."

When the Art Center's 30-year mortgage was burned Sunday after only six years, Rawson said it indicated how the town shares his view of the Center.

"It shows it has a place in people's lives that shows they're willing to put their money behind it," he said.



Ron Rawson, new president of the South Shore Art Center, still maintains an office at the Music Circus. (Staff photo/Sheila Pietrzak)

However, he cautioned that the Center will continue to rely on patron support.

"People may get the feeling that because we have paid off our mortgage, we no longer need their support," he said. "What we have done with the burning of the mortgage is retire our past. We're not interested in becoming bigger. We're only interested in becoming better."

"People should know down the line were going to be asking (for more donations.)"

As president for a two-year term, Rawson said he wants to keep abreast of the financial condition of the center, its outreach and education programs and its exhibits, he said.

Rawson first got involved with the Art Center six years ago, when he retired from the South Shore Music Circus.

Since 1967, he had managed the theater with a mind for the unique and unexpected. Since he retired, he keeps an office on the Music Circus grounds.

"I'm attached to it, almost like a birth mother," he said.

He came to the job through the recommendation of a friend when the Music Circus had fallen on tough financial troubles.

"I thought this place had tremendous potential and after the first year, we got it turned around," he said.

Some of Rawson's ideas included an "International Cook-In," in which he assembled chefs from around the world on stage with a complete kitchen. Chefs like James Beard taught the South Shore to prepare his specialties at the arena in the 10:30 a.m. time slot. He offered door prizes as part of the day. He remembered that a North Carolina woman won a range.

"I don't know how she got it down there," he said, laughing.

Although the three-part series was not a money-maker, the diverse programming gave South Shore patrons the idea that under the Circus tent, anything was possible.

Chatterton: Team doesn't belong in SSL

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The uneven numbers are there, staring Pilgrim Conference and South Shore League officials right in their faces. They're a cry out that, no, the Cohasset High football team does not belong in the SSL after three seasons playing an Independent schedule.

With a senior class of 61 boys and 285 in grades 9-12, the Skippers can not be expected to field a football squad capable of competing consistently with the larger SSL teams.

And Cohasset has proved that with its lopsided record in its past 37 games.

The Skippers have a dismal 0-9-1 record against SSL squads, but an impressive 12-4-1 mark against Independent schools. This season Cohasset beat both West Bridgewater (21-6) and Marian High (27-22), two teams who qualified for Super Bowl play.

The Skippers also dropped Charlestown High and tied Sharon, giving them a perfect 3-0-1 mark in non-SSL matchups.

Cohasset High Athletic Director Clark Chatterton is sure to bring up the enrollment figures and record comparison during the December 10, Pilgrim Conference meeting at Dennis-Yarmouth High.

"Outside of who's playing and who's coaching, that's the most important issue for me," said Chatterton, who has managed to preserve Cohasset's Independent football schedule for three years.

There are other factors working against the Skippers in their attempt to stay out of the SSL. Hull High, Cohasset's Thanksgiving Day opponent, has "clouded the waters," by making "serious overtones," that they too want to leave the SSL and pursue an Independent schedule, according to Chatterton.

Rockland High has also indicated in moving back to the SSL after three years in the Atlantic Coast League.

"That makes major implications for the whole conference," Chatterton said.

On a lighter note, the captains for the '94 season were announced during Sunday's team banquet at Kimballs By The Sea. Dorian Bryant, Tom Allen and Nick Welz were picked to lead the Skippers next fall.

More than 150 people, including the varsity and freshmen teams, plus parents, attended the banquet.

Linton Young, a former member of the Gridiron Club was presented an award, and former Cohasset High football player Paul Farren spoke to the audience.

Farren, a member of the Class of '79, went on to B.U., and eventually played 10 years as an offensive tackle for the Cleveland Browns.

Cohasset soccer player Tim Brister signs the ball while his teammates look over photos of the Skippers in action during the season.

Joyce, Madeiras lead dance program

Donna Joyce and Tiffany Madeiras begin the second session of their second season directing the dance program at the Cohasset Community Center.

Joyce began dancing at age seven. She has studied with Adrienne Hawkins, Jeanette Neill, Richard Jones, and Naomi Turner. Joyce received her B.F.A. in dance from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. She has been a member of the Cle Douglas Dance and the Viva Dance Company of Cape Cod. Joyce is now the director of Dance Visions based in Hingham. She is also an AFAA certified aerobics instructor and is CPR certified. Joyce is employed by the Workout Club in Hingham.

Madeiras began dancing at age three. She has taught all levels of ballet, tap and jazz at the Plymouth Academy of Dance. Throughout college she performed in many full-length ballets and choreography competition pieces. Madeiras received her B.S. in exercise physiology and a minor in dance from the University of Massachusetts at Boston. She is CPR and first aid certified by the American Red Cross, and is also an AFFA certified aerobics instructor. Madeiras is also employed by the Community Center as a gymnastics instructor. She is employed as an exercise physiologist by the Wellness Connection of Framingham and Dr. Wayne Westcott.

Joyce will be teaching the evening classes consisting of ballet and jazz (ages nine to 14), adult jazz, street dance (ages nine to 14), and jazz Jr./High (ages 13 to 18).

The daytime classes will be taught by Madeiras. Creative Movement (ages three and four) is a beginner dance class that introduces the children to movement with music. Basic ballet barre work is also taught. Pre-school ballet and jazz is a one-hour class for ages four and five. The class is split into two 30-minute segments; 30 minutes is devoted to ballet barre and center floor work, and the other 30 minutes consists of jazz dance. Beginner dancers are welcome into both classes.

The Community Center dance program offers a relaxed atmosphere of learning and creativity in dance for all levels. If you have any questions call the Community Center. Sign-ups have already begun. Call now to reserve your space at 383-0088.

Put the football in the closet, lose the soccer spikes, lace up your Chuck Taylors and grab a hockey stick because the winter sports season has begun.

It is the time for hoops, pucks to the head and some nasty wrasslin' flips.

And we at the Mariner are looking forward to bringing sports fans on the South Shore all the sports that fit to print.

Keeping that in mind, the following is a guide to watching these activities at your local high school.

These important observations will help every sports fan enjoy what he is watching just a bit more.

Basketball

It won't be like Bird-Magic in the mid-80s, but there is some good basketball played around here.

First of all, most of the players are under 6'4". That means very few dunks and lots of lay-ups off the backboard.

Kind of like "Hoosiers."

Another thing is most teams play zone and turn the game into a battle of outside shooting.

That can be fun if the players can find the net. But if they can't hit anything, the game becomes a night of heavy metal as shot after shot clangs off the rim.

As for the coaches, most prowl along the sidelines in a suit and tie, yelling at the referees, their team or whoever else they can think of.

A great way to keep coaches from jumping up and yelling every five seconds would be to have them wear their team's uniforms like in baseball.

Imagine a coach, whose best fitness days are behind him, jumping up and down along the sidelines in a tank top and shorts.

The crowd would go nuts and the coach would be shamed into silence or membership at a local health club.

Hockey

This area has very good hockey, even though a lot of the best players end up going to private high schools.

Anyway, a lot of the teams around here play dump and chase, just like the Bruins.

Dump and chase is when the players consistently dump the puck into their opponents end just as they cross the red line.

When the puck is fired to the corner, the other players head after it and check anything in sight.

This sometimes leads to loose pucks and easy goals. Or is that loose teeth and easy penalties.

But there is nothing wrong with that kind of game, but if you are looking for great skating and three crisp passes before each goal, sign up for cable TV and watch the Pittsburgh Penguins with Mario Lemieux and Jaromir Jagr.

Also high school players are totally covered in pads from their skates up to their cage-covered helmets.

This is obviously for safety reasons but the cage-covered helmets give the players a robotic, terminator look that adds to the speed and hard checking.

One last thing, unlike nice warm, cozy gyms where basketball is played, hockey games are played in freezing rinks.

It's all in the cards

For Yourell, sports cards are more than just a hobby

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The origin of his hobby was innocent enough.

Chris Yourell traded a set of magic markers to a friend for his first package of baseball cards when he was eight years old.

At 26, he couldn't have known at the time what the trade would lead to for either him or his buddy.

"We both started each others' careers," said Yourell, who is a fixture on the South Shore card-show circuit. "I went on to become a dealer and he's a commercial artist."

When he was 11, Yourell's business side became apparent when he began to sell baseball cards to the neighborhood kids from his first floor bedroom window. The junior entrepreneur taped a price list outside the window, displayed his modest collection, and proceeded to sell card after card — mostly of the Red Sox.

"Everyone liked Fred Lynn, Jim Rice and Yaz," Yourell said. "I sold them for nickels, dimes and quarters. They're cards worth $10 now."

Yourell has spent countless hours researching the prices of his, now, massive collection made up of baseball, hockey, basketball and football cards. He estimates he owns nearly 250,000 cards worth somewhere in the vicinity of $40,000-$50,000.

Yourell's room is piled high with boxes filled with complete sets of cards. On the wall is a poster of Larry Bird playing in the '92 Barcelona Olympics. And of course, there is the token poster of Cindy Crawford on his bedroom door.

Next to the kitchen various stacks of boxes, crates and unopened sets of cards sit on top of each other, piled neatly in the far corner.

Yourell was not just a sports cards junkie as a youngster, but also collected stamps, coins and comic books. He eventually lost interest in his other hobbies and decided to concentrate on cards. Yourell still has what he saved packed away.

During his college years at Bridgewater State Yourell stopped collecting cards completely because tuition payments reared their ugly heads. When he graduated with a business management degree in 1988, however, he Yourell picked up where he left off and never looked back.

While he has many cards in his home, Yourell is smart enough to keep his valuable cards locked away in a bank safety deposit box. His prize possession is a rookie card with both Larry Bird and Magic Johnson on it together. The card is currently worth $500, but is a sure bet to rise in value when the pair of retired, NBA greats are elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

"And I have several of them," said Yourell of the card.

His idea of the ultimate collector's item, though, is the 1992 Class 4-Sport Shaquille O'Neal autographed card. With only 150 in existence, its market value is a hefty $1,800 and will continue to rise with each passing year.

Although he has been collecting cards for nearly 20 years, Yourell is still fairly new to selling, dealing and swapping cards at the various shows held in New England.

His first show during the third weekend of September was a definite learning experience for Yourell. He went in with high hopes, but went home at days end discouraged that he hadn't sold the volume he expected.

"I barely made enough money to cover what I paid for for the table," he said.

But the disappointment turned out to be a godsend for Yourell, who vowed not to bag the idea of displaying his inventory at future shows.

Yourell set up a table the following week for a four-day show at a local mall and made an about-face from his first show. Collectors and dealers flocked to his table to get a better look at the wide range of cards he displayed. Yourell, who believes it is important to treat a browser courteously, answered questions about various cards and gave quality advice as to what to buy. He instantly gained the trust of his customers, as well as making a pretty penny along the way.

"There was a lot of volume and I learned how to get what I needed and get it cheaply," he said. "You see the same dealers at different shows and you become friends with them."

Dealers give each other advice and often know the inside track as to "what's hot and what's not."

Yourell also learned a dealer has to watch his cards constantly during the crowded shows. He had a Rickey Henderson rookie-year card, worth $100, stolen at the show, but later caught an individual walking away from his table with a $200 Michael Jordan. Yourell decided to invest in glass display cases that guarantee his cards won't be stolen. Those cards that don't fit in the cases are watched like a hawk by Yourell and his girlfriend, Laura Lemay of Weymouth.

Lemay, who has an impressive card collection of her own, is also knowledgeable about their worth. Her abundance of energy and pleasant demeanor are both big pluses in drawing potential customers to Yourell's table.

Now, just two months after his disappointing start, Yourell is one of the rising new faces on the card-show circuit and spends his weekends at shows anywhere from New Hampshire to Rhode Island.

Interestingly enough, Yourell has no desire to collect the older cards from various sports. He'd much rather have Roger Clemens' rookie card than Ted Williams'. Cards from Yourell's own generation interest him much more. However, he does bend from his own norm in one case when it comes to older cards.

"Players who played before my interest in sports don't really interest me," Yourell said. "Except Sandy Koufax. And I have a couple of Koufaxes."

Another reason Yourell doesn't concentrate his energies on older cards is because the market for them is much smaller than that of the modern day players.

"There's a demand for Shaq," he said, "but there's no demand for Wilt Chamberlain, even though he was the most prolific scorer in history."

A card's value, Yourell says, is based mainly on how good a player was during his career, whether or not it is a rookie card, the condition of the card and how many cards are in existence.

The most popular cards currently on the market are insert cards placed randomly in sets. Yourell says the major card sets have one or two insert sets. An example is a set of basketball cards may have a hockey card thrown in a pack. The hockey card serves as a preview as to the look and design of the card before it is released on the market.

"That's the most popular thing to collect right now," Yourell said.

Michael Jordan cards have also become a hot item since he announced his retirement from the game in October and have risen in value faster than most cards, even though many believe Jordan may come out of retirement in the not-too-distant future.

Over the years Yourell has come across several virtual steals when it came to buying cards. The best bargain Yourell ever came across was when he bought a shoe box full at a flea market at the age of 12. When he opened the box Yourell knew he hit paydirt. The box was brimming with Joe Namaths', O.J. Simpsons' and Gale Sayers'. The pot-pourri of cards turned out to be worth about $2,000.

Yourell eventually plans to open his own store and has more than enough inventory of various cards to make it worth his while. But with a saturation of sports-card shops on the South Shore, Yourell knows he'll have trouble finding a location without another business in the vicinity.

Yourell says a collector who wants to become a dealer best be prepared to comb through price guides and boxes of cards for hours on end, checking and updating any price changes on the cards. There's nothing glamorous about it and he has spent many a Friday night checking and double checking the prices and putting the cards in protective, plastic sleeves.

"There's a lot of time involved and a lot of researching," Yourell said.

He also had another word of advice for the novice when it's time for a show.

"Bring your money and not your cards," Yourell said jokingly.

Like professional sports, card shows are a business as well. Yourell plans to continue learning as much about its intricacies as he can. And just maybe he can trade some magic markers lying around. After all, you just don't know when you're going to stumble on a bargain.

Chris Yourell and Laura Lemay watch as a group of browsers look over his wide assortment of baseball, hockey, football and basketball cards during a recent sports cards show. Yourell plans to be on hand at several upcoming shows in the coming months along the South Shore.

- 9:40 p.m. Hingham vs. Braintree.

Admission is $2 for students and $3 for adults. For more information, please call Hoby Taylor at 749-6660.

Stanley Cup comes to South Shore

The Friends of Norwell Hockey have brought the Stanley Cup to Pilgrim Arena in Hingham. This is a fundraiser for their newly created high school hockey team. Due to lack of funding, Norwell has never had a hockey team. Now, with the blessing of the school committee, they are trying to establish one. The donations will cover the costs of equipment, ice time, buses, and other expenses associated with the sport in order for the team to compete this year.

This event is open to all kids, both young and old. This is a once in a lifetime opportunity. Have your photo taken with the cup — any way you want it — Friday, Dec. 10, 5 to 10 p.m.; Saturday, Dec. 11, 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 12, 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Pilgrim Skating Arena, Hingham.

Donations for pictures is $10 for a 5 x 7 color print and $15 for an 8 x 10 color print. Again, all proceeds will benefit the Norwell hockey team.

The Pilgrim Skating Arena is located at 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham. For more information, call 749-6660.

Choices galore fill market

By Chris Yourell
Special to the Mariner

Remember when collecting cards was a simple task? If you do, you're harkening back to the pre - 1981 era when there was Topps. Just Topps, no other company but Topps. You could frequent your local convenience store and purchase a few packs a week. Slowly but surely you could complete your set because the same cards would be available there for months on end.

Then it happened in '81; culture shock! Donruss and Fleer sprung onto the scene with baseball sets (Fleer was already in existence but hadn't produced a major set since its '63 football collection). What was one to do? Three different sets to collect. But you handled it; you coped. You simply bought three times as many cards as you'd previously done. (No small feat, I can attest, for a 14-year-old with a paper route as his sole means of income). Then you had it easy for several years, coasting along with your Topps, Fleer, and Donruss sets. In '83, just for kicks, Topps threw a curve at you and issued a "Traded Set" at the end of the season. Of course Fleer followed suit in '84 and Donruss in '85. You could handle that too. Update sets were small and inexpensive.

The card explosion was detonated in '88 when Score came into existence. Upper Deck and Bowman followed in '89 and Leaf in '90. In '91 Topps decided it needed an upscale, more attractive card and issued Stadium Club. Leaf kicked off the Studio line the same year and Fleer issued its high-grade card, Ultra. Score followed in '92 with the Pinnacle series.

Just this year, Topps, Fleer, and Upper Deck decided that even pricier, more scarcely produced cards were needed, and printed Finest, Flair and SP, respectively. Keep in mind this selection only pertains to baseball cards. Other sports host vast arrays of competitors such as Action-Packed, Parkhurst, Pacific, Hoops and Skybox just to name a few.

Where does it all end? Not in the near future. The situation brings to mind a line of script from the movie "Field of Dreams", "If you build it, they will come." Card companies have deviated from this only slightly by adopting the maxim, "If you make it, they will buy it." Much to the chagrin of many collectors, they are correct for the time being.

Card Show Story of the Week: A gentleman withdrew a Bryan Trottier rookie card priced at $25 from one of the boxes on my table and proceeded to hand me a quarter. Bewildered, I said. "I'm sorry sir, that says twenty- five dollars." "God!", he replied, "You just can't find a bargain anymore!"

What's new: Fleer Ultra Basketball and Stadium Club Basketball – both very attractive sets. Get'em now, get'em low! – Any Jerome Bettis card – premier rookie rusher for the Rams.

Who's hot: Alexi Yashin – rookie for the Ottowa Senators exhibiting rookie of the year credentials.

Who's not: Scottie Pippen – Was there ever doubt Michael Jordan made him what he was?

Pull of the Week: Manon Rheaume: Autographed card from the Classic Hockey 1993 set. Estimated $125 value. Wow!

Happy Hunting!

Ski trip planned

The Cohasset Recreation Department will co-sponsor a day ski trip to Mt. Cranmore Monday, Dec. 27, with the Scituate Recreation Department.

The cost for this day-long trip is $48 per person and includes motor coach transportation, a lift ticket and an all day mountain ticket. Buses will depart from Cohasset town hall at 5:30 a.m. Monday, Dec. 27, and return to town hall at about 8:30 p.m. Ski lessons and equipment rentals are available at Mt. Cranmore for $14 each.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Space is limited, hence, immediate registration is advised.

Police to face Rockets

The Cohasset Police All-Stars will be playing a benefit basketball game against the Harlem Rockets at Cohasset High School Saturday, December 11 at 7 p.m. The event will include free autographs and an appearance by Big Bird and everyone's favorite purple dinosaur. The net proceeds will benefit the many causes and projects traditionally supported by the Cohasset Police Association. Tickets are $10 and can be purchased by calling 871-4995.

Nominations for 'Citizen of the Year' open

The Cohasset Mariner invites our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to our community.

Following the close of nominations, a selection [illegible]el will review the names submitted, and select the [illegible]zen of the Year, who will be named in January 1994.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, a clergy member, teacher or school administrator, police officer, firefighter or other municipal worker, a person in the local business community, sports figure, or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time and energy to a worthy Cohasset project or cause.

"Citizen of the Year" is not a popularity contest; the person most often nominated will not necessarily be selected for this recognition.

Please use the form printed here to make your nomination for "Citizen of the Year," including reasons why you believe this person should be considered. Or nominations may be made in the form of a letter. In either case, persons submitting a name for consideration should include their own name, address, and telephone number (for verification purposes only).

Nominations can be mailed to The Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset or 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield 02050, postmarked no later than Jan. 14, 1994. They may also be dropped off our drop box in Hennessy's in the Village. Also nominations may be faxed to the Marshfield office at 617-837-4843 to be received no later than 5 p.m., Jan. 14.

Please call Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford with any questions, 1-800-649-6661.

NOMINATION DEADLINE FRIDAY, JAN. 14, 1994 AT 5 P.M.

Unemployment is down

With the holiday season approaching, there is some positive news to report regarding Cohasset's unemployment rate.

According to the state Department of Employment and Training, the unemployment rate in Cohasset dropped from 5.5 percent in September to 3.4 percent in October.

The state reported that 129 Cohasset residents received unemployment benefits during October.

The news was good for the state, too, with a decline in the unemployment rate from 6.9 percent in October to 6.6 percent in November.

Unemployment rates for municipalities lag a month behind the state numbers.

"Our recent rates have consistently been running below the 1991 and 1992 rates; we are now below the November, 1990 rate of 7.2 percent," said state Commissioner Nils L. Nordberg. "We fortunately have been absorbing re-entrants into the labor force."

Town hall sets holiday hours

The town hall will close at 1 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 23 and will be closed all day Friday, Dec. 24.

On Thursday, Dec. 30 the town hall will close at 4:30 p.m. and will be closed all day Friday, Dec. 31.

Programs for Tuesday luncheons

From Margaret Casey

Dec. 14. Rev. John Gallop and Helen Gallop are coming to show slides of their recent trip to Russia, starting in Moscow, traveling along the Volga River and on to St. Petersburg. There are pictures of cities, villages, churches and many interesting vistas. Their slides are always pleasant and informative.

Dec. 21. The seniors are to be treated to another visit from a third-grade class. This month it will be Mrs. Marion Atkinson's students. The children are always a delight, and they work diligently to prepare a program to entertain. Some of the seniors may wish to bring a card to give to them.

Dec. 28. The last Tuesday of the month the seniors celebrate with those who have had a birthday that month. A cake is donated by a Cohasset bank. This month it will be from the Rockland Trust Company.

Saturday, Dec. 18. This will be the fourth annual trip to the Christmas Pops at Symphony Hall and it is one of the most enjoyable events at this season for many. The seniors have their favorite center balcony seats again. The cost for ticket and bus is $40. Departure time from Appleseed's parking lot to be announced.

Wednesday, Dec. 22, special event. Senior Christmas party at 3 North Main St. Arrive at 11:30 a.m. to participate in the tree trimming while enjoying punch, cheese and crackers. There will be a raffle for a few prizes, music by the Vagabonds and a catered delicious luncheon. The seniors have always enjoyed this celebration and getting together before the holidays. Put this on your calendar right now. Cost will be $10. RSVP before 12/15.

Wednesday, Dec. 29. Tickets are available at a $9 discount on a few dates for Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." Celebrate the season by sharing the true spirit of Christmas with Tiny Tim through eye-opening encounters with the ghosts of Christmas past, present and future. The total cost of orchestra seats and bus is $30. Departure will be 12:30 p.m. from Appleseed's. Reserve now, call 383-9112.

Caregivers support meeting tomorrow in Cohasset

The Hingham Visiting Nurse and the Cohasset Council on Aging will hold a Holiday Coffee Hour for Caregivers Friday, Dec. 10, from 10 a.m. til noon at the Cohasset Council on Aging, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset. The meeting will be the first in a series of monthly support group meetings for caregivers.

Carolyn Housman, medical social work supervisor for the Hingham Visiting Nurse, said, "Over the past few months. the Hingham Visiting Nurse held a series of lectures for families and friends of aging parents. The response was very positive, and we realized that families and caregivers need a regular group where they can share their experiences."

Housman said that the group is open to spouses and other family caregivers, friends and neighbors who care for someone who is ill.

Group co-leader Karen Farmer, LICSW, said, "We especially encouraged adult children who have elderly parents who live out-of-state to attend. We've found that people whose parents live at a distance often have trouble coping with being so far away from aging parents. The parent may be ill, or may need special care and the adult children don't know where to turn for help."

Planning the Caregivers' Support Group are Tish Clark, executive director, Hingham VNA; medical social worker, Carolyn Housman; Cohasset COA outreach worker, Susan Connolly; Cohasset COA director Kathy Bryanton; and medical social worker Karen Farmer, Hingham VNA.

Call 383-0345 for information.

Local author to sign books

Hingham author/artist, Joan Drescher will be signing her new children's book, "The Birth-Order Blues," from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday Dec. 11 at Buttonwood for Kids, 28 South St., Hingham.

Drescher began writing stories and drawing pictures to accompany them when she was a child. She created "The Birth-Order Blues" survey as a way to encourage kids to write and talk about their own experiences. The ideas in her new book reflect the voices of hundreds of school children interviewed.

To reserve a copy of the book call 749-2665.

Junior Voices to sing

The Junior Voices, a choral group of 30 children from seven South Shore towns, will perform their holiday concernt at 7 p.m. Tuesday Dec. 14 at Second Parish, 685 Main St., Hingham.

In addition to the usual format of carols and rounds sung with the audience, the children will present a mini-jazz opera entitled, "Christmas Jazz" with costumes, lighting, solos and staging. Lauren McCarthy and Freddie Boakye of Hingham and Meghan Kelley of Norwell will sing the lead roels of barnyard landlady, overworked donkey and Mary.

The Junior Voices and their families are working to raise money to send the group to Seattle, Wash. where they will join the Mercer Island Children's Chorus, an experienced 90-voice choris which traveled to Washington, DC last season to perform at the White House. They will visit and give concerts with the children's chorus for four days.

The Junior Voices are selling sweatshirts with the tour logo, "Singing from Sea to Sea," as part of their fund-raising for the trip. Sweatshirts will be on sale following the concert and there will be a free-will donation for the concert. Money raised will help the children make the trip to Seattle.

NOW to hold open house

The South Shore chapter of the National Organization for Women will hold open house at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday Dec. 14 at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham. The open house is free and open to the public. This is planned to give those interested in the organization an opportunity to see what NOW is doing on the South Shore.

Non-perishable food items will be accepted for donations to a local women's shelter.

For information call Suzanne Cutler at 749-3342 or Jeannette Tibbetts at 337-6725.

Celebrate '94 a family New Years celebration

By Rhonda Myers
Special to the Mariner

Buy your buttons now for this local version of a "First Night" because with ongoing concert and entertainment there is definitely something for everyone. Last year's event was great fun and you won't want to miss "Celebrate '94" sponsored by the Community Center in Cohasset. Button sales are limited on a first-come, first-serve basis. So get your family and friends together and don't miss out on the fun!

Events include:

Chucj Morris; The Sidewalk Blues Bank (traditional Chicago and Texas style blues); Baroque music by "La Sommerie"; Carolyn Curtis' jazz quartet; Joe Howard the magician; juggler Ken Sherburn; the Brown Bag Opera performing "Hansel & Gretel" and "Carmen"; Confetti Fireworks finale; a saxaphone quartet, a carillon concert; a roving authentic bagpipe player; Dance Visions dance troupe; face painting, clowns, hayrides, art exhibits and more.

Buttons are $5 each (children under five free) at the Center at 3 N. Main St., Cohasset. The button allows entry into all events and entertainment. After Dec. 10 buttons are $10 each. Purchases at the food court and novelty items are not included. Both are sold as fundraisers by local non-profit churches and organizations. There will be hot dogs, pretzels, pizza, hot chocolate and more.

The event runs from 5:30 to 10 p.m. Dec. 31 and all events take place in the center, art center, Depot court, First Parish, Second Congregational Church, St. Stephens, Town Hall and on the common. To make for a safe environment there will be no parking on the common and adjacent roads will be closed. Shuttle buses will run continuously from St. Anthony's and the high school.

If you have any questions about the event, are interested in volunteering for an hour that evening, or wish to be a sponsor, please call event chair Rhonda Myers at 383-0088.

Mom's morning out

The Community Center is offering baby-sitting Saturdays, through Dec. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Pre-registration by Thursday for any Saturday.

Fee is $11 for the first child and $7 for the second child. Call 383-0088.

Theatrical producer is perfectly cast

"I've always believed very strongly in that," he said. "[illegible]ught in the New York Pops — people don't expect an evening like that."

During his tenure with the Music Circus, Rawson saw the glamour and the grief associated with the entertainment industry.

With lavish clam-bakes in his back yard, he entertained big-name artists including Liberace, Johnny Mathis and Lawrence Welk's Orchestra.

He gave Dolly Parton her first lobster.

Entertaining the artists was a fun part of the job for him, but it was all work, he said.

"There's nothing like it from the standpoint of PR, in terms of talking you up," he said. Artists would have such a good time in Cohasset, they would tell one another how much fun it was to play the Music Circus, he said.

But he alluded to the dark side of the entertainment world as well.

"I could tell you about the time I had to take Raquel Welch to court, or the time Tony Orlando walked offstage," he said.

At a performance in the early 1970s, Orlando walked offstage 20 minutes into his act. He insulted the audience and the entertainment profession, Rawson said.

Rawson refunded the tickets immediately, or he would have had a riot on his hands, he said.

For the past four years, Rawson has been the Chairman of the Board for the Motion Picture Players Welfare Fund. He has volunteered with the Fund for 30 years.

The Fund helps performers through tough times with grants to pay for medical bills, rent or whatever a down-and-out performer may need.

Set up through the Screen Actors Guild, the Fund is a source of temporary help for performers hit with tough times.

"It's not a long-term thing," Rawson explained.

The program is funded through contributions from telethons, he explained. Artists often perform on fund-raising television shows in exchange for a contribution to the Fund, he said. Ironically, the fund is not used by starving artists on their way up, but by has-beens on their way out of the limelight.

"All of a sudden, when the work is not there anymore, (artists need financial help)," he said.

Rawson gained empathy for performers in need when he started his career as a radio announcer more than 40 years ago.

Always interested in public speaking, Rawson realized his voice had a naturally authoritative, "announcer" quality.

"It just came that way," he said with a smile. Rawson started his broadcasting career while he was a student at Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa. He was discovered by a local radio station, and he later went on to New York to continue as an announcer for radio and television.

In the 1940s and 50s, he narrated "The Colgate Comedy Hour," "The Kate Smith Show" and he worked as a newscaster for the 15-minute broadcast on CBS, the "Crisco Newspaper of the Air."

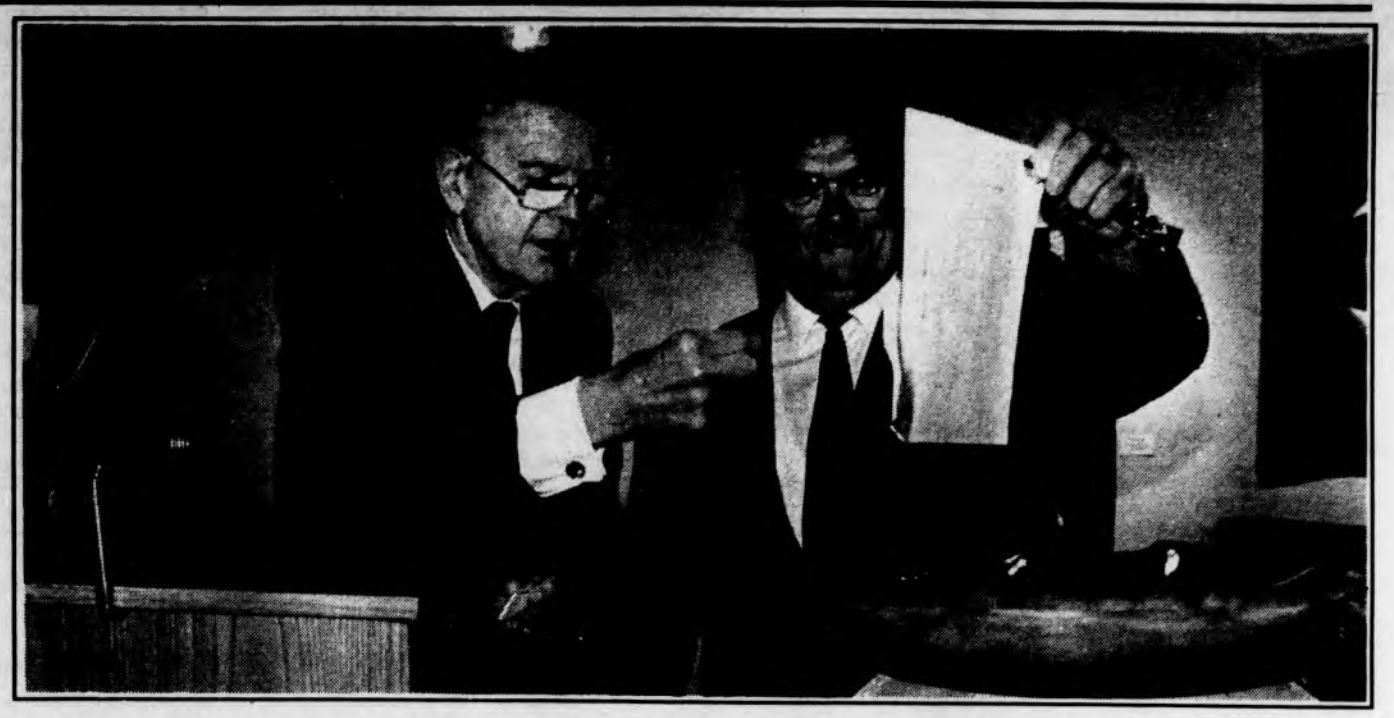
While seeking his fortune in New York, he ran into his old college friend who first encouraged him to be an announcer for a college variety show — and he married her.

Together, he and his wife, Ruth, moved to Long Island to open a summer theater. Since then, they worked as a team to produce and direct dozens of productions in New York and London.

Ruth Rawson, who has her Ph.D in theater arts from Columbia University, taught at Columbia and at the St. John's Neighborhood Players in New York. She won an Obie award in the late 1960s for directing a play entitled, "Kiss Mama."

"We're the Hume Cronin and Jessica Tandy," he said with a grin. The theatrical duo actually performed in Rawson's summer theater in the comedy, "The Four Poster." Although the play was unsuccessful on Long Island, it ran for years on Broadway and was later made into a musical entitled "Two for the See Saw."

The Rawsons live in Cohasset. Their two grown daughters work outside Massachusetts, one as a public relations officer for the YMCA and the other is the head of the Agricultural Division at the Library of Congress.



During a special ceremony honoring the occasion Sunday, Ron Rawson, left, puts a match to the six-year old $330,000 mortgage held by Cohasset Savings Bank president Donald Bates. In a speech at the Art Center, Rawson thanked all those who have helped the Art Center and asked for their continued support. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald.)

public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
Norfolk, ss.
Superior Court.
No. 93-2559

To GEORGE MUIR III AND JUDY MUIR, DONNA M. CROSSEN and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended

GREETING:

Hingham Institution for Savings Claiming to be the holder of a mortgage covering real property situated in 122 Forest Avenue, Cohasset, County of Norfolk Massachusetts given by George Muir III and Judy Muir to Hingham Institution for Savings dated April 27, 1987 and recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds book 5820 page 197 has filed with said court a bill in equity for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry to foreclose and by exercise of power of sale set forth in said mortgage.

If you are entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended, and you object to such foreclosure, you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Dedham on or before January 7, 1994 or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.

Witness, JOHN J. IRWIN, Jr., Esquire, Chief Justice of our Superior Court, the 18th day of November in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ninety three.

Nicholas Barbadoro
Clerk.

Football team scores safety from SSL blitz

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High football team will continue to play an Independent schedule for at least two more years, according to athletic director Clark Chatterton.

South Shore League representatives voted to allow the Skippers to remain with their schedule for the '94 and '95 seasons, rather than become a member of the SSL next fall, it was decided Friday night at Dennis-Yarmouth High School.

In its last 27 games, Cohasset is 0-9-1 against SSL teams, but a whopping 12-4-1 versus squads outside of the league. The Skippers beat West Bridgewater and Marian this season, both of whom went on to play in Super Bowl games. Because they are an Independent team, the Skippers would have to file an application if the squad's record were good enough to possibly play in a bowl game over the next two years, Chatterton said.

Hull High, which went to the Division 4B Super Bowl against Ipswich in '92, withdrew its proposed motion to leave the SSL and play an Independent schedule.

At the end of the '95 season Cohasset will be faced with the alternatives of playing in the SSL, possibly combining its team with another town, or discontinuing its football program.

Chatterton believes a "cooperative effort with another

Winter House Tour is holiday favorite

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Whether you celebrate the 12 days of Christmas or the eight nights of Hanukkah, the artful gardeners of Community Garden Club of Cohasset showed you a way to deck your halls with panache and beauty.

Once again, the club sponsored a holiday season house tour. Eight homes with a connection to Cohasset's seaside tradition opened their doors to pilgrims in search of beauty and inspiration.

The reputation of the house tour preceded it to such an extent that it drew visitors from as far afield as Revere, Taunton, Framingham, Sudbury, Springfield and New Hampshire, according to club member Polly Logan.

Visitors were hard-pressed to choose a favorite — each home was wonderful in its own unique way. The floral designers for each home tried to match their designs to the character of the home and its residents.

The homes on the tour ranged from a Grande Dame of the Victorian age to a watch pocket-size ranch tucked into a hillside overlooking Little Harbor. Another gave residents a glimpse at the extensive renovations that turned a vintage 1890-barn into a gracious home.

Each home featured greeter who could explain the architectural and horticultural wonders on display. Greeters were members of the garden club which

South Shore has a lot going for it

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

While the recession has hurt the South Shore in some respects, it also has offered opportunities for businesses and local governments willing look at things from different perspectives.

The South Shore Coalition, of which Cohasset is a member, recently presented a forum on the status and future of economic development, featuring representatives from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Plymouth County Development Council and the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

One message was clear: local officials must be mindful of the image they create when discussing their town.

"Businesses, in general, think government hates them," said Brooks Kelly, executive director of the Plymouth County Development Council.

'Some towns are perceived as being anti-business and perception makes the world go round.'

— Brooks Kelly, Plymouth County Development Council

Business leaders read press reports on local government meetings closely.

"They look at things said in planning, zoning and conservation commission meetings," he said. "Often town officers say things that are less than prudent.

"Some towns are perceived as being anti-business," Kelly continued. "And perception makes the world go round."

Fire damages home

A Cohasset family of five was put out of their home for the holidays Tuesday afternoon following a fire that started in an upstairs bedroom.

Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said the an upstairs bedroom was damaged and there was heat and smoke damage throughout the duplex at 471 Beechwood St.

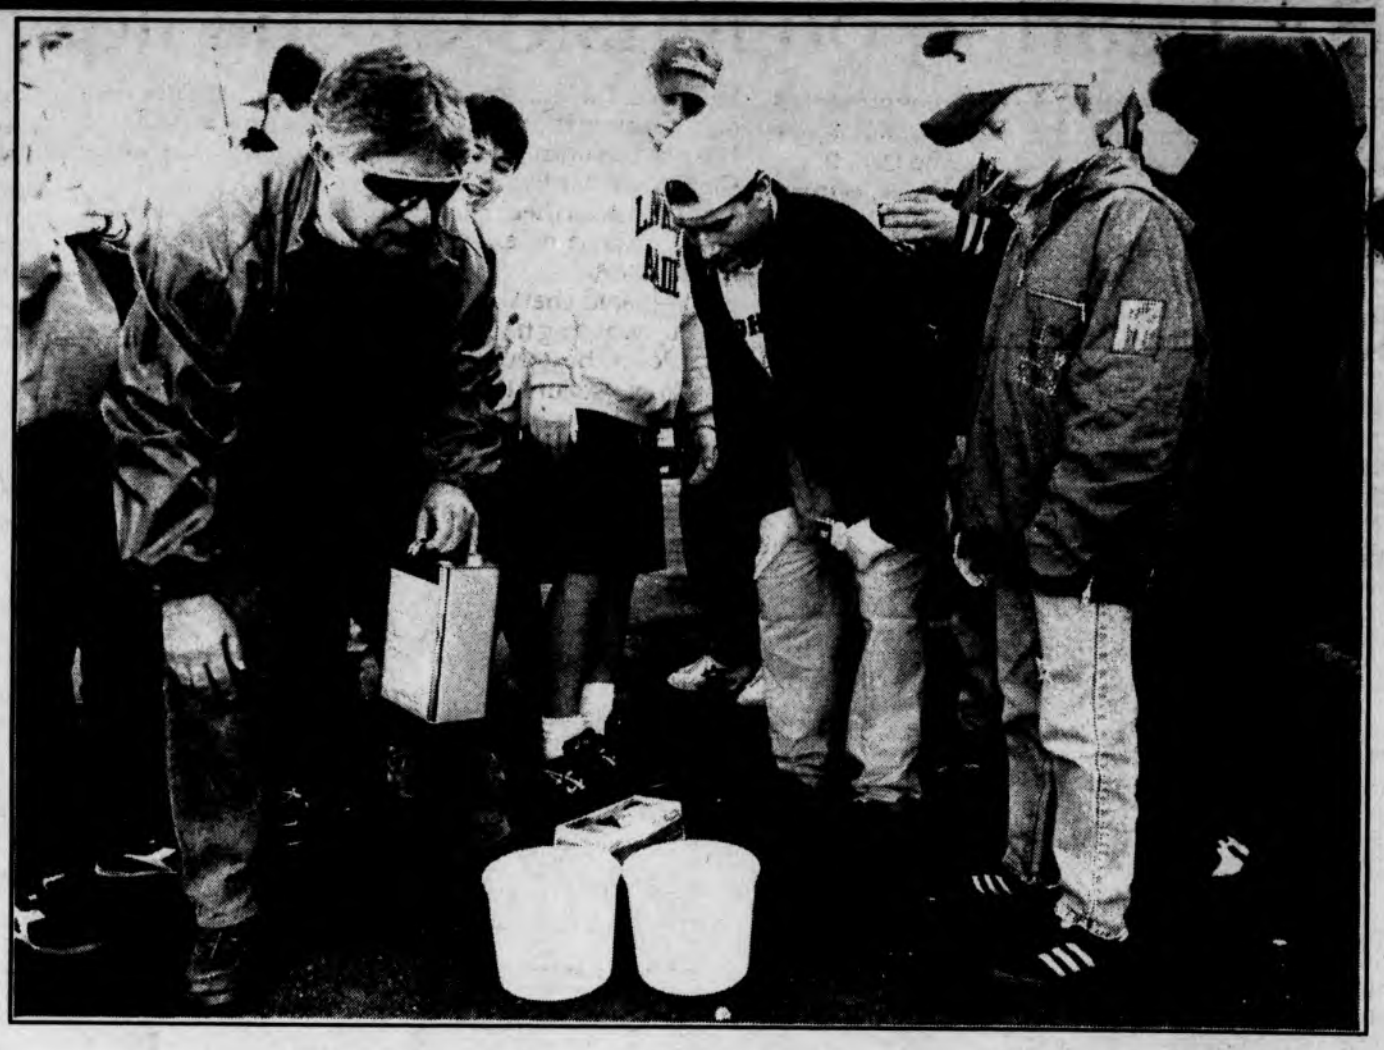
The adjoining apartment at 473 Beechwood was not damaged but those occupants have moved out temporarily until the smoke smell can be removed. The family in the duplex where the fire occurred are staying with friends in Cohasset, Lincoln said.

A police officer on patrol called the fire department at 3:30 p.m. after he spotted smoke coming from the house.

Lincoln said two engines, an aerial ladder truck, and an ambulance responded to the scene. There were no injuries.

It took about 30 minutes to bring the fire under control, he said. The cause of the fire is under investigation.

An engine from Scituate and an engine from Hull covered Cohasset's station during the fire, Lincoln said.



CHS Asst. Principal Jack DiLorenzo instructs students on the best way to remove graffiti. Working with police to try to bring an end to the vandalism problem, about 15 teenagers have volunteered their time on early release days to remove the graffiti that's appeared around town.

ZBA hearing on Music Circus liquor license held

Officials from the South Shore Music Circus presented their case for the granting of a variance for liquor license before the zoning board of appeals Dec. 9.

Although as the town's licensing authority, selectmen have the final say, ZBA approval is required because the sale of liquor is an expansion of a non-conforming use. The Music Circus on Sohier Street is in a residentially-zoned area.

After hearing testimony, the ZBA took the matter under advisement.

Ralph Kidder and his wife, Linda Keller, 2 Cushing Rd., wrote separate letters to the ZBA opposing the granting of a variance for a liquor license.

Kidder, who is a member of the school committee, said he was so concerned about public safety and the town's liability by the parking of patrons at the Osgood School that he asked the schools' superintendent to look into the matter with legal counsel. Kidder also said granting the variance sends the wrong message to the town's youth. And the "tactics" used by the Music Circus, Kidder found appalling.

"'We gave all these charitable dollars, so fork over our liquor license or else,' seems to be their message," Kidder wrote.

Keller said she didn't think the town had a thing to gain by granting the liquor license. She mentioned the sacrifices abutters have "silently suffered through" due to noise and late performances.

Mary Mack, secretary of the town's drug and alcohol committee, also wrote to the ZBA, explaining why that board would not take a stand on the issue "because the charge of the D&A Committee is to increase awareness of, and promote education regarding substance abuse issues, it is evident that it would not be appropriate for us to address a licensing issue."

Mack wrote that the committee however, "would ask that throughout your deliberations thoughtful consideration be given to all issues associated with public safety and the role modeling of our youth, many of whom are employed at the Music Circus during the summer months."

In the correspondence packet this week at the selectmen's office, Vincent G. Longo, general manager of the Music Circus, sent Selectman Michael H. Sullivan projected beverage-sale revenues if a wine and malt beverages license should be granted.

South Shore has a lot going for it economically

Both Kelly and Terry Fancher, general manager of South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said transportation woes will continue to stifle economic development.

"Transportation is the number one economic development issue," Fancher said. Gridlock on Route 3 now begins farther away from Boston.

"It's not going to get any better," he warned. "We need to make progress on the Old Colony line. We need to get Greenbush."

Businesses considering locating in an area consider the price of homes, the suitability of the labor force, prevailing wages, the quality of the school system and quality of life amenities, Fancher said.

But Fancher also said communities that are trying to lure businesses to their area may be missing the boat.

"Economic development in the '90s is not so much a matter of large companies moving to our area, but keeping the companies we have and helping them to expand," Fancher explained.

WRONG MESSAGE

Tax classifications decisions can be critical, added Kelly. Many communities have considered shifting more of the tax burden to commercial properties to mollify financially struggling homeowners. The result often can be a big increase for equally strapped business owners.

"Split tax rates send the wrong message," he explained.

One of the consequences of the recession has been a steep increase in the number of foreclosures and bank-owned properties. While empty storefronts can have a debilitating effect on the business climate, properties that sell at bargain basement rates can create a new set of problems for a community.

Banks, anxious to get rid of the real estate, frequently sell or auction properties for less than their assessed value.

Fancher cited the case of a Quincy bank building, assessed at $2.5 million, that was sold by Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation last March for $389,000.

"From an economic development point of view that's great — you can fill the building at lower rates, Fancher said. "But what does it do to your tax rate? That can have a real impact on a community."

Drawing new industry and business to a community or assisting existing companies to expand increases a town's tax base and adds to its coffers.

It also creates the positive image of a thriving community that draws other investors and home builders.

Until now, the South Shore has suffered from low visibility when it comes to prospective investors. Soon those investors and local communities will be able to tap into a data bank listing vacant sites available for industrial and commercial development.

MARKETING THE REGION

The Metropolitan Data Center, an affiliate of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, already maintains data bases on demographics and economics of the 101 communities in the Greater Boston area. The center also offers mapping services in geographic information system software and custom data analyses, such as school enrollment projections.

Now, using funding from the federal Economic Development Administration, the Massachusetts Highway Department, Boston Edison Company and member communities of MAPC, the data center has developed a computerized inventory of vacant sites zoned for industrial or commercial use. The inventory relies on assessors' data and zoning maps.

Investigators limited the survey to vacant parcels containing a minimum of three acres. The average parcel contains 26 acres, the largest site covers 302 acres.

Prospective investors and communities can tap into the database and get a print out detailing such things as permitted uses, size, development potential, development obstacles such as wetlands or limited frontage, existence of sewer lines and distance from highways and rail lines, assessed value and site assembly.

According to data center investigator Laure Clark, a prospective developer can request a computer run of all available sites meeting certain criteria. For example, she said, a developer could request a printout of "all sites with 45 acres, within five miles of Route 495, zoned for industrial uses with no obstacles."

The center's survey found 693 sites containing a total of 17, 755 acres — or two percent of the land area of the region surveyed. Of the 693 sites, 484 are zoned for industrial uses and the remaining 209 are zoned for commercial uses.

Office use is permitted on most sites, followed in order by limited industrial, manufacturing, warehousing, research and development, retail, hotel/restaurant, industrial and auto service/sales.

According to assessors' property code classification information, 54 percent of all lots are developable, 28 percent are potentially developable and 18 percent are rated "undevelopable."

Wetlands are the most common barrier to development. Other obstacles could be limited frontage, location within an aquifer/watershed protection district, floodplain or the existence of hazardous material on the site.

The average assessed value of the sites was $38,304 per acre.

The bad news was that the potential industrial and commercial sites are concentrated in a relatively few communities. Ten communities have 35 percent of the sites, 20 communities contain 55 percent of them, and 26 communities have no sites at all.

On the South Shore:

- Cohasset has two sites containing a total of 25.15 acres and assessed for $802,300.
- Hanover has 15 sites containing a total of 346.53 acres and assessed at $6.244 million.
- Hingham has seven sites containing a total of 371.6 acres and assessed at $9.33 million.
- Hull has two sites containing a total of 8.52 acres and assessed at $731,000.
- Marshfield has seven sites containing a total of 237.55 acres and assessed at $2.966 million.
- Norwell has six sites containing a total of 76.08 acres and assessed at $3.557 million.
- Pembroke has 11 sites containing a total of 103.25 acres and assessed at $3.883 million.
- Rockland has 12 sites containing a total of 301.69 acres and assessed at $7.82 million.
- Scituate has one site of 18.28 acres valued at $207,700.
- Weymouth has 12 sites containing 309.92 acres and assessed at $5.126 million.

Eventually, Clark said, the data center wants to add underutilized and undeveloped sites to its database.

One relatively untapped source of revenue for businesses and local communities is tourism. That is a special focus for the Plymouth County Development Council.

Donna Green

Name: Donna Green

Occupation: Artist, art publishing business owner, author & illustrator. (Donna just opened a studio in Cohasset at 11 Elm St., near Cohasset Savings Bank. The hours until Christmas are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday .)

Most embarrassing moment: When I turned around to be introduced to someone at a very formal wedding, a drink was spilled down the front of my green satin dress. I had to wear the drink for the rest of the day.

Goal: To keep painting and to keep my children going in the right direction.

Favorite season: Fall.

Best vacation: The two month long trip across country with my husband a few years ago. We saw everything, it was wonderful!

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: People's losing sight of the fact that tradition and values are very important.

Favorite book: "Notes to Myself," by Hugh Prather.

Favorite movie: "Dances with Wolves."

Biggest worry: That I spread myself so thin that I won't give my children enough time.

Favorite place: The woods where I live in Scituate.

Favorite junk-food: Chocolate!

Person you'd most like to meet: My great grandfather. He was also an artist.

Favorite TV show: Anne of Avonlea on the Disney Channel.

Overtime shortfall

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan will ask voters at the special town meeting for $16,000 to cover excess overtime expenses primarily due to the retirement of two police officers. The actual shortfall is $24,000 but $8,000 of that amount can be covered by 13 weeks of the new's officer's salary budgeted for, Noonan said. Cohasset's new recruit didn't come on board until October.

The town has hired two new recruits, Jeffrey Treanor started in November and Richard G. Abbadessa will graduate from the police academy in February and will be inserted into the police department minimum manning required. Noonan said once Abbadessa joins the force, he expects the overtime costs to be reduced.

"It is very difficult to control overtime in a small police department with a minimum manning (contract) clause," Noonan said. "Particularly in the past six months due to our being two officers short of full complement.

"Almost every time an officer is out, ie., vacation, sick leave or to appear in court, it causes overtime," he said.

Police budgeted $104,000 for overtime in FY'94. In the department's proposed FY'95 budget, Noonan has requested that overtime be level-funded to the FY'94 budgeted amount. This equates to a 3-1/2 percent cut in overtime hours when the police officers' 3-1/2 percent salary increase is taken into consideration, Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon said.

❑ A British writer said, "She can vamp the blues, belt out a rock number and put heart into jazz standards played in her inimitable style and sung in that amazing rasping voice that's a cross between Edith Piaf, Marlene Dietrich, Janis Joplin*, and a female* Tom Waits."

She's Cohasset's own Sandy Dillon, she's home on holiday from London and she's giving a special concert at Cohasset High School Thursday, Dec. 23, at 8 p.m. for her old friends and neighbors as well as for those who want to discover her immense talent!

Sandy has been a pianist since the age of five. She also played trombone in the jazz band and appeared in both "Godspell" and "Bye Bye Birdie," at CHS. Following her magna cum laude graduation from Berklee College of Music, Sandy moved to New York to become a mainstay of the club scene and made her Broadway debut in a short-lived musical.

From there she went to London, where in the past months she has been working in clubs in a new band as well as recording with her husband, British guitarist Stephen Bywater, who will appear with her in Cohasset. Obviously this will be the only U.S. performance for Sandy Dillon in the forseeable future.

Tickets for this rare appearance by one of Cohasset's most talented products are $5 in advance and $7 at the door. The show will be a benefit for the performing arts at CHS, so go to the CHS auditorium Dec. 23. Doors will open at 7:30 p.m.; performance time is 8 p.m.

Erin Johnson of Cohasset dances with Guy Tunnicliffe whose wife Amy is director of the National League of Junior Cotillions Greater Boston Chapter. Sunday's special event was the Junior Cotillion Holly Ball at Old Derby Academy in Hingham.

❑ Herb Jason and John Small are once again giving all of their spare time this holiday season to Toys for Totsat Bradlees in Hingham, but if you m them why not give Herb a call and drop off a small cash donation.

❑ This Saturday (Dec. 18) there will be a wrestling tournament at CHS. Coach Sweeney will be the man in charge, and he is looking for alumnae wrestlers to give him a hand in the third annual event. It's slated to begin at 10 a.m. If you can be there give him a call at 383-6103, it's an event enjoyed by all.

❑ Marilyn Adams (383-0257) and Joan Kovack (383-6358) of the Cohasset Metco Committee are sponsoring a trip to Boston to see the "Black Nativity."

Proceeds are going to a late bus for the Metco students so that they may take part in the extra-curricular activities at school. Tickets, which include transportation and a share of the proceeds, are $20 for adults and $15 for children under 12 accompanied by an adult. The bus leaves the town hall parking lot at 2:15 p.m. on the 19th. You'll be back about 6:30 p.m. It's a fun-filled day, please call Marilyn or Joan and they'll take care of the rest for you. Your donation will be greatly appreciated for this worthwile expense of the Metco program.

❑ That's all for this week, sure hope you will call me with your news, it is what makes this enjoyable for all!

High Street

Maybe you have to live in New Hope, Minnesota to appreciate Cohasset.

Transferred to the Twin Cities with my husband's job in the late 1970's and a New Englander by birth, I spent the first few months the Minneapolis suburb trying to find 'downtown' New Hope.

It turned out that the official town center was a K-Mart plaza. The town hall which included the recreation, fire, and police departments was across the highway from the plaza in a small brick building.

There was no "High Street", no little shops to duck into, and no place to grab a cup of coffee with a friend.

The loss of Colonial Pharmacy in Cohasset Village has sent shock waves through the town. Papered-up windows can't mask the economic and emotional void that remains in its place. Now that the dust has settled, Cohasseters wonder what will happen next and if another business will soon fill the pharmacy space.

Newly elected Chamber of Commerce president Keith Knowles' recent letter to selectmen is encouraging. As he takes over the reins of the business organization, he stressed the Chamber's commitment to developing a healthy environment for local business.

"While the forces that led to the loss of Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy were beyond anyone's control, the response that we can make to that loss is not," Mr. Knowles said.

"The Chamber is dedicated to developing the business community in our town and is anxious to work with selectmen and all other groups who share that interest.

"I hope that working together we can develop strategies and programs to rejuvenate not only the village businesses, but the other centers of business activity in Cohasset."

The South Shore Coalition meeting last week focused on the region's economic potential. Not only is image important but access.

As Cohasset moves into the 1990's and beyond — there will be a lot of changes. The town may soon have three major supermarkets. Officials need to ask themselves how they can preserve the town's character and maintain a healthy village center in light of major developments along Route 3A.

One of the nice things about Cohasset is that it is off the beaten track. But the down side is that in our fast-paced lives, we're probably not going to drive out too far of our way to shop if its a hassle.

We think Cohasseters should take a hard look toward at the possible return of Greenbush rail and what that might mean to town businesses. At the recent 10-town South Shore Coalition meeting, access to the South Shore and how that affects economics was discussed. Transportation and accessibility will be key issues as Cohasset businesses position themselves for the 21st Century. If the town wants rail — it ought to remind its elected representatives and state officials of that fact. Hingham, the most vocal opponent to rail restoration, seems to have no trouble getting its opposing view in the spotlight.

There's no doubt that the best way to support local business is to shop in town. Cohasset shops are wonderful and have the friendliest managers, clerks, waitresses, etc. around!

Take it from a repatriated new Englander, there is nothing like a "High Street". Whether it's a quaint village like Cohasset or bustling town like Hingham — being able to walk outside, window shop, and see friends and neighbors is not only special but a rare part of Americana, one that should be preserved.

Thanks for reaching out

letters

To the Editor:

It is the holiday season and time to share and care, not only with family and friends, but also with new-found acquaintances. I am taking this opportunity to say thank you to four area firemen who helped our family Friday evening, Nov. 5.

My mother resides with us and had heart surgery in October. She had an alarming relapse Nov. 5. Although the Cohasset ambulance was not available, Captain Mark Trask and James Fiori were at our home within minutes to help.

They were joined a few minutes later by Barry Cohen and David McNair with the Hull ambulance. My three young children were obviously upset to see their grandmother so ill.

Sincerest thanks and praise to the four of you for handling the total situation with professionalism, compassion, concern and a sense of humor. After a safe journey to the hospital, my mother is recovering.

Also, praise and kudos to Judy Fitzsimmons, all her helpers and volunteers and the Social Service League for putting up with the hundreds of us who showed up for flu shots this past fall. Notwithstanding the seemingly endless lines that often wound outside the doors, they carried on for hours with no break and no chairs!

Merry Christmas and a safe and joyful holiday to all of you for reaching out and helping.

Village revitalization effort needed

To the Editor:

After reading the Dec. 2 issue of the Cohasset Mariner, I am struck by the two front page articles. The first reported on the sale of Cushing Plaza and an imminent "Super Shaws" to be constructed on that site. The second announced the closing of the Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy and Ralph Harrison's move as head pharmacist to "Super Stop & Shop." Also mentioned in the former article was the third possibility of a "Super Star Market."

Forgive me but when did I, as a resident of Cohasset, ever request or give permission for three supermarkets? I can understand a certain level of healthy competition but this is absurd! I wonder if anyone out there is considering the impact of all this 3A building frenzy in Cohasset.

Route 3A will have to change at some point. It will have to expand to accommodate the heavy shopping traffic of neighboring towns. Do we want to pay more taxes for Hingham, Scituate and Hull to use our highway for their "shopping convenience?" At the present time it can be as big a nightmare as the Southeast Expressway. Most days I try to find alternative routes in an effort to avoid the snarls of traffic. For years most of 3A had been protected to stop what is now about to happen.

My in-house devil's advocate (my husband) reminded me of the economic advantages to additional supermarkets; i.e., more jobs, tax revenue for the town, etc. I admit that these are vital issues but I'm concerned about this town as a whole community.

I'm concerned that the only neighborhood drugstore in downtown Cohasset just vacated yet another space in our now desolate looking downtown. I'm concerned about the future of other stores in the village. I'm concerned that Dunkin Donuts and Papa Gino's will probably end up staying in the "Super Shaw's Plaza" while Buttonwod, Sea 'n Cheese, and American Image will be forced to move to where?

What I am hoping is that we as a town might have a similar opportunity, as they had in Scituate last spring in a town meeting, to choose whether or not we need or want another "SUPER" market. I realize that Scituate was voting on commercial zoning of 3A but if it was so important to Scituate NOT to allow a zoning change for Shaw's on 3A, shouldn't we be just a touch suspicious? We will all be affected whether it is through your pocket, eminent domain to acquire expansion for 3A, or general aggravation.

My final proposal: if your favorite stores are forced out of Cushing Plaza, shouldn't we try to attract these successful businesses to downtown Cohasset in an effort to revitalize what used to be a very striking motif? And shouldn't we also encourage these businesses to relocate to revitalize our sense of community which may be temporarily sleeping but needs to awaken before it's too late.

I'm looking into it, are you?

Holiday thoughts

(The following holiday thoughts were written by kindergarten students in classes at the Osgood school).

A.M. CLASS

Patrick Bertovich — Christmas makes me feel happy. I get to see Santa Claus and we make homemade Christmas cookies.

John Burgoon — Christmas is a time to be with my family and I get to see Grandpa. We get to finish the scraps of Thanksgiving. I like the sounds of snow plows and the smell of snow. We need a small Christmas tree.

Taryon O'Brien — I like the cinnamon smells at holiday time. I like to celebrate with my Nana.

Aidan Buick — I like to eat candy. I like when I get the toys and watch Christmas specials.

Aaron Bigley — The holidays are good and happy. I like to eat chicken. I feel stuffed after I eat sometimes. My grandmother visits. My birthday is almost on Thanksgiving. I like to play pin the tail on the donkey.

Zach Markert — I like to eat turkey. Orange reminds me of Thanksgiving. I like to listen to Christmas music. It makes me feel good. I'm going to Syracuse, New York for Thanksgiving to visit my grandmother.

Kathryn Evans — Christmas means toys, Christmas cookies, music, red and green, reindeer on the roof, Santa, Night Before Christmas. I feel happy.

Eric Wright — Christmas means toys, pancakes, all the colors, my mother reads stories. We play pin the tail on the donkey.

Matt O'Connell — Christmas is a happy time, my favorite holiday. There are presents, scrambled eggs and bacon. Grandma and Grandpa come. We read in the Christmas book. We hear bells and ho', ho' ho!

Emilie Shea — Christmas makes me feel good. I like to eat turkey. Red reminds me of Christmas. I like cards and playing in the snow. My family visits my house. I like making Christmas decorations and singing Jingle Bells.

Charlotte Sida — Christmas makes me excited. I like to play "Duck, duck goose", jumping in the snow and making a snowman. Red and green remind me of Christmas. Grandma comes to my house. I like turkey and potatoes. My favorite Christmas song is "Jingle Bells."

Danny Mercurio — I am excited when I go to sleep at Christmas. Green and blue remind me of Christmas ornaments. I like to sing "Jingle Bells." I like the good food on Thanksgiving. I like to play games.

Chelsea Grossman — We do both Hanukkah and Christmas. I feel good. I like to eat chicken, broccoli and corn. I like people singing, smelling good things cooking & hearing stories.

Katie Jensen — I like making snow angels and having a Christmas tree. The holidays are exciting.

Jonathan Lowe — Christmas makes me feel good. I get to see my Gram. I get to eat cake, hear the bells and maybe have a race. I like to hear Santa laughing, smell snow and the Christmas tree. I like making and wrapping up presents.

Kristen Schwerin — Christmas makes me feel happy when I hear the bells and see Santa and hear Christmas stories.

Amanda Adams — I like Christmas because we have family gatherings, eat turkey, see Santa Claus and get new toys. I like giving thanks for what we have. I like decorating the Christmas tree.

Aly Belz — I like Christmas and Thanksgiving because they make me feel so good.

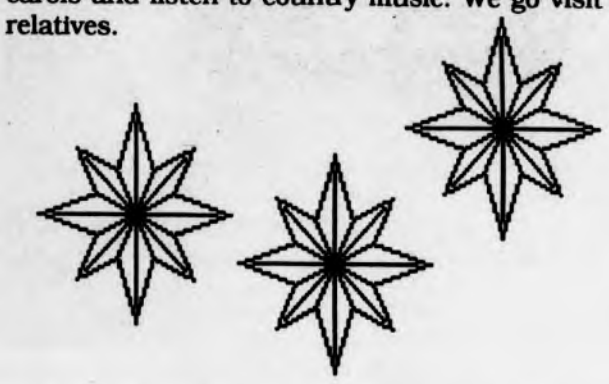
Danny Nardo— I like Christmas because we decorate and then get to visit our relatives.

Mia Lieb Lappen — I like the happy times of Hanukkah and giving presents.

Hunter Sease — I like to get presents at Christmas and eat turkey on Thanksgiving. I like seeing the family . I think about white and red, play "tick tac toe" and sing "Frosty the Snowman." I like the Christmas tree and ornaments.

David Figueiredo — Christmas means a tree with black and white. I like turkey, seeing my family and friends. I like to play Lego and watch "Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer."

Mikaela O'Hara — Me and my brother go outside and play. At Christmas time I like to watch Prancer. We eat turkey at Thanksgiving. At Christmas we put our own ornaments on the tree. I like to sing Christmas carols and listen to country music. We go visit our relatives.



Rory Kennedy — Christmas makes me happy. Rory likes to jump in the snow, hear bells, smell Christmas trees and get cookies for Santa. I like to see friends, eat Christmas cookies and get a note from Santa. I like snowflakes.

Cassie Rosano — At Christmas I like to make snowmen, see Santa hear the bells, eat cookies and smell Christmas trees. I like to put on Christmas decorations. I like to jump in the snow.

Chris Bryan — I like to see the snow and sometimes I eat a little. I like Christmas because my birthday is near (the 21st). I like to make a Santa house, put up Christmas decorations and get a Christmas tree . I like to hear the birds.

P.M. CLASS

Brian Healy — My favorite holiday is Christmas because I get presents from people in our family and Santa puts them in your stocking. It is a pretty holiday because it has all kinds of lights and decorations. We play out in the snow. We have special foods like crackers and cheese.

Jake Watts — I like Christmas because Santa brings me toys. I see wrapping paper, a Christmas tree with decorations and I smell cookies. Outside there is snow.

Caitlin Sanchez — Christmas is special because I have trains around my Christmas. The tree smells nice. I hear footsteps downstairs. I think they are Santa's footsteps.

Joanna Hamilton — Easter and Christmas are my favorite holidays. They are fun to do. At Easter, the bunny comes down the bunny trail and gives toys to all the kids. I dress up in my Easter dress with roses on it and then I go out and hunt for Easter eggs. At Christmas Santa is making a list of all the kids. On Christmas eve he bundles up warm and Mrs. Claus and he go out to the sled. I proved that Santa exists because in my driveway there were carrot parts from the carrot I left for the reindeer.

Emily Blake — Christmas is special because I get presents. I hear Santa saying "Ho, Ho, Ho, Merry Christmas!" I see decorations in peoples windows. My Mom makes cookies for Santa. Santa eats them.

Dereck Manton — Christmas is special because I get presents from Santa. Santa is very nice. I saw Santa two times. I smell snow at Christmas time. It smells like ice. I hear Santa riding with his reindeers. Rudy has a nose that lights up. Sometimes I see my Nana at Christmas.

Leigh Laugelle — Christmas is a winter holiday, but sometimes it doesn't snow. You hear bells, snow falling, Dad making a snowman. You see reindeer and Santa, lights, the moon. We play with toys, go outside in the snow, make decorations and visit my family.

Jessica Bilbo — Christmas is when you get presents, you wear pretty dresses, Santa Claus comes, go shopping. We eat special foods and get treats. We go special places, like Discovery Zone. We make brownies, we hear Rudolph's bells and we play!

Christian Manchester — Christmas makes me think of snowmen, igloos, Christmas trees. I like to hear the snow and play on it.

Noah Wilcox — Santa comes in winter and brings me presents. Sledding and skiing are fun. I hear rabbits and birds. I smell hot cocoa and look at the ornaments.

Erin Liddel — I think of snow. It's fun to play. We go shopping and visiting. We make snowmen and go ice skating. We wear snowsuits. I like to get cold and wet.

George Miller — My favorite holiday is after Santa comes, in February. February first is my birthday. I get presents. I have to hide under the couch on my birthday. I get stuck under the couch. I do this because my Mom is making my cake and she realizes that I might peek. I play with my buddies and I give out the goodies!

Callie Ernst — Christmas is my favorite holiday because we celebrate God's birthday. Mom makes Christmas cookies that smell good. We're going to give some to the policemen and the firemen because they don't get to spend Christmas with their families. I see magazines at Christmas and trees with ornaments. Sometimes we go to places with lots of fun stuff. I hear special songs like "Frosty the Snowman."

Emily Nash — Christmas is my favorite. I get toys at Christmas. I hear bells at Christmas. One time my brother saw reindeer. I see lots of green and red.

Alison Krupczak — A holiday is when you get to stay home. Christmas is my favorite holiday. Christmas is special because you get presents. I see white and green at Christmas. I see snow. We have a Christmas tree.

Emily Holt — I think of Christmas, Christmas trees, Santa Claus, reindeers. presents and toys. I wear a snowsuit so I don't get cold or wet when I play in the snow. I hear birds and singers and smell Christmas cookies.

Vanessa Plante — I think of sledding, making snowmen and ice skating. I like the winter and opening Christmas presents.

Daniel McCarthy — I like the toys I get from Santa Claus. I like sledding. I like to throw snowballs at the trees. I hear Blue Jays.

Brittany Coleman — I think of Christmas. I think of Jesus, angels, opening Christmas presents and making cookies. People come to visit and we have caroling parties. We go sledding on a big hill and I hear snow plopping off the roof and windows.

Carrie Muir — I think of Christmas and I build snowmen. I make decorations and read books. I smell Christmas trees and we go out to dinner. We visit people and other people visit us.

Kaitlin James — Christmas is my favorite winter holiday. We get presents from Santa Claus. Lots of people come to my house. My Godmother comes. Her name is Terry James, just like my Mom. They're like twins, but they're not. My Mom cooks ziti and I smell the cheese! I had strawberry pudding at Christmas and I liked it. Red and green are Christmas colors. At Christmas I heard something downstairs like Santa Claus. I heard his reindeer on the roof.

Marissa Evans — Thanksgiving is my favorite holiday. We have cookies at Thanksgiving. I see Kendall at Thanksgiving. Kendall is my new cousin. I hear special music at Thanksgiving.

Laura Friedman — My favorite holiday is Hanukkah. Instead of one day at Christmas we have eight days to get presents. We have special dinners like Thanksgiving. We sing songs and light the Menorah. We play with dreidels. I have a purple dreidel. Red and white are special colors. We have a Christmas tree too. I decorate it with stuff I make.

Tyler Goodman — Green is my favorite holiday color. I like the smell of cakes when they're baking. I like to make paper decorations and celebrate with my grandparents.

Winter house tour has something for everyone....

draws members from all over the South Shore.

Many of the homes were served by a shuttle system to ease parking woes on the narrow seaside streets. The charming gentlemen ferrying tour-goers were volunteers from the Old Goats Club and senior center.

— Over a bed a huge wreath of blue hydrangeas was trimmed with a gilt-edge ribbon in the royalest of iridescent purples. The hearth in the master bedroom was filled with a giant trailing philodendron plant with tiny white lights. —

These women just finished touring a Jerusalem Road home which is beautifully decorated for the holiday season. The seven-house winter tour drew visitors from near and far.

(Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

From its wrap-around porches and windows, visitors at an Atlantic Avenue home saw spectacular views of the ocean and Cohasset's rockbound coast.

The porch was decorated with driftwood sculptures and baskets full of old skates, as though a skating party had just returned for hot chocolate by the fireplace.

Inside was a blend of the old and new. A six-year old addition opening up the interior to its ocean views was connected to the old by arched openings, columns and an artful arrangement of furniture. While spacious, the home still provided cozy nooks and crannies for curling up with a good book.

The floral designers kept their arrangements spare enough to keep the eye drawn to the ocean vista and the unique collections of sea glass, pressed glass, china and painted tins from the Walter Baker chocolate company.

On the dining table, floral designers framed two wooden bird sculptures perched on a mirror with unique Christmas trees formed with mahogany colored leaves. The base was trimmed with sea shells and a bit of ribbon.

"I've never thought of putting the birds on the table," the owner said. "I think I'll keep them there."

Three homes on Nichols Road opened their doors.

One large shingle-style Victorian sends a welcoming message with its eight-foot Christmas tree tucked onto the wrap-around porch. The tree was trimmed with three-inch terra cotta flowerpots filled with Spanish moss and dried berries or plump little quails and handmade rope. Accents of coral highlighted the natural pine cones.

The smell of cinnamon and fresh greens greeted guests as they entered the foyer. Inside antique Santas marched up the curved stairway, across mantels and while tiny teddies in a little sleigh and more Santas peaked from kitchen counters and pantry shelves.

Tall topiaries with golden pinecones stood guard on either side of the entry way to the formal living room.

In contrast to the Country Victorian look of the porch tree, the living room tree was sashed with gold netting and crinkly white ribbon. The formal piano also held a collection of antique Santas.

The formal dining room featured a table set with rose-colored goblets and tiny packages wrapped up in gold ribbon sat on the china place settings.

Down the street, the tiny ranch house opened up to reveal its rare orchid arrangements. Inside and out, the house celebrated the joys of nature with its twig rockers, leather furniture, wooden chests and slate or terra cotta tiled floors. The home's color scheme of deep greens and earthy browns was accented by touches of golden yellow.

On a loft, large baskets and pots held dried flowers and weeds in addition to a hobby horse and an old wooden doll house. Virtually every room featured a fire place with merry blazes. The owner must be a horse lover because pictures, sculptures and mobiles featuring our equine friend greeting visitors at many turns.

Although the next house was once a barn and carriage house, the casual viewer would be hard-pressed to figure out how. From the front, the house presented plenty of curb appeal with its bow and bay windows and one charming eyebrow window. Entering through the front door, visitors were greeting by columns and the sweep of a curved stairway. A lofty tree stood in foyer, decorated with tassels and birds.

Floors of gleaming jatoba wood, otherwise known as Brazilian cherry, lay under foot and everywhere were the sights and smells of Christmas present.

The tree in the open concept family room/dining room/kitchen was trimmed with packages wrapped in white and gold starred paper, tiny berry baskets filled with dried flowers and Delft ornaments echoed the Delft tiles around the fireplace.

Several Hanukkah menorahs were also set, ready to celebrate the eight days and nights of a long-ago miracle. One menorah was a reindeer sculpture with eight round candles on his antlers.

Upstairs the master bedroom featured a sybaritic bathroom with a pavilion tent-ceiling over the whirlpool bath. Around the bath's wall was a mural with an egret and water theme while a whimsical cardinal peeped from the ceiling line.

Down the hall a child's room featured an impromptu doll's tea party. The rag dolls had invited their best friends, the teddies and the bunnies.

As you left this property, a birds at a well-visited feeder and two straw reindeers bid you adieu.

Winter house tour draws visitors from near and far..

A more contemporary home on Jerusalem Road featured a shell-trimmed wreath on the front door. Inside the owners promised guests the moon and the stars with its celestial themed kitchen-dining area. A wreath was trimmed with golden moons and stars and a[illegible] and looped around the kitchen counters.

The dining room took on a more formal air with golden candles in golden holders trailing gold ribbons along the table. A spectacular centerpiece featured roses in deep rose and palest pink.

In the living room a crazy cat tangled with the Christmas tree to amuse guests. The tree itself featured blue, gold and white ornaments and a gilt angel at its top. A chubby cherub perched on the grandfather clock and an electric village sprawled along the hearth.

The family room took visitors back to the golden days of yesteryear — all of maybe 40 years ago with its big lights in a rainbow of colors and family ornaments. Up the stairs, a della Robbia wreath graced the hallway, tiny Christmas trees stood on newel posts and poinsettias decked the marble master bath.

Over a bed a huge wreath of blue hydrangeas was trimmed with a gilt-edge ribbon in the royalest of iridescent purples. The hearth in the master bedroom was filled with a giant trailing philodendron plant with tiny white lights.

Back in Cohasset village, we visited the home of one of Cohasset's oldest families. Originally built in 1834 and reconstructed in 1891, this home contains one section insulated with sea weed.

This homeowner and her floral designers found the perfect balance between formal elegance and whimsy.

The dining room was decked out in Victorian splendor. A partridge and pear tree perched on the mantelpiece while a Victorian kerosene lamp formed the basis of the centerpiece. The table was set with antique blue and gold Coalport bone china while silver Christmas ornaments were used as miniature place setting vases.

The Christmas tree in the country kitchen features dried fruit slices, tiny gingerbread cookies and ribbon candy as ornaments while clove-studded fruit filled a footed compote.

But everybody's favorite room had to be the bathroom off the family room. A large, low soapstone sink was filled with ornamental cabbages and poinsettias and a stone bunny rabbit and a little angel perched on a table holding seasonal linens.

First or last on the tour, depending how you approached the list, was a contemporary far from the sea but still carrying on the seaside theme.

The first room visitors saw was the dining room spread for a holiday buffet. The table was full of an artful display of fruits and nuts, greens and candles and flowers. A little girl lingered by the table, eyes wide at the sight. All that was missing was a Sugar Plum fairy and a cavalier escort to transport her to dreamland.

The house also boasted an array of Hanukkah menorahs and a fat tree trimmed with gold and white snowflakes, birds and a twig angel to top it all off.

Glitter-flecked tulle and lamé fabric draped the railings and bannisters, caught up with swag arrangements of greens and lilies. As visitors hustled to catch every bit of its splendor before the clock chimed-Cinderella like, two boys tried to reclaim their bedroom.

Exiting the home, two large topiaries stood sentinel on either side of the garage.

For those who started earlier or moved more quickly, the Community Garden Club served tea at the Second Congregational Church on the common. Along with the fruit and nut Williamsburg centerpiece, tour-goers found the traditional Cohasset bouillon, tea and coffee served with holiday sweets, cookies, breads and cakes.

Hoyt leather decorated gardening gloves were offered for sale along with both editions of Cohasset's own cookbook collection, Cohasset Entertains and Cohasset Encore. All proceeds support the group's scholarship program, landscaping and maintenance of the historic Lothrop House, the Community Center, Constitution Park, Deer Hill School and landscaping and construction of the stonewall and bluestone patio at the Lightkeeper's House.

Hanna Rose Falvey, perched on her mother Sheila's shoulder, is awed by the beauty of the Goedecke home, one of seven on the Winter House Tour sponsored by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Nominations for 'Citizen of the Year' open

Cohasset Mariner

'Citizen Of The Year Award' 1993

I would like to nominate

(Please type or print neatly)

for the 1993 Cohasset Mariner
"Citizen Of The Year Award"
I believe he/she deserves this award because:

Submitted by:

Name: _____
Address: _____
Tel. No. _____

Fill out form and send to:
The Cohasset Mariner
165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield, MA 02050
NOMINATION DEADLINE Friday Jan. 14 AT 5 P.M.

Nominations are now being accepted for the first annual Cohasset Mariner "Citizen of the Year" Award.

The first in what will become an annual tradition, this award will seek to recognize an individual for outstandng service to the community or for a special achievement.

The deadline for nominations for this year's "Citizen of the Year" is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan. 14.

The Cohasset Mariner invites our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to our community.

Following the close of nominations, a selection panel will review the names submitted, and select the Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 1994.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, a clergy member, teacher or school administrator, police officer, firefighter or other municipal worker, a person in the local business community, sports figure, or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time and energy to a worthy Cohasset project or cause.

"Citizen of the Year" is not a popularity contest; the person most often nominated will not necessarily be selected for this recognition.

Please use the form printed here to make your nomination for "Citizen of the Year," including reasons why you believe this person should be considered. Nominations may be made in the form of a letter. In either case, persons submitting a name for consideration should include their own name, address, and telephone number (for verification purposes only).

Nominations can be mailed to The Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset or 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield 02050, postmarked no later than Jan. 14, 1994. They may also be dropped off our drop box in Hennessy's in the Village. Also nominations may be faxed to the Marshfield office at 617-837-4843 to be received no later than 5 p.m., Jan. 14.

Please call Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford with any questions, 1-800-649-6661.

Paper shredder needed

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan has asked for $795 to buy a paper shredded for the police department next year.

Noonan explained that because CORI (criminal offense record information) is now available to police over the computer the chance for "extremely dangerous information" getting into the trash by mistake is amplified.

The chief is also asking for $775 for a semi-automatic rifle. The department's current model is 30 years old and cannot be used safely, Noonan said. He explained that two members in the department are certified to shoot a high powered rifle which would only be used in extreme situations until the state SWAT team arrives. Noonan said Cohasset is the only police department he is aware of that does not have a rifle of this type.

Noonan also requested five more hours per week of clerical help for the department. The department currently has 20 hours of clerical help a week. Noonan said processing notices of violations for excess false alarms has increased the work load and that he writes more.

"I put out a lot more correspondence than my predecessor," he said. Noonan took over the reins as chief following former chief Joseph Kealey's retirement.

Town census coming

The town census for 1994 will be mailed to each household in early January.

The census, in compliance with state requirements, provides proof of residence to protect a citizen's voting right, veteran's bonus, housing for the elderly, and related benefits as well as providing information for selection of jurors. It is not a substitute for voter registration but failure to answer the census may result in the voter's name being removed from the voter's list.

Dog forms will be enclosed for your convenience. The licenses are due in January 1994 and valid through Dec. 31, 1994. No special numbers will be issued this year. Numbers will be issued on a first-come, first-served basis, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said.

obituaries

Thomas S. Duggan

Thomas S. Duggan, 78, of Cohasset, a former salesman and part owner of a plumbing supply firm, and former Cohasset assessor, died Dec. 9 of stomach cancer.

Mr. Duggan was salesman and an owner of the Monroe Company of Quincy for many years. After retirement, he worked five years for Cohasset Tours as a motor coach tour guide. More recently, he worked in the mailroom and supply department of the former Lincoln Trust Company, now Quincy Savings Bank, in Rockland and Quincy.

Mr. Duggan served nine years on the board of assessors in Cohasset.

Husband of the late Elinor (Hall) Duggan, he leaves three sons, Thomas S. Duggan of Norwalk, Conn., Robert H. Duggan of Houston, Texas and Christopher Duggan of Poway, Calif.; a daughter, Martha Duggan of Hingham; a brother, John Duggan of Pembroke; a sister, Mary Partridge of Rockland; four grandchildren and a friend, June Angier of Marshfield.

A memorial service was held Dec. 11 at First Parish.

Donations may be made to the First Parish, 23 North Main St., Cohasset 02025 or the Brockton Visiting Nurses Association, 1280 Belmont St., Brockton 02401.

Lorne W. Kaye

Lorne W. Kaye, 99, of Natick, formerly of Dover died suddenly Dec. 8 at Metro-West Medical Center, Natick. He was the husband of the late Jessie (Brevogell) Kaye.

Born in Boston in 1894, he was the son of the late William R. and Edith P. (Ward) Kaye.

He was an outstanding football player and track star at Dorchester High School. After high school, he joined the 26th Yankee Division National Guard.

Mr. Kaye worked for Bethleham Steel in Quincy for over 40 years as an expediter. He retired in 1959.

He received the Purple Heart which he earned during the battle of Seicheprey April 20, 1918, in Jan. 1986 at Hanscomb Air Force Base. In addition to the Purple Heart he was given the World War I Victory Medal and the Expert Marksman Badge with Machine Gun Bar. He was honorably discharged as a sergeant in 1919.

Mr. Kaye leaves a sister-in-law, Doris Payne of Needham; one nephew, Benjamin M. Greely Jr. of Medfield; and two nieces, Joan G. Miller of Alvin, Texas and Audrey P. Hutton of Southerington, Conn.

Donations in his memory may be made to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham 01701.

Kids' Corner provides safe haven in time of stress

By Louise Merritt Keogh
Special to the Mariner

The Junior League of Boston, Inc., a volunteer organization with more than 1,900 members, 174 of them living on the South Shore, has created a new project in collaboration with South Shore Hospital. It is called Kids' Corner.

Kids' Corner was developed to care for children whose family members are patients at South Shore Hospital, so adult family members can spend time together, converse with doctors or learn required patient medical care.

Junior League volunteers provide a secure and happy environment at the hospital to support the children during a tramatic period in the life of their families.

The Kids' Corner program was brought to the attention of South Shore Hospital by Sandy Baker, Brenda Davis, Bonnie Eisenbies and Martha Alderman, all Junior League of Boston members.

Priscilla Frapier, nurse manager of pediatrics, and Peg Holda, director of communications, confirmed the need for such a program at South Shore Hospital.

The hospital is rapidly expanding, having added a new wing to house maternity and emergency departments. It is in the process of expanding and remodeling most of the other hospital areas.

Intent is to serve an increased number of South Shore residents in all medical areas. As the number of patients increases so does the need for child care for relatives visiting patients and/or learning about the medical needs and care of their relatives.

Their attention to the ill relatives is lessened by their need to watch their children. Kids' Corner provides a secure environment to support the children while allowing parents time to deal with the current medical situation.

South Shore Hospital is pleased to have Kids' Corner.

Training for the project has been extensive and all the Junior League volunteers have the knowledge to deal effectively with children in crisis.

Kids' Corner opened Saturday, Oct. 9. The first day was a big success. One parent, expressing the feeling of all, said having it available relieved a tremendous amount of stress on the family during a difficult time.

Kids' Corner is open weekly on Wednesdays from 12 noon to 4 p.m. and Saturday from noon to 8 p.m.

Founded in 1907, the Junior League of Boston is a non-profit organization for young women who demonstrate an interest in and commitment to voluntarism. The league is exclusively educational and charitable, and its membership is open to women regardless of race, creed, color, religion or national origin.

Anyone who would like to know more about Kids' Corner can call one of the co-chairs: Martha Alderman at 740-2590 or Bonnie Eisenbies at 749-8863.

Two Junior League volunteers (left) Emily Malone of Cohasset and (right) Susan Burke of Hingham play ring toss with Patrick and Charlie at Kids Corner in South Shore Hospital.

Hingham VNA continues to be a home health care option

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Business has nearly doubled at the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association in the past three years. The Association provides home-care for a variety of patients in Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth and Hull. In 1990, it made 15,000 visits and in 1992, it made 27,500.

The increased business came as hospital stays grew more expensive. Medicare began to fund shorter hospital stays and relied more and more heavily on home-care institutions, like visiting nurse services.

'We've learned to do a lot of things in home-care that 10 years ago we thought you couldn't do.'

HVNA Executive Director Tish Clark

"The utilization of Medicare has gone up a lot. It means (the government is) going to try to figure out a different way to pay for it. That's also why they're sending patients home from the hospital," said Hingham Visiting Nurse Association Executive Director Tish Clark.

Medicare uses a formula to determine the length of the hospital stay. Depending on the age and health of the patient, different ailments have different allotments of hospital time.

The result is that the at-home patient needs more attention than ever.

"We've learned to do a lot of things in home-care that 10 years ago we thought you couldn't do," Clark said.

Patients now have respirators, IVs, and surgical incisions at home where they used to be in the hospital.

Compared to up to $900 per day in a hospital, VNAs are attractive to Health Management Organizations (HMOs). The Hingham VNA charges $70 to $75 per visit. Some insurance companies pay 80 percent of the cost, leaving the remainder for the patient, while HMOs are constantly negotiating for more affordable rates.

Hingham Visiting Nurse Association registered nurse Sandra Adami checks on Anna Grassie during a home visit. Cohasset is in the HVNA service area.

Clark said the trend to rely on nursing services will likely continue as the country puts together a national health-care plan. But until a plan passes through Congress, Clark said she isn't worried about its effect on her job.

"There's some very large vested interests in the health care system," she noted. "Until they change Medicare, we're not directly affected."

Although VNAs have a growing number of patients, the competition on the South Shore is intense.

"People in this area have plenty of choices," Clark said.

To help compete fairly, VNAs from Abington, Rockland, Norwell, Whitman, Milton, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater, and Bay Colony VNA of Pembroke have banded together to share one liaison at South Shore Hospital, which runs a competing VNA.

VNAs generate most of their business through hospital referrals. With a liaison in the building, the VNAs have a better chance at offering their services.

But Hingham's assets are in its newly-enlarged offices at 10 Downer Ave. Because the 75 members of HVNA's staff are required to come into the office to complete their paperwork, they are automatically in an environ with other caregivers, and able to discuss cohesive care for one patient.

"If two or three services for the same person, the nurse and the physical therapist will meet each other and find out how Mrs. S. is doing," she said.

After setting up the liaison at South Shore Hospital, the coalition of VNAs pooled their resources to train their employees in an Alzheimer's Disease treatment and early detection program.

A $40,000 grant from the Curtis Foundation of Cohasset, paid to train three staff members from each town's VNA and to help fund the care for patients who may have difficulty paying for the program with their own insurance policies.

The HVNA is still fundraising to pay off the $200,000 loan it took out from the Hingham Institution for Savings for the addition. They added 900 square feet to the second floor of the building, which was originally three buildings, now strung together.

Two foundations gave a total of $25,000 for the renovations: the Amelia Peabody Foundation, of Boston, and the Agnes M. Lindsay Trust, of Manchester, N.H. The HVNA applied to about 15 foundations for help with the new construction.

Construction efforts kept the VNAs Thrift Shop closed throughout the fall. Although it closes each summer, the shop, which is located at the back of the building, won't open again until after Jan. 1, 1994.

While the closing hasn't meant a decrease in profits for the HVNA, organizers said the institution is missed.

Golden Age passport fee

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, along with all other federal agencies which issue and honor the Golden Age Passports, have been directed to collect a one-time $10 fee beginning January 1, 1994 to cover administrative costs of managing the program. The fee was directed in recent deficit reduction legislation, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation act of 1993.

The golden age passport is issued to individuals who are 62 years of age or older. It entitles the holder to free entrance to all national parks and a 50 percent reduction in user fees at federal recreation areas.

Eligible applicants may obtain a Golden Age Passport at most Corps of Engineers' offices upon showing proof of age. The passport will continue to be issued free of charge until Jan. 1. For more information write to the US Army Corps of Engineers, 424 Trapelo Rd., Waltham, MA 02254-9149.

Senior lunch programs

Dec. 21. The seniors are to be treated to another visit from a third-grade class. This month it will be Mrs. Marion Atkinson's students. The children are always a delight, and they work diligently to prepare a program to entertain. Some of the seniors may wish to bring a card to give to them.

Dec. 28. The last Tuesday of the month the seniors celebrate with those who have had a birthday that month. A cake is donated by a Cohasset bank. This month it will be from the Rockland Trust Company.

Saturday, Dec. 18. This will be the fourth annual trip to the Christmas Pops at Symphony Hall and it is one of the most enjoyable events at this season for many. The seniors have their favorite center balcony seats again. The cost for ticket and bus is $40. Departure time from Appleseed's parking lot to be announced.

Home health care. . .

"People really miss the thrift shop and they always have a great Christmas sale, so people are upset," said Board President Sandra Baker. Currently there are 26 on the Board of Managers, most of them Hingham residents.

Meanwhile, the all-volunteer staff sits idle, wishing they could return to work.

While the VNA survives without the profits from the thrift shop, it relies more heavily on it's annual fund drive.

Currently in progress, the direct-mail campaign sends out a brochure and letter to area residents, asking for donations.

"We get an 11 percent return from over 1,000 individual donations," said Baker. Last year's fund drive raised $50,000 —the HVNA hopes to beat that this year. The chart by the police station keeps passerby informed of the progress, Baker said.

The VNA runs several volunteer programs in addition to the thrift shop, including the New Friends of the Visiting Nurse. Older residents are matched up with volunteers to visit the elderly. A social worker conducts monthly meetings with volunteers to conduct workshops on gerontology issues.

"Many of the people that are visited are not getting HVNA services," said Baker. "They just like to sit and talk — about long ago. Some get very involved and take out their New Friends for rides and errands."

Rec. dept. vacation planned

The Cohasset Recreation Department will host a five-day school vacation program at the Deer Hill School, Sohier St. from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday Dec. 27 through Friday Dec. 31 for children ages 4 through 12. The program is coordinated by Ted Carroll and staffed by summer playground counselors.

Children may register for all week, one day, or parts of any day. There are special fee rates and family discounts.

The program will consist of arts and crafts, sports and low-organized games as well as special events and activities.

Call the recreation office at 383-6791 to pre-register or at the Deer Hill School upon arrival for the program.

A tradition is born —

Remember in years past, how holiday music gave you a special feeling of Christmas joy? Those wonderful traditional holiday songs can magically bring back many warm and fond memories. Sunday, Dec. 12, the choir of the Second Congregational Church started a new Cohasset holiday tradition. The choir sponsored the first, and to be annual, Sounds of Christmas Concert. On this clear Sunday afternoon, over one hundred people attended the gala event.

The Sounds of Christmas Concert was held in the Sanctuary of the Church. The full church choir performed a wide range of music that provided enjoyment for everybody — young and young at heart. Included were such favorites as "Hark the Herald Angels," "The First Noel," "Joy in the Morning," and "O Holy Night." Because many of the songs are so well known, for a limited selection, the audience was asked to sing along with the choir. The concert was a warm and festive event for the whole family.

The church was decorated in its holiday attire. The atmosphere and acoustics of the Congregational church's sanctuary created a wonderful environment for listening and holiday spiritual pleasure. After the concert, refreshments were provided in Bates Hall and guests were welcomed to stay and enjoy the holiday spirit.

In the spirit of the holidays, the choir welcomed everyone in the community to experience this special event. This is one of their ways of saying Happy Holidays to our community. The choir feels that the concert is an event for everyone to enjoy.

Based on the success of this year's event, the choir is already talking and planning for the 1994 Sounds of Christmas Concert.

Pierson to person

Host Wigmore Pierson's guests this week will be Evelin Young and Peg D'Onorio discussing air fares, best travel destinations, how to utilize a travel agent, and tourism in Massachusetts. The second segment guest will be Joseph Lebherz, president of the Massachusetts Lighthouse Society. He will show the viewers several lighthouses in Boston Harbor and along the South Shore.

The Pierson to Person show is broadcast live each Thursday from 8 to 9 p.m. from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision on Gannett Rd. The show airs on Channel 53. The public is welcome to be part of the studio audience. For information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

SHARE pick ups set

SHARE is a non-profit organization dedicated to community service and self-help, offering good food at great savings for those who participate.

SHARE pick ups are from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Dec. 18 at the Deer Hill School. Participants may also register for the month of January at that time.

Please call John Kierce at 383-0578; the COA at 383-9112; or the Social Service League at 383-0771 for information.

SHARE participants pay $13 for the food and pledge two hours of volunteer service once a month. In return you receive 15-17 food items, good wholesome nutritious food purchased from growers and processors, with a retail value of $25-$35. SHARE has no eligibility or income requirements and is not connected in any way to any government program. Those who would like to donate SHARE packages to needy families are always welcome, please call John Kierce for details.

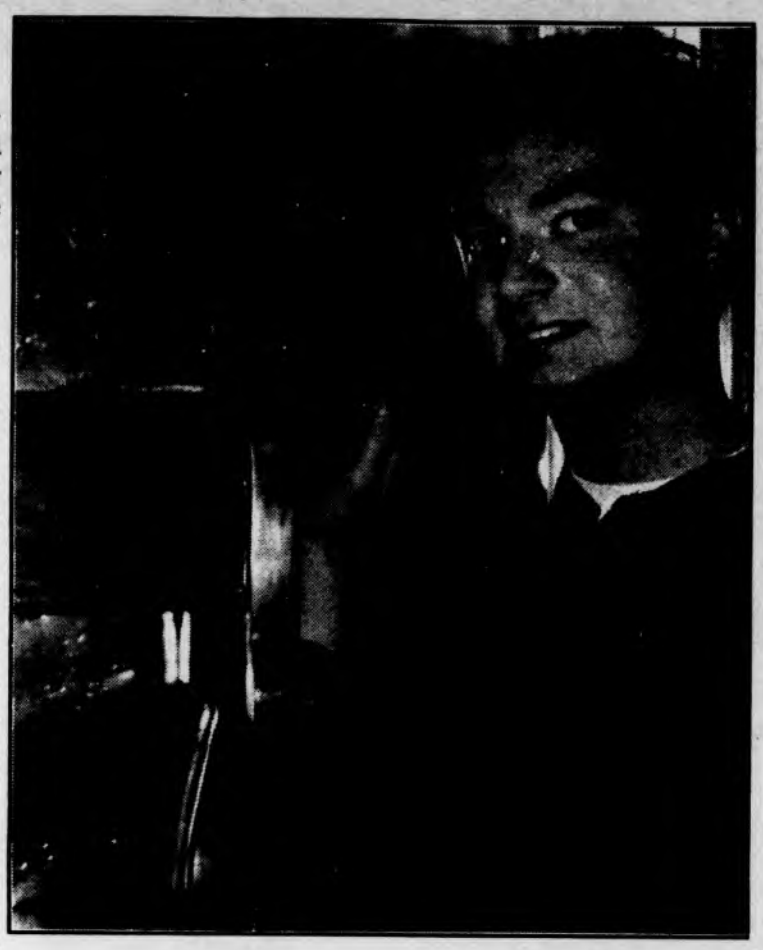
school notebook

Jeremy Begley



I nominate Jeremy Begley for the November Student of the Month. Jeremy has been a library student aide for two years. This year he helps out every other day. He is a reliable and dependable shelver, has done clerical work, and has typed the "New Book" lists. Jeremy is someone I can always count on to do any task because he is careful, methodical, and does the work cheerfully. Jeremy, who is always punctual and is rarely absent, is an asset to the Library, and the entire school benefits from his efforts.

— student of the month —

— Mrs. McFadd

I nominate Jeremy Begley for November Student of the Month. His dedication, enthusiasm, and craftsmanship prompt me to recognize Jeremy for his achievements in and out of the wood shop. Jeremy is always eager to work on whatever project he is doing, either for himself or in an effort to assist me in class. Over the years he has completed numerous projects, including a Butcher's table, an end table, a goose planter, and a blanket chest to name a few. However, it is his latest creation, a Queen Anne Sofa Table, that is worthy of recognition on its own. Jeremy is an inspiration for all students because if his work habits and his achievements.

— Mr. Antolini

I nominate Jeremy Begley as November Student of the Month. Jeremy has such a positive attitude and openness to his education. His attendance is perfect, he is punctual and brings a warmth to class regardless of the time of day or the weather. For this Jeremy was voted the "warmest personality" by his classmates. Jeremy is selfless and can be counted on as the first to offer assistance to fellow students and teachers. He is an example for others to follow, in his attitude, character, dedication and achievements.

— Tom Sippel

Early dismissal news

The Joseph Osgood faculty used the Dec. 9 early release day to begin the budget process for 1994-5 school year. During this time, teachers reviewed catalogs, previewed new materials, met as a faculty, and then by grade level, to determine appropriate requests for the next school year. These budget meetings are important in coordinating school resources in order to keep supply and book requests to a minimum.

The teachers at the Deer Hill School conducted parent conferences on Thursday, Dec. 9. These conferences are held twice yearly in order to discuss a child's progress with his/her parent. The times for these meetings are scheduled in advance by the homeroom teacher.

The jr./sr. high school faculties used this release day to work on their professional development goals. This process will be ongoing throughout the year, culminating in individual research projects presented to the whole faculty in May. This innovative approach to In-Service time has teachers pursuing a wide variety of topics on early release days.

The high school has a new math lab. In order to make the best use of this state of the art equipment, several teachers are using this early release time to explore and receive training in the use of this lab. For example, Paul Hogan, a high school math teacher, is investigating new software which will network the computer lab for school wide classroom use. Betty Beatson, a seventh grade math teacher, and Maura Devin, an eighth grade math teacher, are coordinating the use of the lab software with their respective curriculums.

Watch this space for further updates!

Hockey team improves despite loss

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

If the Skippers' were trying to get their '93-94 season off on the right step, well they missed the stairs.

In their first game, anyway.

Pitted against Marshfield in a preseason scrimmage, Cohasset was battered every which way to the tune of a 10-4 thumping by the Rams.

The Skippers, though, moved up a notch in Saturday's two-period game against Blue Hills. Despite a 2-1 loss, Cohasset corrected several mistakes they made against Marshfield in the tight game against Blue Hills at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena.

This is the time of the season where the players are still trying to feel their way on the ice after fall sports have ended, and that was evident against Blue Hills. Passes aren't as crisp as they are later in the season. Reflexes are rusty and the players are more apt to play the puck rather than the man.

Not that any coach in the arena expected their team to play as if the Stanley Cub, which sat in all its glory two rooms away, was at stake. But that was the whole idea of the 20-team jamboree; to give a crop of local high schools the chance to work out the kinks and cobwebs, prior to the start of their league schedules.

Still, the Skippers looked like a different team that was blitzed by Marshfield.

"I saw a lot of improvement, but we still have a long way to go," said head coach Dennis Walsh. "We handled the puck better and we skated better against Blue Hills.

"We'll be there. I have some good guys helping me coach and we'll be revved up."

Cohasset appeared "revved up" from the start as they wasted no time taking the early lead.

Nevin Bunstein made a heads-up play intercepting a Blue Hills pass in their zone and immediately shoveled it off to Chris McKenna, who positioned in front of Blue Hills' goaltender Ed Gay. McKenna took the pass and slid it under Gay at 10:57.

Defensemen Anthony Wigmore and co-captain Charlie Endris were able to contain Blue Hills on their power play, limiting the Mayflower League squad to two shots. But the Skippers were treated the same way when they had a man advantage and the chance to break the game open.

Gay and Cohasset goaltender Kevin McKenna looked to be in mid-season form as both came up with several big saves from in close.

Bunstein almost had a goal to add to his assist, but Gay flashed his pad out to stop his shot from five-feet out.

Grapplers seeking own identity

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The statistic that leaps out at you when analyzing Cohasset High's wrestling squad of a year ago is that, combined, its eight graduated seniors won 75-percent of their matches.

Head coach Torin Sweeney will start five seniors this year, but admits "even with that, it's going to be an inexperienced team.

"We're certainly not going to match what we did the last two years."

Maybe not, but the Skippers do have a crop of younger wrestlers beyond the five seniors and two juniors. That group will have to step up and avoid injuries if Cohasset hopes to put together a solid winter on the mats.

What Sweeney has seen so far in this young season is what the Skippers lack in experience and depth they more than make up in desire.

"They're willing to work hard and start their own identity," he said. "It remains to be seen what characteristic they will take on."

Cohasset does return one of its big three from last year in All-Scholastic Ryan Freeman. Second in the state last year, Freeman rounded out the All-Scholastic trio with Nate Fiore and Ray Jones. Sweeney expects his top wrestler to compete in either the 119- or 125-pound weight division.

Sweeney also has a solid group of seniors in Brandon DeVoe (145 pounds), Scott Theriault (152 or 160 pounds), Chris Stevens (130 pounds) and Brian Duffy (119 pounds).

Dan Silvia (171 pounds) is the one other junior on the team other than Freeman.

Cohasset did well in its scrimmage against Quincy and was scheduled to for another practice meet on Dec. 15, against Division 1 Weymouth.

"They were experienced," Sweeney said, comparing Quincy to the Skippers in the scrimmage. "I thought we did well, but it's going to be a learning year."

If the season goes smoothly and his athletes wrestle up to their potential, while at the same time avoiding major injuries, Sweeney believes the Skippers can finish at the .500 mark with their small squad.

"Hopefully it'll be a real stable year," he said. "A .500 record would be respectable with the size of our team.

"The seniors should do well and Ryan should do well. It also should be fun to see how the seventh- and eighth-graders develop. What they lack in experience they make up in heart."

Sweeney and fans alike will be able to take a good hard look at the Skippers in Saturday's Third Annual Christmas Tourney at the high school. The tournament will feature 11 teams from around the South Shore.

The Abington-Rockland Mariner received a disturbing Sound Off message in last week's issue from a caller who identified himself as a former Green Wave football player.

He said the team "stinks," and that "they're just as bad as they've always been."

The caller obviously didn't get a look at this season's team, which rebounded from a miserable 0-10 season in '92, to finish with a winning record. That's not a bad start in my book.

As for his comment stating the Mariner has been making it "sound all rosy how Abington has a great team," that's simply not the truth. Head coach Jim Kelliher was often quoted as to where the team's deficiencies were, as well as its strong points.

Neither Kelliher nor the Mariner said the Green Wave was a great team, but it is a squad that rebounded from a tough season to give its fans something to really cheer about this year. And the potential is there for another solid season in '94.

Because of the number of varsity teams Dave and I cover during the season, it's impossible for us to follow the JV squads and the progression of their seasons.

But that doesn't mean the teams can't find their results between the pages of the Mariner sports pages on a weekly basis.

The Extra Points crew would like to see JV coaches, parents or even players submit a weekly article to the paper — every two weeks if you'd rather. We put out the same request to the youth coaches and the response has been excellent, particularly in Hanover, Hingham and Marshfield.

Because of space availability, the article may not appear the week it is submitted, but it is saved on the sports disk and will be published.

The sports in the Mariners jump from youth to varsity. There is a gap in between and it's loaded with talented athletes who deserve to see their accomplishments in black and white. But we do need your help. These are the varsity athletes of the future.

My "game plan" for the winter is to get in touch with as many varsity coaches as possible from Abington, Rockland, Cohasset, Hanover and Randolph during the day on Sundays. I usually stop calling around 6 p.m., so as not to bother the coaches in the evening.

Those coaches I haven't caught up with can contact me at the Marshfield office at 1-800-649-6661 on Monday and Tuesday. It is important Hanover, Abington, Rockland and Holbrook coaches call between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., on Mondays to guarantee a write-up on their team's results because the papers go to press the next day.

Cohasset and Randolph coaches should call between the same hours on Tuesday for the same reason.

I plan to cover games on Monday and Tuesday nights, rotating from town to Sharks take two more

By Bob Hatch
Special to the Mariner

After a recent disappointing but nonetheless exciting tie against Assabet Valley in a game that saw the Sharks trailing by two goals with less than two minutes to play, Brian Boyle of Hingham and Kenny Roche each scored to earn the tie, the Sharks were determined to get back to their winning ways.

The first game of the weekend was against the always-tough St. Moritz Devils at UMass- Boston. The Sharks did a good job controlling the game with the forwards winning the battles in the corners and the Shark defensemen winning the races for the loose puck in the neutral zone.

It was late in the first period however before Hingham's Pat Devine put the Sharks on the board with help from Dave Saggese of Hingham, and a nice pass from Scotty Sparks at the point. Roach got the first of his three goals after Cohasset's Brian Lewis and Hingham's Scotty McGinn outmuscled the Devil defenders. Kenny made it 3-0 after Hanover's Chris Coady and Nick Dunn worked the puck out to Roche at the point. Kenny walked in and fired a wrist shot that found the top corner. Roche completed the hat trick after Garret Daigler of Hingham knocked a St. Moritz forward off the puck with a big hit behind his own net. Kenny snagged the loose puck and rushed it all the way for the score. The Sharks' blue Line finished the scoring when Coady tipped in Nick Dunn's pass from the left-wing corner. Marshfield's Bobby Noonan set the play up with a solid bodycheck along the boards and then passed to Dunn. Gabe Winer of Stoughton and John Lynch of Hingham split the goaltending duties and both were fabulous. Both boys turned away a number of tough shots in the 5-1 win.

The Minuteman Flames visited Pilgrim Arena for a very big game the following day. The Flames have been hot on the Sharks' heels for first place all season, so this was a must win. Both teams were flying, great skating, passing and stick-handling. Greg Osborne of Stoughton looked great along with linemates Brian Lewis of Cohasset and McGinn. They worked hard and created some great scoring opportunities but just couldn't get the puck to bounce their way. Same was true for the Sharks' red line. Boyle, Saggese and Devine had great individual efforts and played very well, but as a line couldn't put the puck past a very good Flames' goaltender. All of this could have been a problem were it not for the Sharks' blue line of Dunn, Coady and Noonan. This was their game as they accounted for all the Shark goals. Dunn got the first goal off a nice pass from Coady. Noonan set up the second goal with some great work in the corner. Nick took the loose puck and spotted Chris out front. Chris took the pass, and made a nice move to his backhand for the score. Noonan got the Sharks' third and final goal while the team was in a line change. Dunn and Boyle got the assists. This game featured some great work by the Sharks' defensemen. Sparks got caught alone on a three-on-one break when the Sharks were charging up. Scotty broke up the play without a shot on goal. Matt Bourassa and Garret Daigler of Hingham made some big plays and each had a couple of big hits. But the nastiest hit of the game was by Hanover's Ryan Hatch who dished out an open-ice hip check at the Shark blue line. It forced the Flames off sides and ended a potential threat. Johnny Lynch of Hingham was in net for the Sharks and had another spectacular game in the Sharks' 3-1 win.

Hockey team improves

McKenna made two huge saves with time running out in the first period, the first on Mike Manning, who stole the puck and maneuvered his way through the Cohasset defense. McKenna did a good job coming out of the net and cutting down the angle.

He then stopped a sharp wrist shot in the final 10 seconds of the period, his sixth save after the first 15 minutes of play.

Cohasset came out sluggish in the second and Blue Hills wasted no time in taking advantage of the Skippers' lethargy.

Frank Johnston got his stick on the puck in a scramble in front of a screened McKenna and slapped it between his legs just nine seconds after the opening face off.

"I can't fault him for that," Walsh said of the shot that got past McKenna. "He made some nice plays.

Walsh, though, soon realized the goal revitalized the Blue Hills offense and they became more than they had been in the first period.

"In the first period we played pretty well," Walsh said. "I think we kind of let them back in the game on that first goal. One goal can change a game."

Or at least give a struggling squad momentum to work with.

For the first six minutes of the period. Cohasset was unable to mount any serious penetration inside the Blue Hills blue line. When they did make their way in the Blue Hills defense was there to break-up the passes, while beating the Skippers to the puck in the corners.

Cohasset wasn't through yet however as Endris was robbed by Gay when he couldn't find the handle on a rebound with 7:30 to play.

Josh Macomber put the game away for good on a Blue Hills power play with 2:46 left, poking a centering pass by McKenna.

The Skippers challenged a few more times, but Gay turned away Cohasset's shots handily.

Webelos sweep district swim competition

By Andy Krueger
Special to the Mariner

Saturday, Dec. 11, Pack 38 Webelos scouts overwhelmed their competition when they made nearly a clean sweep of the events in the annual Cranberry Harbors District Webelos Swim Meet at Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

Out of six events, including various relay and individual races, nine fourth and fifth grade boys from Pack 38 swam their way to first place in three and earned a second and a third place in two. The participants were Andy Dennis, David DeVito, Zack Jones, Ben Kinch, David Krueger, Justin Langham, Will McArthur, Matt Ogrodnik and Michael Sanchez.

Kevin DeVito, the sixth grade Webelos Den Chief, turned in an outstanding performance in the Den Chief Freestyle. Kevin was out of the pool high-fiving his teammates before the second finisher had completed his race.

Overall, the Pack 38 scouts amassed nearly double the number of total points as did second-place Pack 104 from Pembroke. Hearty congratulations to all of our Webelos "Aquanauts" for a job well done! They will get a chance to show off their huge trophy at a future pack meeting after its engraving has been completed.

town," would be the best move to make in preserving the squad.

"I think that's a lot more viable and makes more sense," he said. "Its got nothing to do with wins or loses."

The Skippers haven't been in the SSL for four years since the program was started up again after a one-year hiatus in 1990.

In the Pilgrim Conference meeting held earlier, Rockland High's bid for an exemption in enrollment size so the football team could move from the Atlantic Coast League back to the SSL was handily defeated, 23-4. Rockland is the smallest school in the ACL, but won the Division 3A Super Bowl in '92.

town. A weekend hockey game rotation is also part of the plan.

The Stanley Cup was on display this weekend at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena for anyone who wanted to have his photo taken next to the NHL's top prize. The money is going to the Norwell High hockey program, which hopes to graduate from the ranks of a club team and enter the South Shore League for the '94-95 season.

When a Norwell player and me took a good look at the Cup, we figured there was enough room on it for 11 more inscriptions of NHL champions. The player explained to me that the Cup is made up of different pieces. When one level is filled, another is added to give room for more championship squads.

That bit of insight pretty much eliminated my idea of adding an inscription-covered ladle, perfect for the punch bowel at the top of the famed award, not to mention filling up cups for the celebration party after the deciding game.

Chasing the stars

Card Corner

By Chris Yourell
Special to the Mariner

Insert or "chase" cards, have taken the hobby by storm. An insert card is a unique card randomly placed in packages of cards. The odds of "pulling" one can range anywhere from one card per pack (such as Topps Gold cards), to one in every 2,000 packs (such as this year's Alexandre Daigle autographed card found in Score Pinnacle).

Inserts most often feature major stars and rookies who are already the most sought after cards in the regularly produced sets. Very often these cards have special features, making them more attractive, such as "foil-stamping" or holographic features. In the past several years, card companies have even had major stars autograph their own cards, which are then randomly placed in packs and distributed.

What most attracts collectors to insert cards, however, is not necessarily the attractiveness or aesthetic value of the card, but its relative scarcity. Roughly translated, the more difficult a card is to obtain, the more the average collector will desire it. Consequently, the more valuable the card becomes.

Case in point is this year's Manon Rheaume (the first female professional hockey player) autographed card by Classic Games. Rheaume signed 1,550 cards and each was numbered sequentially. These cards were then "inserted" into packs at the Classic factory. Keeping in mind that over half a million packs of Classic hockey cards were distributed to the public, you can imagine the odds of finding one of these cards in a pack bought at your local variety store. The overwhelming popularity of Rheaume, coupled with the very limited availability of this particular card, has driven its value up to nearly $150.

Chase cards are more popular with collectors. This is reflected by the fact there is no single set currently in production that does not feature some type of subset. The downside to this phenomena is that collectors pay less and less attention to the original sets (and I, too, am guilty of this indiscretion) that the insert cards are pulled from. Many collectors will open a pack of cards, and if an insert card is not found, will immediately place the cards into a storage box never to be seen again. To drive home the point of exactly how much of a craze this has become, of the 56 basketball cards I displayed in my showcase last weekend (and I attempt to display the hottest cards that collectors are looking for) 42 were inserts. Just food for thought...how soon will it be before subsets have subsets?

• What's hot — Upper Deck SP baseball — very attractive cards and supplies are drying up. $55 a box is a great deal.

• What's not — Topps Premier Hockey — just too much of it on the market. Don't pay more than $19 a box.

• What's new — Score and Donruss 1994 Baseball. Both sets now featuring one gold card per pack.

• Pull of the Week — Houston Rockets Super Team from Topps Stadium Club Basketball. The Rockets are on fire and so is this card — a $60 value!

Happy hunting!

Olympic Dreamin': Hopefuls Crowd Wildcat NORAMS

PINKHAM NOTCH, N.H. - Is there a wildcard ticket to the Lilehammer Olympics at Wildcat this month?

Top national and international skiers will compete at the prestigious North American Trophy Series (NORAMS) at Wildcat on Dec. 20 and 21. The NORAMS event has an Olympic luster because of the addition of the Super G competition, an amalgam of downhill and slalom racing. Potential Olympians must compete successfully at a Super G event as part of the process and the NORAMS this year provides a chance.

Ski racers will be following in the tracks of some great USA ski personalities, including Carroll Reed and Olympians Penny Pitou, Brooks Dodge, George Macomber, Tyler and Terry Palmer, Abbi Fisher, David Currier and Billy Kidd as they challenge the 2100-vertical foot, 60-year old Wildcat Trail. The trail has been revised and approved by the International Skiing Federation which oversees Olympic skiing.

The NORAMS are among the most prestigious and important competitions on the North American ski circuit. The series parallels the Europe Cup and tracks a race rating just below that of a World Cup competition.

Wildcat officials see the NORAMS as a great spectator event. "This is a chance to get a real preview of Olympic quality competitions on a world-class course" said Paul Lodi, director of marketing at Wildcat. Ann Frost, director of racing at the Wildcat Ski Club, notes that an expanded field of racers will be competing at Wildcat in anticipation of the World Cup finals, slated to be held in the U.S. in 1994/ And, she notes, there's always the wildcard potential for a stellar performer at Wildcat to be sent to the Olympics in Lilehammer, Norway in February.

The NORAMS events include the Super G (Dec. 20) and the Giant Slalom (Dec. 21), including the first-ever NORAMS Super G. Judged to be both a "tough test" and a "World Cup caliber course" by 1992 competitors and the U.S. Ski Team coaches, the Wildcat trail should bring out the best of the competitors, including the U.S. Ski Team members, top New England racers and international competitors.

Wildcat has further information about the event at (603) 466-3326.

public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 93P2932E1

Estate of ROBERT B. JAMES late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that MARCIA C. CARTHAUS of EDINA in the State of MINNESOTA and PHILIP M. JAMES of NORTH HAVEN in the State of CONNECTICUT be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on January 19, 1994.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this eighth day of December, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-three.

Somebody send Jacksons & media to their room

Henshaw

Tom Henshaw

I think if I had my druthers I'd send the whole Jackson family to their room.

And I'd send the media, too, if they promised to leave their cameras, recorders and notebooks behind and not stay too long.

It seems like I can't look at Page 2D in USA Today without reading about some new kid who says he was molested by Michael.

With all the molesting he's supposed to have been doing it's a wonder he has had time to go 'round the world on tours called "Dangerous!" and "Victory!"

Ah, "Victory!" That was the one which cost Chuck Sullivan his shirt and his family their stadium (né Schaffer, now Foxboro) and their football team, the Patriots.

Just think, if Michael had been a little busier molesting at the time, a Sullivan, not an Orthwein, might be leading the Patriots to yet another No. 1 selection in the NFL draft..

But I digress . . .

The latest word we had from the Jackson front came from Michael's sister, LaToya, who called a news conference in Tel Aviv, Israel, to announce that she knew Michael was sleeping with little boys all along.

As if the Israelis didn't have enough trouble with the PLO; now, another and maybe worse scourge, the Jacksons.

Mother Jackson, of course, stood up for Michael and, for good measure, added a scathing denunciation of LaToya's "so-called husband," Jack Gordon.

This was an apparent reference to LaToya's disclosure that she and Jack have been unable to know each other in the Biblical sense because her father, Joe Jackson, molested her when she was a youngster.

As you probably have guessed by now, this is not Wally and the Beaver talking about Ward and June.

We haven't heard anything from Michael's other sister, Janet, since her Rolling Stone posters were forcibly removed from Roxbury because they showed her wearing nothing north of the navel but her boy friend's hands.

The sad part of it all is that, except for a civil suit filed by the father of an unidentified teenaged boy, the case against Michael Jackson has been nothing more than the kind of talk that used to be written on men's room walls.

You know, like "Trixie does it!"

There's even talk about the guy who filed the civil suit — that he was in a bitter custody dispute with his estranged wife who, he charges, permitted their boy to sleep over at Michael's house.

And that Michael turned down his request for $20 million in financial backing to make a movie just before he filed the suit.

Could it be that . . . ? Aw, no, it couldn't be. Not when Michael Jackson is Michael Jackson and his accuser is . . . say, what is his name, anyway?

Even Michael's defenders haven't been providing a hell of a lot of defense.

Elizabeth Taylor, leaving her seventh (or is it eighth?) husband behind to keep the home hearth warm, flew halfway around the world to Singapore to console Michael when the "story" broke and came back to talk about it on "A Current Affair," the National Inquirer of the electronic word.

An 11-year-old friend from Australia, Brett Barnes, told of sleeping in the same bed with Michael and nothing happened.

"I was on one side of the bed and he was on the other," said Brett. "It was a big bed."

By this time in l'affaire Jackson, no one really cared how big the bed was.

"I love Michael very dearly," said sister LaToya, "but I feel even more sorry for these children because they don't have a life anymore."

Like I say, the Jacksons make the Bundys look like Ozzie and Harriet.

Musings

By John H. Cutler

"I do not know the formula for success but I do know the formula for failure — resting on your laurels." Don Hewitt, executive producer of "60 Minutes."

Only three things in life are certain: death, taxes and uncertainty.

A celebrity is a person who works hard to become well known, then wears dark glasses so he won't be recognized.

A big lie is more plausible than truth, said Ernest Hemingway. And as you know, a half truth is a whole lie.

It was one of Sean O'Casey's characters who said, "He's the illegitimate son of an illegitimate son of a Mexican Corporal." Actually there are no illegitimate children. There are illegitimate parents.

Why starve to death just so you can live a little longer?

"Total abstinence is easier than perfect moderation." — St. Augustine.

There is one time when a woman wishes she were a year older — when she's expecting a baby.

My only objection to small dinner parties is the persons I sometimes have to sit between.

Soon after I read Cleveland Amory's book, Who Killed Society? I met the author at the Harvard Club of New York.

"You know who killed society," I said. "You did." He was not amused.

I wouldn't want a homogeneous society, I think the cream should rise to the top.

You judge an editor not by the number of friends he has, but by the calibre of his enemies.

When his wife said, "Cocktails make me dizzy," he said, "That's why I like them." The speaker was the very proper George Lyman Kittredge of Harvard.

"Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle that fits them all." — Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr.

People with the least to say, say it too much.

I once heard a Harvard professor say: "He not only doesn't know anything — he doesn't even suspect anything."

Better to force by persuasion than persuade by force.

If only we could kite checks with no strings attached.

Gals never hate a man enough to return his diamonds.

Britain's reigning monarch belongs to the House of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, a German name, changed to Windsor, during WWI.

Open Kitchen

By Erik Sherman

Depending on your outlook, it is either very late at night or very early in the morning and I cannot sleep. I try counting sheep, the shopping days before Christmas, or the number of infomercials for a home business conference that is practically guaranteed to make me wealthy beyond the dreams of avarice.

Whether it is too much on my mind or too little between my ears, drowsiness is far off so I decide to do some work. Of course a body burns additional energy with the extra hours of wakefulness and the acute mental activity, so it is time for a trip to the refrigerator.

The shelves are full, forcing a real decision from too many options; it is easy enough to make up your mind when you have no choice. On the top shelf we have some leftover soup, but that will not do. The bottom shelf has a raw butternut squash requiring cooking and cleaning.

No, what I need is on the middle shelf in a red Tupperware container with a grey lid balanced above a covered pot. That is where to find the turkey.

A little turkey on a plate, some cold stuffing and cranberry sauce, and I am set. Heated gravy would be a fine finish, but it is hidden in an unmarked container that needs unearthing and I am, as my wife declares, useless in such matters.

Turkey is an ideal December late night snack for two reasons. The first reason is a substance in turkey that actually helps induce sleep, providing a happily rational reason for Thanksgiving post-prandial napping. If you are chided by a spouse for drifting off at Aunt Elma's and not helping with the dishes, say that you are the helpless puppet of nature.

The second reason for the choice of turkey is that, after Thanksgiving, you must do anything in your power to use the leftovers.

Leftovers are as much a part of the time between Thanksgiving and the New Year as are holiday dinners. It is difficult to purchase just enough food so that everyone has the seconds, thirds, and fourths that they may want. In our household, we have found careful planning and a variety of courses leaves us with only enough to feed an average high school football team for a week.

Try as we may, some Puritan strain inherited by every generation of American forbids throwing away the leftovers. It does not matter how many meals are packed in the larder: pot pies, sandwiches, stir fries — all must be consumed. The true challenge is not in the packaging and the re-packaging, but in the ingestion.

My greatest challenge with leftovers was after an extensive Christmas party we held last year. The guests numbered 50 adults and 15 children. We wanted enough food for all, and so purchased two turkeys. If only we had known about the third turkey I would receive from work.

We worked off long, detailed lists in my daily planner and cooked and baked for three weeks, packing everything into our freezer. At that, one might question our sanity as the party was a pot luck.

After running about like two crazed people and ushering the last of the guests out the door, we had enough food remaining for an additional party. We congratulated ourselves on the good fortune of having so many meals prepared in advance and got down to business. Six months later there were still aluminum-wrapped packets of turkey in the freezer.

We eventually threw away the final bundles, but now when we pass Plymouth Rock, I experience psychic discomfort. My Puritan ancestors must disapprove of such flagrant waste.

One variation on leftovers we did not try in those six months is a type of shepard's pie using stuffing as the top layer instead of mashed potatoes.

STUFFED SHEPERD'S PIE

1 1/2 cups mashed or sliced sweet potatoes
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon oil
1/4 cup diced celery
1/4 cup chopped onions
1/2 cup chopped turkey
salt and pepper
1 1/2 cups stuffing
1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Line the bottom of a two-quart baking dish first with the sweet potatoes.

Scald the milk in a small saucepan. In another saucepan over a medium heat, melt the butter and mix in the flour. When the foam begins to subside and the mixture is only slightly colored, add the milk all at once while continuously whisking until smooth. Add the nutmeg. Cook for two minutes and set this white sauce aside.

Heat the oil in a skillet; add the celery, carrots, and onions. Cook until tender. Add the turkey, cook for one minute, then add salt and pepper to taste.

Combine the white sauce and the turkey and vegetable mixture and place in the baking dish, making a second layer. Place the stuffing in the dish for a third layer. Cover and bake for 15 minutes. Remove cover and continue baking for another 15 minutes. Top with grated cheese and return to oven untii cheese melts.

TIPS FOR A TREK

I have been known to have turkey, mashed potatoes, stuffing, and gravy for breakfast on the day after Thanksgiving. This is, however, not my accustomed morning meal.

On the weekends, my wife and I, daughter in tow, enjoy venturing out for breakfast. For some obscure reason, breakfast seems a difficult meal for restaurants to master. To my taste, the ideal breakfast should be plentiful, inexpensive, and relaxed.

We were quite happy to find a terrific breakfast nook on the water. The Bay Club sits on Hingham harbor with a broad water view. The food is decent, the prices are aggressively reasonable, and the service is attentive.

DEAR SAINT JUDE Thank you for your powerful intercession in having our prayers answered. We want your name known and to be invoked. Paul & Barbara R.

IN THANKSGIVING to Saint Jude. Thank you for prayers answered. X 2 D. B. W.

PRAYER OF APPLICATION
To The Holy Spirit-Holy Spirit, You who solve all problems, Who light all roads so that I can attain my goal, You who give me the divine gift to forgive & forget all evil against me and who in all instances of my life are with me, I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things and to confirm once again that I never want to be separated from You, even in spite of all material illusion. I wish to be with you in enternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. Repeat this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the favor will be granted even though it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after the favor is granted without mentioning the favor. P. A. R.

Roast beef heist at S&S

A six-foot white man allegedly made off with about 1/2 dozen roasts of beef hidden under his dark-colored ski parka from the Super Stop & Shop at about 2:26 p.m. Saturday (Dec. 18), police said.

Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said after observing the suspect conceal the meat under his jacket, the manager at Stop & Shop followed the man into the parking lot where he tried to confront the suspect. After asking if he could speak with the suspect, the man ran towards his car and fled in a beaten up black station wagon with a bumper sticker saying "one day at a time," police said.

While the suspect was fleeing he tried to run the manager down three separate times actually hitting the victim's right hand with the side mirror of the vehicle before driving out of the parking lot and heading north on Rte. 3A, Jackson said.

A description of the motor vehicle was given to other towns and the plate number has come back as stolen in May from Weymouth, Jackson said.

The Stop & Shop employee sustained minor swelling and redness to his right hand.

Assaulting a PO charged

Cohasset police charged Joseph A. McGough, 101 Turner Rd., Scituate with assault and battery on a police officer and being a disorderly person at about 4:50 p.m. Dec. 15.

McGough allegedly assaulted Officer David Cogill while Cogill was arresting McGough on a Scituate warrant. Police said Cogill found McGough at Cushing Plaza following reports from Scituate police that they had pursued McGough on foot in North Scituate.

McGough, 33, was arraigned on the charges in Hingham District Court, Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

Roger W. Lincoln, shown here with his wife Gretchen, was officially sworn in as the town's fire chief during a special ceremony during the selectmen's meeting Monday. Lincoln, who replaces former chief John R. Nadeau, took over the job about three months ago. About a dozen friends and family members of Lincoln crowded into the selectmen's office for the swearing in.

Fire hydrant struck

In addition to numerous fender benders due to Sunday's snow storm, in a hit-and-run accident a vehicle struck and knocked over a fire hydrant sending water shooting into the air in the vicinity of 75 Pleasant St. at about 3:08 p.m., Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

Water Dept. Supt. Duncan McCormack said that between being notified about the accident, bringing the crews in, and finding the gate covers which were buried in the snow — shutting the water off took about three hours.

McCormack said that a tree, which was uphill from the hydrant break, fell over onto some high tension wires at about the same time as the accident exacerbating the problem.

"It was an interesting evening due to extenuating circumstances," McCormack said.

Because the accident was a hit and run, the water department will have to pay for the a new hydrant, McCormack said. He explained that the driver's insurance company would normally pay.

McCormack said the damaged hydrant was the old type which doesn't shut the water off when hit.

Jackson said police hope the operator of the vehicle will feel a "pang of guilt" and come forward and fill out an accident report.

"If the person comes forward on their own then they won't be cited for leaving the scene," Jackson said. "But if we find out on our own, then they will."

Cremation urn washes up

At about 9:30 a.m., Dec. 17 highway department workers who were cleaning up storm debris in Sandy Cove discovered a burial urn that had apparently washed up, police said.

The green marble urn containing cremated remains is being held at a local funeral home, Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

He said that every effort will be made to notify the deceased's next of kin but so far police efforts have been fruitless.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan explained that normally burials at sea are registered but this one was not in the register, he said. Police have no idea how far the urn may have travelled.

"It could have come from anywhere," Noonan said.

The name of the deceased is on a brass plaque on the urn's cover along with the date July 4, 1992 and the following inscription:

"Born by the sea, he loved so well,
Travelled all seven, some thru hell.
Adventure, danger, beauty, peace
Rest my Brother, until time will cease."

Noonan said this is the first time he can recall that a burial urn washed up on shore.

The marble urn which measures about 10 x 8 ins. is rounded at the corners from being tossed about in the sea.

Noonan said if the next of kin cannot be found, the deceased will be reinterred at sea.

Street lights level funded

Selectmen will ask that the $52,000 budget for street lights and traffic lights be level funded in FY'95 which starts July 1.

Electricity for street lights alone costs about $4,000 a month, Executive Secretary Gregory A. Doyon said.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

SOME BENEFITS OF AGE

QUESTION: What are the advantages of purchasing an older home?

ANSWER: You'll often get more house for your dollar. For one thing, there are more old houses than new ones. For every new house that will go up this year, there are some 45 existing homes already on the market.

Many older homes offer more abundant space – a special attraction if you have a large family, but a limited budget. Most older homes are in well-established, well-developed neighborhoods. There will be no waiting for streets to be paved, sewers to be connected or schools to be built. All that is going to grace the neighborhood is already there..

Come to Cohasset's Celebrate '94

The Cohasset Community Center is planning its own version of first night called "Celebrate '94" New Year's Eve from 5 to 10 p.m.

The Brown Bag Opera will be performing twice. At 5:[illegible]m. they will present "Hansel and Gretel," perfect for young children and complete with a witch and gingerbread that unfolds before them. At 6:30 p.m. they will perform Bizet's "Carmen," a popular opera geared for all ages.

New this year will be Chuck Norris and his blues band. This saxaphone quartet is a local favorite at the Yard Rock Cafe and the Four Winds, playing rock, blues and jazz.

Returning this year are the Baroque Trio, La Sonnerie, Smiling Faces Productions Crew of Magicians, Jugglers and their amazing confetti firework display. Rick Shea's Bank, Carolyn Curtis' Jazz Quartet and Dance Visions dance troupe. There will also be clowns, face painters, hay rides and a food court.

Buttons are on sale at the center for $10 and allows entry to all events. Children under 5 are free. Buttons will be needed to board the shuttle busses which will run continually from St. Anthony's, the Music Circus, and Osgood School parking lots from 5 to 10 p.m.

Schedule of the events will be available at 3 Depot Court (formerly the Teen Depot) across the street from The Community Center.

All food and novelty items are sold for fund-raising by local non-profit groups. All events take place on or in buildings around the common. Join the fun. Call the center at 383-0088 or stop by at 3 North Main St. to purchase a button.

Pre-school club to meet

The Busy Book and Crayon Club, under the direction of Ann Gallagher and Sandra Ford, will begin Monday, Jan. 10, 1994 at the community center, 3 North Main St. This 11-week class s for children ages 4 and 5 and will meet from 12:15 to 2:15 p.m. Monday and Friday. There will be stories and a learning project from the theme of a story as well as participation in creative crafts.

The cost is $99 . Call 383-0088 for information.

New classes set at center

New and continuing classes are being offered at the community center , 3 North Main St., in January.

Let's Play Bridge with Barbara Elliot will begin Wednesday, Jan. 12 from 7 to 9 p.m. and meet for six weeks.

Coed Table Etiquette will be offered to children age 8 through 12. Students will make a complete meal, practice table etiquette and table settings. For the last class each child will invite a guest for dinner. This five-week class begins Thursday, Jan. 13.

Continuing programs include dance, judo, computer for kids, keyboarding for the 5th and 6th grade, gym dandy and more.

Call 383-0088 to register or stop by and pick up the winter brochure.

New classes being offered include ballet and jazz for ages 9 to 14, ballet and jazz for junior and senior high, and adult jazz.

Aerobics are ongoing from 9 to 10 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday and 6 to 7 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

Babysitting is available.

Replogle's contemporary folk art captures old Cohasset

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Walk into Jeanne Replogle's house and look around: there is hardly a surface that hasn't been touched by her graceful brush strokes. Seaside birds surround one fireplace while in an adjacent room, ivy cascades down another. On household furniture, mirrors, chests and picture frames, even more of her artistic flair comes through.

"(Painting is) as natural to me as eating or brushing my teeth," the artist said.

Throughout town, she is known for her folk art paintings, especially a series depicting old Cohasset currently on display at Town Hall. Replogle captures the lighter side of life in her sweet scenes.

"Attention to detail is so important," she said. "You should be able to find new things every time you look at it. If it has nothing else it should have a sense of whimsy."

"No one is ever frowning or fat in these paintings," Replogle said, paraphrasing Charles Wysocki, another artist with a similar style. Wysocki has long been an inspiration to her.

"(Contemporary folk art) is similar to a child's work (in that there) is a very jolly and pleasant nature to the painting. You never see anything dark or tragic," she said.

Her medium is loosely defined as "primitive" because the style doesn't use traditional artistic techniques, such as perspective.

"But this is a very highly defined art form," she said. Instead, Replogle defines her work as contemporary folk art. Replogle is too highly trained to be considered a primitive artist; she began studying when she was seven. Once a New York art gallery refused to show her paintings because she was over-trained, she said.

"(Primitive art is) the art of the untaught," she explained. "Grandma Moses falls into that category. She only started painting when she was in her 80s and I know she lived until she was about 109. I attribute (her longevity) directly that she could get up in the morning and see she had something to do — something to work toward," she said.

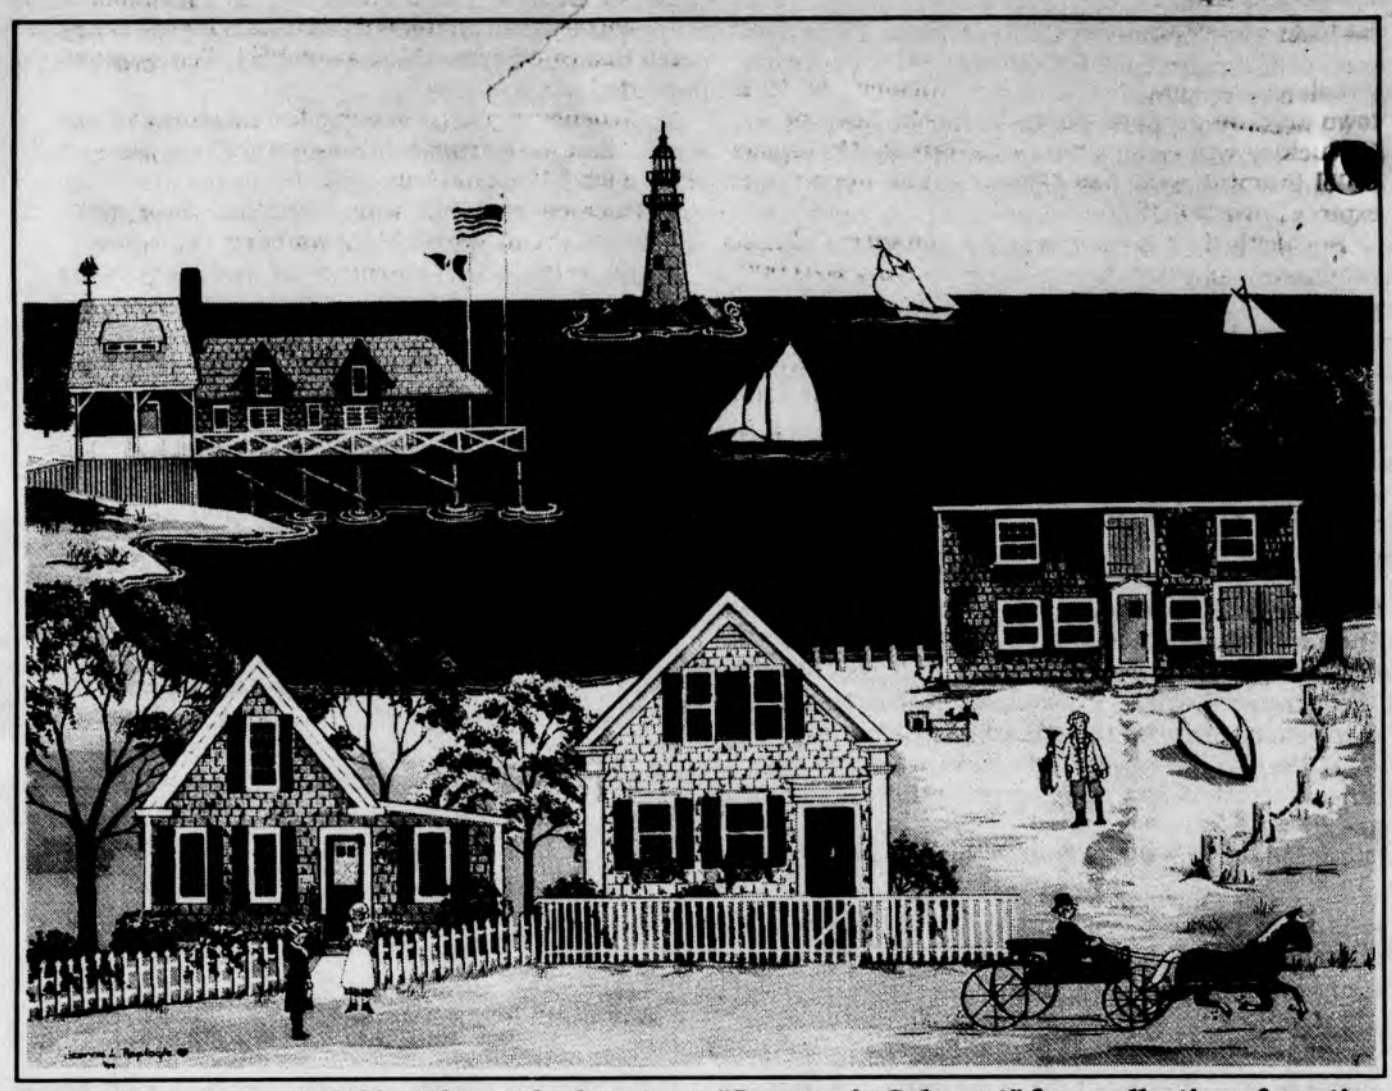
Although she doesn't consider herself a modern-day Grandma Moses, Replogle rises each day to a full schedule — full of projects to work toward.

This year's venture is greeting cards. Replogle designed two paintings just for the cards, one village scene, with a distinctively Christmasy feel, and another of the Yacht Club overlooking Cohasset Harbor.

Cards N' Shards of Cohasset sold out of the 600 cards she had printed, so next year, she'll make more.

She recently completed two commissions, one for Harvard University and the other for Cohasset Savings Bank.

For those who can't afford her on a commission basis (she charges $250 to $3,000 for a painting), her signed and numbered prints are available at the South Shore Arts Center, Cards N' Shards and Kit and Caboodle.



Jeanne Replogle created this Cohasset harbor scene, "Summer in Cohasset" for a collection of greeting cards this year. The cards, available only through Cards & Shards, of Cohasset, sold out by Nov. 1. Next year, she promises to make more.

Replogle also takes occasional assignments hand-painting on location. She painted clouds on the ceiling of a Newton home and flowers on fireplaces in a Vermont bed-and-breakfast.

"It's a nice break from sitting and painting all the time," she said.

A success today, Replogle started her painting career by creating a series to fill a collection of antique frames.

"It's sort of something everybody in Cohasset knows," she said, smiling.

While running an antique shop with four friends, she recalled several old picture frames were hanging empty around the shop, falling on people's heads more often than they were being sold.

One of the old frames fell onto a woman's leg, ruining her stockings. Irate, she shouted, "You paint, (you) take these home and put something in them!"

Her first work sold in 20 minutes.

"From that point on, my companions made me take home each frame (and fill it with a painting)," Replogle said.

Replogle continued with her "primitives," many depicting historic scenes from Cohasset, until she was 'discovered' by Colonial Homes Magazine.

A December 1991 article gained her world-wide attention. People interested in her art wrote to her from Germany and England. Now, her work is commissioned for companies and individuals far beyond the reaches of her Cohasset home.

As time progresses, Replogle continues to grow. She never thought she could do it, but she began teaching her unique style in her home. now, she proudly boasts, "I know I can teach anyone."

Her classes are both a social scene and a work studio, she said. As Replogle and four women aged 35

Cohasset town accountant wears two hats

By Valerie Kroon
Mariner correspondent

Selectmen named J. Michael Buckley, Jr. to the town accountant position in Pembroke Nov. 29.

Buckley will begin his duties Jan. 1. He replaces [illegible]l Fulmine who has resigned. The appointment expires June 30, 1995.

Buckley is the full-time town accountant in Cohasset. Pembroke's position is part-time, paying $20,000 a year.

Prior to his taking the Cohasset job a year ago, Buckley was the accountant in Westport for two years. Previously he apprenticed in Hingham as the assistant town accountant.

He attended Massassoit Community College for two years and graduated from Northeastern University with a B.S. in business administration. His major was accounting.

Buckley has considerable experience working with the Universal Municipal Accounting System, UMAS. This, as well as his five years experience in municipal accounting, were the major factors in his appointment.

Chairman Patrick Donovan said after the meeting that he'd spoken to the Chairman of the Cohasset Board of Selectman who saw no problem with availability and recommended Buckley highly. Donovan felt that Buckley would be available to Pembroke when needed.

"Whenever you're looking for someone to seek a part-time job you have to assume they're holding a full-time job," Donovan said.

Buckley and his wife Christine have lived in Pembroke two years. They watched the meeting on cable television, learning of his appointment immediately.

Prefers lighting all trees

In a letter to selectmen, Cohasset resident Libby Pompeo said she was "a little" disappointed that the board decided to light a single donated tree rather than the nine on the common.

"Because I love my town, I wish to make my small contribution towards the lighting of the tree this year," Pompeo wrote. "I was delighted when I heard the plans to use all the white lights on the nine trees on the common but a little disappointed when it was changed to the donated tree which will be beautiful also.

"My real favorite is all the trees on the common where we have such a perfect set up for it. Hopefully next year this can be done," she said.

Town report deadline

Department heads, boards, officials and town committees must submit their reports for the 1993 Annual Town Report to the selectmen's office no later than Friday, Dec. 31.

Those departments which have calendar year statistics should forward their "prose report" and complete the statistical report as soon as possible after Dec. 31, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Replogle's art . . .

to 57 sit and talk through an afternoon session, some of her students are growing talented enough to sell their own work.

"I've noticed a lot of them are getting much too good. I'm creating my own group of monsters," she said. Artists in her class show their personalities through their subjects and how they choose to paint them.

"Their color almost reflects their personalities," she said. For example, the outgoing personalities chose bright colors, she said.

While she tells them hard work and attention to detail are the tenets of the medium, she also tells them to use artistic license when they compose a picture.

Many of Replogle's paintings have an oceans in the background which is never visible from the actual scene of the painting. For a painting commissioned by a Seattle-based company, she blended history with modern times by juxtaposing old homes with new businesses in a work called "Seattle Old and New."

For the Seattle work, and several other commissions from out of state, she is forced to work from photos. For other projects, her research is based on site visits, historic photos, even interviews with people who remember the way a particular building looked long ago.

Replogle moved to Cohasset 17 years ago, with her husband, David, a book publisher, and their five boys. All her children live on the South Shore except one, who is in Leesburg, Virginia.

CHS grad Steven H. Cahill is a freshman at Boston University. He's the son of Dr. and Mrs. John Cahill. Have a great year, Steve!

❑ Happy belated birthday greetings go to Roger Pompeo, hope your day was a happy one and that this is the best year yet for you all.

❑ And, another Pompeo celebrates her birthday this month, Roger and Ann'ɔ daughter Holly. We'll bet that it will be a super one, although we wonder how Mimi will get your favorite carrot cake there with everything in tact.

❑ As everyone that was there can attest to, The Cohasset Police All-Stars vs. the Harlem Rockets was so much fun for kiddos and adults alike, Dec. 11. The gym was alive with laughter, cheering and fun. What a great idea, everyone agreed it was the best night in a while.

❑ Once again we applaud Joyce Hoffman, who was named broker of the month at Hunneman Real Estate. This is the fourth time this year that she has accomplished this feat, an admirable one indeed. This award signifies top sales performance, and to earn it four times in 1993 is just super.

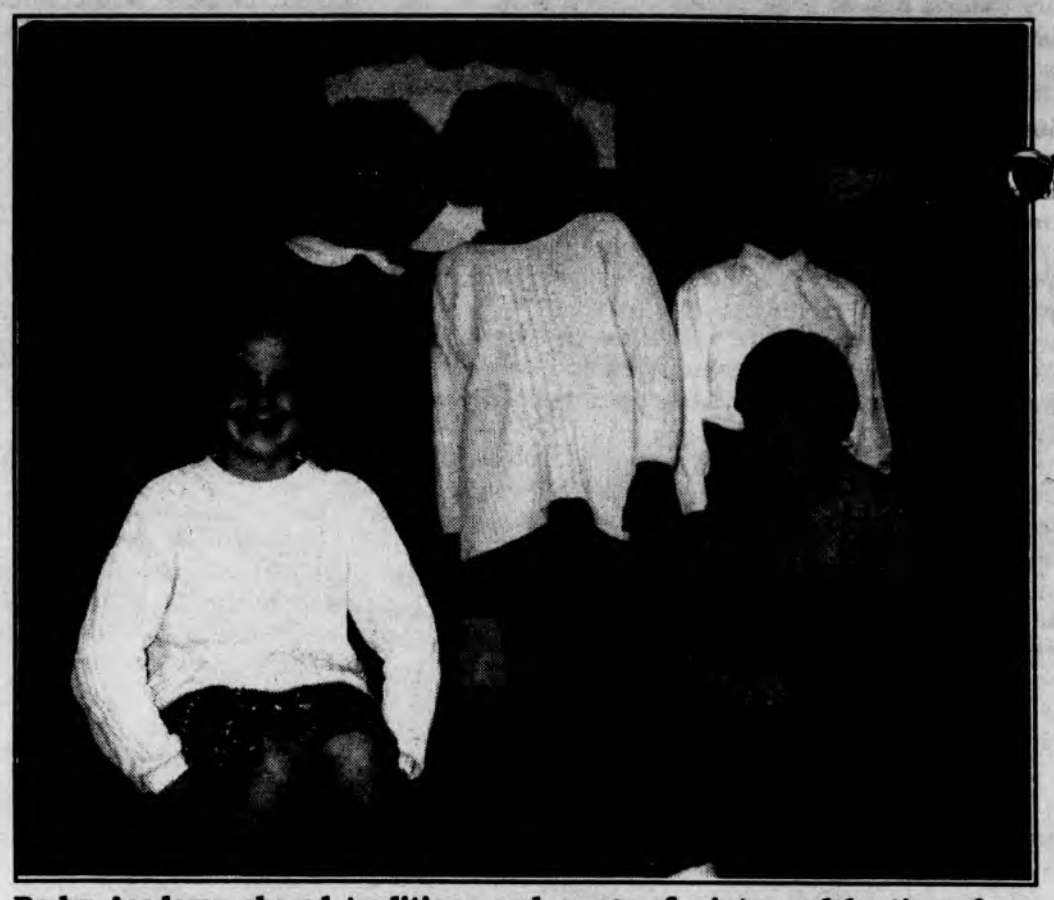
❑ News from Switzerland! Jessica Jenkins is home for a three-week vacation from Leysin American School. Besides enjoying the unique experience of living "above the clouds", she has been enjoying her classes and was placed on the Founders List for the first semester. Be sure to ask Jessica all about her school and her travels when you see her, and we all welcome her home for the holidays!

❑ Happy birthday greetings go to Bill Protulis this week, he just turned 80 years young. We hear that his family party was enjoyed by all, and we certainly extend our best wishes to you, Bill.

❑ It's time for us to give a double rousing welcome to two new Cohasset residents, Doyle David Calhoun and Riley Rose Calhoun. Yes, folks, twins, born Nov. 20, at 8:30 a.m. at South Shore Hospital.

Doyle weighed in at 4 pounds 10 ozs. and his sister Riley at 3 pounds 10 ozs. You can bet that mom, Kelli, and dad, David, are two busy new parents, and that Edward and Lorraine Rose (maternal grandparents from Hingham) and John and MaryJane Calhoun (paternal grandparents from Plymouth) are just thrilled to pieces. Imagine Christmas at that house, what fun it will be.

❑ Congratulations to Jim Reidy, whose Williams College Men's Soccer Team made it to the NCAA Division 3 National Championship! They ended the season second in the country after losing to the University of California San Diego 1-0. Jim was a four-year starter and finished his career by being selected to the First team All New England and second team All American. A great feat indeed, and surely one to be proud of!



Derby Academy shared traditions and songs of winter celebrations from around the world with parents and friends at a special presentation last week. Here depicting Hanukkah are Caroline Curtis, Megan Mulcahy, Cohasset's Kara Gaughen, Brendan Dougherty, and Tyler Henry.

❑ Another CHS grad deserves a round of applause this week, Rick Rourke. Many of you remember Rick when he wrestled at the High School, he was GOOD!

Now he is spending countless hours helping coach Torin Sweeney (as a volunteer) with the wrestling team. That's a dynamic duo of coaches folks, be sure that you go and watch them lead their team to many victories.

❑ Hats off to Erin M. Hunt, who graduated from Massasoit Community College! Here's to a great job in record time, Erin!

❑ December 2, 3 and 4 the Musical

Theatre Guild at Westfield State College presented its production of "Grease," the lively rock 'n 'roll musical set in the 1950s. Heather Brennock of Cohasset fam[illegible]s in the chorus of the show, whil[illegible]e hear was a rousing success.

Great job Heather, wish we could have all been there to cheer you on and watch the performances!

Time to extend birthday greetings to a fine gentleman, Bud Railsback. We won't let on how old he is, but it begins with a 7 and ends with a 0, so see if you can guess. Hope your day and years to come are super-special ones!

❑ Steven Cahill of Cohasset fame is one of more than 740 freshmen studying at Boston University's College of General Studies. Members of the Class of 1997 come from all 50 states and 70 foreign countries. Steven is a CHS grad, and the son of Dr. and Mrs. John Cahill.

❑ Notre Dame Academy announced its honor roll for the first marking period, and Cohasset's Julie Catalano made the Principal's List; Danielle Nohe earned herself First Honors, and Jennifer Cellucci and Julie Smith made Second Honors. Congrats to all of you for a job well done.

❑ The Cohasset Basketball Boosters honored Mr. and Mrs. George Ellinger recently by presenting them with great Cohasset Skipper sweatshirts. They have worked tirelessly over the years to make Cohasset Basketball what it is today, and certainly made tons of kiddos very happy indeed.

Our hats are off to you too.

❑ Hats off to all of the Girl Scouts who "carolled" throughout the Elm Street complex last week. We understand that all of the residents thought you were splendid.

❑ Don't forget that the Paul Pratt Memorial Library is accepting registrations for the winter story hour series, to begin on Jan. 13 and lasting for six weeks. They are held Thursday and Friday mornings from 10 to 10:45 a.m. and the kiddos all love them.

Stop by the children's room or call the children's librarian at 1348 (children must be at least 3 1/2 to participate).

❑ Let me take the time to wish you all very happy holidays and to thank you for getting your news to me. Why not resolve to send even more next year. Hope all of your days are merry, happy, healthy ones.

Legal fees to jump

During preliminary budget discussions Monday, selectmen said labor counsel fees may reach $20,000 next year. Three contracts expire in 1995 and one town hall contract remains unsettled. Contract negotiations begin six months before the contracts are up for renewal. This year selectmen budgeted $10,000 for labor counsel.

All-night parking ban

No all-night parking is allowed through April 1, according to the town's by-laws.

"It shall be unlawful for the driver of any vehicle other than one acting in an emergency, to park said vehicle on any street for a period of time longer than one hour between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m." from Nov. 15 through April 1, the by-law states.

Parenting workshops set

Evening parenting workshops are being held from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 19 and Tuesday, Feb. 1, 1994 at the First Parish House, 23 North Main St.

These are the same assertive discipline workshops that were so well attended in the fall. The format consists of presentation, video, discussion and real home work to help participants develop and implement an effective behavior management plan.

Frank Fitzgerald, school adjustment counselor at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools, will lead this two-part workshop. Mr. Fitzgerald is a certified adjustment counselor and school psychologist. He has worked with parents in both public and private settings.

The deadline for sign-up is Tuesday, Jan. 18, 1994.

Call Frank at 383-6115 or 6117 to reserve your space.

Studds to host forum

Congressman Gerry Studs will host a three-hour forum from 2 to 5 pm. Sunday Jan. 9, at the Harrington Center of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzard's Bay. It is free and open to all residents of the 10th Congressional District which includes the South Shore and Cape Cod.

The conference offers high school students and parents an opportunity to listen to and speak with a variety of experts on how to manage the financial burden of higher education. The forum will focus not only on four-year colleges, but on financial aid for two-year colleges, vocational training, continuing education and graduate studies.

For information call Congressman Studd's office at 1-800-794-9911.

Vacation program planned

The Cohasset Recreation Department will host a five-day school vacation program at the Deer Hill School, Sohier St. from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday Dec. 27 through Friday Dec. 31 for children ages 4 through 12. The program is coordinated by Ted Carroll and staffed by summer playground counselors.

Children may register for all week, one day, or parts of any day. There are special fee rates and family discounts.

The program will consist of arts and crafts, sports and low-organized games as well as special events and activities.

Call the recreation office at 383-6791 to pre-register or at the Deer Hill School upon arrival for the program.

Emily Dean, who's in Ms. Webster's third-grade class at Osgood, puts the finishing touches on the first-night mural which will be on display at the South Shore Art Center, Dec. 31. All three Cohasset schools are creating murals. Stay tuned to the Cohasset Mariner next week for photos of Deer Hill's mural!

Junior Girl Scouts Courtney Anton, Becca Butman, and Leigh-Anne Walsh stand by the tree they decorated at the 'Beechwood Secret Garden.'

Courtney Anton adds a hand-tied ribbon donated by Flowers By the Sea to the tree at the Beechwood traffic island.

Girl Scouts add festive touch to 'Beechwood Secret Garden'

Courntey Anton, Becca Butman and Leigh-Anne Walsh, pictured here, assisted landscape architect Amy Roebuck with the beautification of the Beechwood traffic island last year as part of a community service project for a special girl scout patch.

Other members of the Junior Girl Scout Troop 4625 not pictured are Katie Flynn and Becky Hardin. The troop will be working on a "special interest" badge in ecology by recycling the tree after the holidays and making it into a bird feeder, decorated with pine cones and berries collected on a nature walk with troop leader Angi Walsh and assistant Maribeth Butman. Special thanks to those who made donations: Flowers by the Sea, Village Greenery, Inc., Tuxedo Time, and JLB Construction, Inc.

Is there a Santa Claus?

Upon the inevitable childhood disappointment of realizing Santa Claus was fictitious, I lost interest in the big fellow entirely, until recently. No, I'm not hoping to disprove the non-believers — I just wanted to know if there was once an actual human of that name. I never really understood the occasional reference to Santa Claus as "Jolly old Saint Nick." Did Saint Nicholas ever exist?

The Catholic church acknowledges him as Saint Nicholas. According to author John J. Delaney, Nicholas was "Probably born at Patara, Lycia, Asia Minor, of wealthy parents." He was named bishop of a dirt-poor diocese in Myra and became known for his holiness, zeal and miracles. During the persecution of Christians under Emperor Diocletian, he was imprisoned for his faith. Nicholas was also present at the Council of Nicaea "where he denounced Arianism (the belief that the Son is not of the same substance as of the Father) and died at Myra" around 350 AD.

In his book, Dictionary of Saints, Delaney states, "To these meager facts of his life were added colorful details from legends and untrustworthy biographies, according to which he was born at Patara, and when his wealthy parents died, devoted himself to the conversion of sinners and his wealth to the poor and charitable works."

One legend has it that there were three poverty-stricken girls whose father was about to turn them into prostitutes since he couldn't afford a dowry for them; Nicholas threw bags of gold into their house on three different occasions and all three were subsequently married.

Through the centuries this story transformed into the heads of three murdered children restored to life by the saint, which led to the practice of children giving presents at Christmas in his name. Incidentally, there was a metamorphosis of his name, Saint Nicholas, into Sint Klaes into Santa Claus by the Dutch.

Another story reveals that Nicholas appeared in a dream to Emperor Constantine to tell him three imperial officers condemned to death at Constantanople were innocent. Constantine had the officers set free the next morning.

His great popularity increased enormously in the West when his relics were brought to Bari in 1087 and his shrine was one of the great pilgrimage centers of medieval Europe. He is the patron of prisoners, of children and storm-beset sailors (for miraculously saving doomed mariners off the coast of Lycia).

It should be noted in this increasingly secular world, the figure of Santa Claus is non-Christian and is based on the Germanic god Thor, who was associated with winter and the Yule log and rode on a chariot drawn by goats named Cracker and Gnasher. Sound familiar?

In essence, legends notwithstanding, there really is a Santa Claus.

Nominations for 'Citizen of the Year' open

Nominations are now being accepted for the first annual Cohasset Mariner "Citizen of the Year" Award.

The first in what will become an annual tradition, this award will seek to recognize an individual for outstandng service to the community or for a special achievement.

The deadline for nominations for this year's "Citizen of the Year" is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan. 14.

The Cohasset Mariner invites our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to our community.

Following the close of nominations, a selection panel will review the names submitted, and select the Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 1994.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, a clergy member, teacher or school administrator, police officer, firefighter or other municipal worker, a person in the local business community, sports figure, or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time and energy to a worthy Cohasset project or cause.

"Citizen of the Year" is not a popularity contest; the person most often nominated will not necessarily be selected for this recognition.

Please use the form printed here to make your nomination for "Citizen of the Year," including reasons why you believe this person should be considered. Or nominations may be made in the form of a letter. In either case, persons submitting a name for consideration should include their own name, address, and telephone number (for verification purposes only).

Nominations can be mailed to The Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset or 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield 02050, postmarked no later than Jan. 14, 1994. They may also be dropped off our drop box in Hennessy's in the Village. Also nominations may be faxed to the Marshfield office at 617-837-4843 to be received no later than 5 p.m., Jan. 14.

Please call Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford with any questions, 1-800-649-6661.

Cohasset needs a master plan

letters

To the Editor:

From reading the last two issues of the Mariner, I m wondering if it isn't time for a new professional master plan for the town. What kind of economic base do we need/want? What are the most feasible land uses? What are our aesthetic considerations? How much land is still buildable? How much development will our water supply and sewer "systems" sustain? How can we control traffic patterns? Are businesses still viable in our village downtown or should empty storefronts go and the old houses revert to housing? Do we want Route 3A to further deteriorate into another Route 53 or do we want to control development, landscape, and environment?

The Benjamin Report many years ago addressed zoning and some of these questions but obviously needs updating. It seems to me the Planning Board should seriously address and direct growth of the town and not leave it to Chambers of Commerce, supermarket executives, and other developers, who have their own priorities.

I grew up in a town with a healthy economy which controlled growth and the aesthetics of roads, buildings, and grounds. So I know it can be done .

Remember: 'Good will toward men'

To the Editor:

The month of December brings with it the holiday season, the time for "Peace on Earth Good Will Toward Men."

For many of us it is a busy and joyous time, but for some of our friends and neighbors it can be very difficult. For those who find the period hectic, do only what you can, and pat yourself on the back for that. For those who find the time joyous, enjoy every minute of the season. To all our seniors, thank you for a wonderful year and we look forward to working and playing together throughout 1994.

If you know someone who is alone and depressed, a friendly visit may be just the boost that person needs to get through the holidays. Maybe you could offer to help someone with transportation this month, for shopping or an appointment or even to come to the Senior Center.

Maybe you could make a reassuring phone call to check on friends or neighbors or just to let the Council on Aging know who would benefit from a call or a visit. You could donate a few canned goods to the Cohasset Food Pantry this month to help a family in need. With the added cost of fuel and the decrease in fuel assistance dollars, many more people will need help this year than before.

We at the council want you to know that you can turn to us; we are here to help. So, happy holidays, everyone! We wish you good fortune of a joyous season. May your memories be a source of strength and comfort.

Lightkeeper's residence comes to life

Dear Cohasset residents:

Best wishes for the holiday season.

We suggest that you take your family for an evening ride to Government Island. Drive down to the Sailing Club turnaround and look up at the Minot Ledge Lighthouse Keeper's Residence. It's coming to life!

Both upstairs apartments are now occupied.

Christmas wreaths and window lights silhouette this beautiful part of Cohasset's seafaring history.

The Massachusetts Historic Commission has recommended the residence for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places.

Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation board members have personally guaranteed $75,000 in loans in order to complete this project. In addition, the Cohasset Conservation Trust has generously granted us a $20,000 loan that will be forgiven if we raise another $25,000.

That $25,000 is what we need to open Bancroft Hall to residents and community service organizations by May 15 or sooner. Over ensuing months, we will complete other amenities that are desirable, but not prerequisites to opening the Residence to the public.

Please mail a tax deductible Christmas donation c/o CCL, P.O. Box 514, Cohasset 02025.

Or, perhaps you can donate your time and/or trade skills, call 383-0505.

Seat belt law should be supported

letters

To the Editor:

How can a thoughtful person object to mandated wearing of seat belts on the grounds that it interferes with individual rights? Such nonsense usually is accompanied by macho maundering about other fights for freedom, the Minutemen, etc.

Failure to wear a seat belt is not just the business of the fool who neglects to wear one. It is the business of the rest of us, who help foot the bill for prolonged rehabilitation treatment that could have been avoided. The cost is distributed through higher taxes, higher auto insurance premiums, higher medical insurance premiums and higher hospital costs. The costs of those who can't pay the astronomical rehab bills are recovered by redistributing the cost elsewhere: to the rest of us.

In yet another way, each driver is responsible not only to himself or herself, but to all other drivers who share the crowded roads. If your injuries are needlessly severe, or your family needlessly bereaved, the other driver has to be anguished regardless of who or what was at fault, and can't escape feeling a party to the needless tragedy. Most accidents result from innocent errors in judgment, often by both parties. On the road, we can't consider ourselves as individuals acting independently; we are an interacting mass whose common interest is consistent with rather than opposed to individual interest. We aren't solitary animals living in widely spaced isolation on a frontier, we are units of a densely packed society of vehicle occupants.

Violent personal experience,e right here in quiet Cohasset, three blocks from home, completed by conversion from skeptic to seat belt enthusiast, but the statistics and well-disseminated views of highway patrol officers and medics should satisfy anyone with the wit to notice. As for the inane argument that seat belts encourage injury by preventing escape: sure, it happens, but perhaps once for every thousand times that seat belts made the difference between minor bruises and catastrophic injury.

Local family needs a home

The best Christmas present a local family could have is a new place to rent where they can all be together.

A single mother and her three sons became homeless last week after a fire destroyed the home they were renting on Beechwood Street.

Now the nine-year old twin boys are with their aunt, the 13-year-old boy is with a friend, and their mother is staying with a third family in town.

The children are happy in Cohasset schools and the family would really like to stay in town.

If you can help, please call the Peter Laney family at 383-6022.

Thank your for successful book fair

To the Editor:

In am writing to thank everyone who participated in this year's successful Osgood PSO Book Fair. It was a terrific opportunity for parents and children to shop for Christmas gifts or just browse for themselves. This year's choices of books from Buttonwood Books featured a great selection from a variety of authors reaching many age groups. There were several Birthday Books donated to the library which continues to enrich our children's learning experiences and lives.

I want to thank Donna Dunbar, Osgood librarian, and all the volunteers who helped keep me and the book fair organized and running smoothly. From start to finish, their support was instrumental in making it a great success. Thanks to all of you!

Hoopsters perfectly ready for season

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

A true sign of a good team is its ability to battle back from adversity and prevail in the end.

Take Cohasset's 56-50 win over Abington on Monday night, which ran the basketball team's record to 3-0 on the season.

The Skippers led by a seemingly comfortable 20 points in the second half, only to see their lead evaporate down to almost nothing.

"They had a nice run for us," said head coach Ron Ford, "but we held on."

The win was the closest of the season for the Skippers in year that is shaping up as a battle of wills in the South Shore League with no clear-cut favorites."

A high note was struck right from the gun when Cohasset handed last year's run-away champion, Norton, a 50-41 win. The Lancers, who the Skippers haven't defeated in six seasons finished with a 19-1 record and returned three quality players to the squad this year. They may not be the squad they were a year ago, but Norton is by no means a pushover.

Ford said the win helped set the stage for the Skippers' frame of mind and their chances this season.

"I think we got off to a good start beating Norton," Ford said. "It was a big confidence booster."

Another lost was avenged when Tom Allen poured in 17 points and Chris Kondrat hit four 3-pointers to lead Cohasset over Harwich.

"Those two have been a big key for us," Ford said.

Joe Slotnick is currently leading all Cohasset scorers with 15 points a game. Matt Pierce is second with 11.

Ford expects Carver, Norwell, Norton, Cohasset, Abington and East Bridgewater to all be in the hunt for the SSL crown this winter.

"There's going to be a lot of parity in the league this year," he said. "I don't think one team really stands above anybody."

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

Now that the year is winding down and 1994 is knocking on the door, I decided to put together a Best of 1993 sports list for Cohasset, Hanover, Abington and Rockland, along with the best high school athletes from those towns since the beginning of the year.

Picking the best athletes was the hardest of the two tasks. I first decided on 10, but when the names started swirling around in my head I upped the number to 15. This kept me up well past 1:30 A.M., on Monday morning and I knew once the paper went to press I'd be kicking myself for excluding certain deserving athletes. In order to keep my sanity and get to bed by 3 A.M., I added an honorable mention list. Once I made my decision, I rolled over and slept like a baby.

Well, here goes.

Best High School Athletes of 1993:

• Zack Smith — Abington High School, cross country.

• Craig MacDonald — Hanover High School, baseball.

• Niki Begin — Rockland High School, soccer.

• Ray Jones — Cohasset High School, track.

• Jeff Reale — Rockland High School, basketball.

• Mike Hazen — Abington High School, baseball.

• Chris Goodman — Cohasset, lacrosse.

• David Bierschied — Hanover High School, soccer.

• Brett Johnston — Hanover High School, football.

• Chris Rolandelli — Cohasset High School, football.

• Kelly Snow — Abington High School, basketball.

• Tara Gallagher — Cohasset High School, gymnastics.

• Jen Kinsman — Rockland High School, soccer.

• Karen Curran — Abington High School, soccer.

• Jeff Ramsay — Hanover High School, hockey.

Honorable Mention: Susie Johnston; Hanover High School field hockey, Colleen Morris; Hanover High School, soccer, Melissa Henderson; Abington High School, cross country, Tom Allen; Cohasset High School, football, Chris Kondrat; Cohasset High School, soccer.

The Best of 1993:

Best Season: The Hanover High School boys soccer team — The Indians won their first South Shore League championship in 13 years. Forget their loss to a tough Cohasset High squad in the tourney, this was a season to remember.

Best Comeback: The Abington High School football team — The "Sound Off" dweeb must have had his head in his head in the sand this fall. Jim Kelliher's squad didn't win a single game in '92, but wound up with a winning record this season. No contest in this category.

Biggest Surprise: The '92-93 Rockland High School girls basketball team — Both Dave and I criticized the Gymnasts halt Scituate streak

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

She has never been one to put pressure on her athletes during a gymnastics meet. Ruthann Sargent-Ardizzoni knows that can be as detrimental to a budding, high school gymnast as flashing a photo just as she is about to perform a difficult move.

But Cohasset High's gymnastics coach managed to keep the pressure off her gymnasts and on the highly-touted Scituate High squad during Monday's South Shore League meet.

"I tried to let the girls know there should be no pressure on them," said Sargent-Ardizzoni. "The pressure was on Scituate."

If there was any force pushing in on the Skippers' gymnasts it didn't show as Erica Hettstrom and Megan Pratt finished 1-2 in the All-Around competition to deal the Sailors their first South Shore League loss in 11 years with a stunning 120.35 -118.8.

The win was Cohasset's third in a row, after Megan Pratt won the All-Around in Tara Hettstrom works out on the Uneven Bars during a recent Cohasset High gymnastics practice. Hettstrom is a major reason why the Skippers are off to an undefeated start.

Cohasset led by a point halfway through the meet, but the Vaulting competition was coming up and Sargent-Ardizzoni wasn't even thinking victory at that point. Vaulting has been a long-time weak spot for the Skippers and she was anxious at how her athletes would fare.

Sargent-Ardizzoni knew, however, that her team was far from out of it.

"We knew if anyone was going to have a chance to beat Scituate it would be us," she said.

Sargent-Ardizzoni's worrying was for naught, however, as Colwill took first in the event (8.0) and Tara Hettstrom tied for second (7.9).

With one event to go Cohasset led by 7/10, but it was Erica Hettstrom and Pratt who clinched the win with their 1-2 finish in the Floor Exercise. Hettstrom edged Pratt, 8.45 to 8.40.

Hettstrom wound up taking the All-Around in 31.45, while the 29.75 second-place finish by Colwill was a personal best.

"It was really a shock," Sargent-Ardizzoni said of the win. "We didn't realize we won until the very end of the meet. It took a lot of determination and hard work, and we could have choked.

"It was nerve-wracking. I had a pit in my stomach.

Undefeated and currently leading the league, Sargent-Ardizzoni is now concentrating on keeping her athletes injury-free. She hopes the team can continue winning, leading into the second-half of the year.

Sargent-Ardizzoni was also pleased with the turnout at the meet and predicts there will be many more like it as the season wears on.

"Because of the win, I think Cohasset will get a lot of fans coming out and cheering us on."

Church shines in wrestling opener

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Torin Sweeney was certainly looking forward to Cohasset High's wrestling meet against North Quincy and Walpole on December 23.

"I'd like the split," the Skippers' head coach said. "If we could win one, that would be great because they're two tough teams."

Sweeney may not have been so optimistic about his grapplers' chances for a good outing against the pair of strong squads if not for the Skippers' own encouraging performance in Saturday's Third Annual Holiday Tournament, held at the high school.

Cohasset finished in sixth place in the 11-team field. Wrestling power-house North Attleboro claimed the team victory.

The Skippers proved they have some grapplers who can more than compete with other wrestlers from bigger schools in a large-size, invitational.

Andy Church headed five Cohasset place winners, making the first takedown in the overtime period to clinch his fourth victory of the meet in the 189-pound bracket.

All-Scholastic Ryan Freeman wrestled to a second-place finish at 125 pounds, as did freshman Kevin Duffy at 103.

Wrestling in the toughest weight class of the meet, 152-pounder Scott Theriault wound up in fourth. The 152-pound bracket featured three wrestlers who placed in last year's South Sectionals.

Brian Duffy also took a fourth at 119 pounds.

Sweeney likes the way his team looks in practice so far this season. The Skippers' performances in the opening meet indicate to Sweeney they are wide open to continue their positive work on the mats in the upcoming matches penciled in on Cohasset's schedule.

"We'll do better in every tournament we go to," Sweeney said. "We'll keep plugging and plugging."

the 113.6 - 94.85 victory in the season opener at Carver, and again in the Skippers' 120.5 - 104.95 decision over Norwell.

The Scituate-Cohasset matchup will go down as a classic with the two squads within points of each other as the meet wore on.

Hettstrom (7.2) and Pratt (7.05) finished 1-2 in the Uneven Bars while Scituate's Ginny Stone and Stacie Poulis (7.0) tied for third.

Stone took first on the Balance Beam (8.45), but Cohasset was right there with Hettstrom and Jodi Colwill finishing 2-3 in 8.15 and 7.8. Hettstrom garnered the high mark despite a fall during her routine.

Skippers have busy week

By Kevin Lewis
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Varsity Hockey team began the regular season last week with games against Duxbury and Hull.

In the first game, Duxbury defeated the Skippers 3-0. It was a 1-0 game for more than two periods, before Duxbury added two insurance goals. Coach Dennis Walsh received fine efforts from his entire team. Forward J. Nevin Bunstien centered Chris McKenna and Mike Riley. Pat Reynolds centered Brendan Kinchla and Matt Graves. Matt Lewis centered Kevin Smith and Brian Riley. The defensemen were David Nobles, Charlie Endris, Anthony Wigmore and Jarod Graves. Kevin McKenna played a strong game in goal.

Hull defeated Cohasset 3-2, Dec. 18, on a late third-period goal. Co-captain Mike Riley scored the Cohasset goals. This game featured outstanding goaltending on both ends of the ice. Kevin McKenna played a great game for the host Skippers. He was supported on defense by Co-captain Charlie Endris, David Noble, Anthony Wigmore and Jarod Graves. Riley, Bunstien, Mike Shields, Pat Reynolds, Brian Riley, Graves, Chris McKenna and Brendan Kinchla; all played well up front.

This team is young and should get better as the season progresses.

MIAA's open basketball tournament, but it was the Bulldogs who made a good case for the system. They finished the season with a sub-.500 record and proceeded to win their share of games in the South Sectionals.

Best Interview: Niki Begin — I was beginning to get irritated when I couldn't find her house after 30 minutes cruising through Rockland, but my grumpiness disappeared quick once I got talking with the Bulldogs' scoring machine. Sincere, funny and determined to improve even more, Begin was as much a pleasure to chat with as she was to watch on the soccer field. Good luck at Dartmouth Niki.

Most Versatile Sportscaster: Channel 4's Scott Wahle — Most of the time when we ribbed Wahle it was done tongue-in-cheek, but try to tell that to those Hingham folks. The truth is Wahle has proven he is a multi-talented media personality with an appealing, on-air presence.

Wahle has done a fine job filling in for Bob Lobel on Sports Final, and he does have a strong voice. With the play productions he is in it would seem Wahle is burning the candle at both ends, but you wouldn't know it through his work. Merry Christmas SW!

Best Road Race: This one came down to the Hingham Fourth of July Road Race and Cohasset's Roadrace-by-the-Sea. I gave the edge to Hingham, for no other reason than it pulled off a quality event with few problems, despite its biggest field ever.

Best Local Runner: With victories in Hingham, Marshfield, Kingston, and a second-place finish in Braintree, George Rose of Kingston edged out Ed Sheehan, who popped up a number of times during the year.

Self-defense workshop

Model Mugging of Boston will be at the Community Center Jan. 25, from 7 to 10 p.m., to present "Street Smarts." In this workshop participants will learn basic skills and self-defense methods to reduce chances of being assaulted. Through a series of demonstrations, drills, role play and partner exercises, this step-by-step training builds up to some basic and effective physical self-defense technique.

Sgt. James Hussey, self-defense instructor of the Boston Police Academy says of the program: "This is the only short-term course I have seen that truly gives students an idea of how to defend themselves in situations as close to reality as possible."

This is an especially worthwhile class for seniors in high school. The fee is $25. To register or for more information, call 383-0088.

Hoopsters ready for season

Cohasset will be using its size up front to control the boards and work the ball inside. Also expect to see a more up-tempo flow to the Skippers' game than in past seasons.

"The more we get out and run, the better we're going to be," Ford said. "Teams won't sit in the zone and wait for us."

Although they are a Division 4 team, Cohasset will be going up against several Division 3 squads this season.

"We look to play up," Ford said. "In our league we're one of the smallest teams, enrollment-wise, but I think we have a good squad.

"It's going to be a great team to watch this year. This is very much a good league this year."

Harlem Rockets play police in benefit

By John Dumas
Special to the Mariner

A crowd of 1,000 Cohasset area residents saw a fun-filled night of comedy basketball Dec. 11 as the Cohasset Police Association All-stars took the Harlem Rockets to court for a benefit basketball game at Cohasset High School.

The event was sponsored by the Cohasset Police Association, who will be using the net proceeds from the game to benefit a scholarship fund for college students, youth sports organizations, as well as other community projects traditionally supported by the Association.

Although the Cohasset Police All-stars lost 112-83, coach Sgt. Richard Abbadessa Sr. was proud of his team. "Our team did excellent, they showed a lot of spirit, they ran up and down the court like pros. They were up against a good team, and they showed that they could play ball with the best of them," Abbadessa said.

Abbadessa was also impressed with the crowd.

"It's great to see the people come out and support the activities here. It was a full house and we're very happy about it...I think the people got their money's worth."

The enthusiastic crowd enjoyed the comedy of "The Clown Prince of Basketball", Valentino Willis, who playfully made fun of the police team. Valentino's favorite target was Sgt. David Pomarico, who was harassed from the opening tap. Pomarico was a good sport about Valentino's affections, saying "I think I'm falling in love...somehow we are attracted to each other. His number (6 7/8) is my hat size."

The Harlem Rockets include: (Top Row, Left to Right) Paul Atkins, Anthony "Barkley" Johnson, Dana Middleton, "Shadow" Vaught, Troy McKoy. (Bottom Row) Captain "Magic" Valentino, Tracy Lis and Scott Coleman.

The Harlem Rockets roster included former Providence College star Tracy Lis, former Celtic draft pick Paul Atkins, Dana Middleton, Buzz Middleton, Troy McKoy, and James "the Rock" Coleman, who thrilled those in attendance with several scintillating dunks.

John Dumas, media director for the Rockets, said that "these events are designed to bring the community together for a great cause. The Association brought in the High School basketball boosters to handle the concessions, and the JV and Varsity cheerleaders to perform before the game and at halftime. It gave the event a distinct local flavor. The Association should be commended on their efforts."

Although they fell short on the basketball court, the Police Association were winners in the eyes of both young and old alike. They saw exciting basketball by both teams, they had plenty of laughs from the comedy of the Rockets, and they left knowing that they had helped several great causes.

sports briefs

Pompeo elected soccer captain

Cohasset resident Brian Pompeo, a junior at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, was elected by his teammates as a co-captain of the 1994 men's soccer team.

Pompeo, who plays back, is a key member of the Colby's defensive ranks, which ended the season allowing only 10 goals. In addition to his defensive skills, Pompeo is a proven offensive threat, ending this season with a total of six points with one goal and four assists.

Colby ended the season with a 16-1-1 record.

Pompeo, an American studies major with a minor in education, is a graduate of the Belmont Hill School in Belmont and is the son of Arthur and Nancy Pompeo of Cohasset.

Panthers take two in Connecticut Super Bowl

The Hingham Panthers were one of three strong flag football All-Star teams to win two games in the Connecticut Super Bowl. The Panthers won two games and made it to the championship game.

The Hingham All-Star Teams were made up of boys seven to ten years old from Hingham, Cohasset and Hull.

Hingham Panther team members include:

Former Cohasset High and NFL player Paul Farren addresses the players and their parents.

Basketball shooting clinic

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting registrations at the recreation office on the first floor of Cohasset Town Hall for a Basketball Shooting Clinic for boys and girls in grades four to eight.

The clinic will be directed by Cohasset High School's Head Boys' and Girls' Basketball Coaches Ron Ford and Cori Hughes. The cost for the three-day clinic, which will meet from 9 a.m. to noon, Tuesday through Thursday, Dec. 28 to 30, is $50 per child.

The clinic is designed to help young players develop the correct fundamentals involved with shooting the basketball. Each participant will receive individual instruction, attend lectures and participate in shooting competitions. The tuition fee will also include a clinic T-Shirt and an admission ticket to Cohasset High School's Varsity girls' basketball game vs. Duxbury Wednesday, Dec. 29, noon at CHS.

You may register at the recreation department office, or call 383-6791, for further details. Space is limited, hence, early registration to ensure participation is advised.

Wrestling offered at the center

Instructor Peter Buckley will offer wrestling for grades four to six beginning Thursday, Jan. 27. In this five-week course participants will learn the basic take down moves, the three starting positions and live wrestle. The fee is $25. Call 383-0088.

Lawrence awarded Senior Bowl

Colby Lawrence of Cohasset was chosen as recipient of the Senior Bowl which is awarded to a senior whose standard of sportsmanship, ability, and leadership has contributed most meaningfully to the girls' varsity soccer team.

La Leche League to meet

The Tri-Town La Leche League will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 11, 1994 at the visiting Nurse Association, 673 Main St., Norwell. The topic of the meeting will be the advantages of breastfeeding.

The league is a non-profit organization offering information and support about breastfeeding and parenting through informal meetings and phone support.

For information call 383-6113 or 740-1478.

Support for spouses

Hingham VNA and Cohasset Council on Aging co-sponsor a support group for spouses and adult children caring for elders at home. Meetings are held second Friday of the month from 10 a.m. to noon at the Cohasset Council on Aging, 3 No. Main St., Cohasset. Call Sue Connolly at 383-9112 for further information.

Mexican trip planned

Painting trip to San Miguel D'Allende, Mexico, sponsored by the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset is scheduled for March 3-15.

SSAC Faculty Member and award-winning artist Ros Farbush leads travelling artists through this charming Mexican village, the center of fine arts and crafts, in the province of Guanajuato for 10 full days of painting instruction and one free day of exploration. Call 383-9548 for bargain package rate including airfare, hotel and meals; deadline Jan. 6. (The Art Center will be closed Dec. 24-Jan. 2).

Arts grants available

Grants of up to $5,000 each are now available to artists in the categories of choreography, fiction and poetry from the new Artist Grants Program of the Massachusetts Cultural Council. The Artist Grants Program provides direct support to artists in recognition of exceptional work. Categories of support will rotate over a two-year cycle.

In order to increase awareness of artists in Massachusetts, the MCC will work with grant recipients to document or present their finished work or work in progress to the public.

Application deadline is Friday Jan. 14. For an application and information call the MCC in Boston at 800-232-0960. Written requests should be addressed to the MCC, 80 Boylston St., Boston 02116-4802.

Art Center holiday hours

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset will be closed Dec. 24-Jan. 2 for the holidays. It will reopen Jan. 3 at 10 a.m.

Boating course offered

Flotilla 1204 of the USCoast Guard Auxiliary is offering a class in boating skills and seama[illegible] to be held from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Sundays be[illegible]an. 9. Registration will be at 8:30 a.m. Sund[illegible]

The course is directed to the first time boa[illegible]d as a review for the more experienced. There is a minimal fee for course materials.

To pre-register call Jerry Faunce after 6 p.m. at 335-8440.

DKG society meets

Thirty-six members of the Alpha Zeta chapter of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society International attended a holiday brunch Sunday, Dec. 12 at the Barnside in Hanover.

President Mary Ellen Curtis of Weymouth gave the welcome. Entertainment was provided by "The Strings," a singing group from Marshfield. The Alpha Zeta chapter collected $206 to be donated to DOVE of Quincy.

Women educators who are members of the chapter may contact the president regarding the upcoming cottage meetings, which will be held in the homes of Mrs. Ruth Fay of Marshfield, Mrs. Elaine French of Cohasset and Mrs. Louise Scott of Hanson.

Cohasset Library story hours

Registrations are currently being accepted for the Winter story hour series at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series will begin Jan. 13 and will last for six weeks. Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. on Thursdays and Fridays. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs and crafts. Children must be at least 3 1/2 to participate.

To register, stop by the Children's Room, or call the children's librarian at 383-1348.
